The George Waldbart Floral Co. has taken a long lease on the store at 514 North Grand avenue, in the Metropolitan building, one door south of the firm's present location. This will give the company three times the floor space at the old place, where it has been for more than twenty-five years. After extensive alterations are completed, this will be a fine florists' establishment, one of the finest in the city. It will be ready by January 1, 1923.

Foster the Florist has moved from 618 Olive street to 722 Locust street, the location formerly occupied by the Mullanphy Florists, who a year ago moved to Eighth and St. Charles streets.

June 8 A. F. Amling and his two sons, Otto and Paul, of Maywood, were in St. Louis to be present at the graduation of Clarence Amling, at the Concordia Seminary. He was graduated as a Lutheran minister. After the exercises the young minister announced his engagement to Miss Pauline Finger, of St. Louis. The wedding is to take place early in the fall. Mrs. W. Amling, mother of W. A. Amling, of Pana, Ill., was also present. During their stay they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Berning.

The members of the Wholesale Florists' Association will start early closing June 17 and will close for business every Saturday at noon for the summer months. The trade should be guided by this announcement.

M. F. Widmer, of the M. F. Widmer Floral Co., Highland, Ill., says that the firm has completed building several new houses and is putting in a new reserve boiler. The stock of this company is handled in the St. Louis market by C. A. Kuehn.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business last week was fairly good, owing to the large number of schools and seminaries holding graduating exercises; this has been responsible for keeping trade at a high level during the last two weeks. Good roses were constantly in demand for presentation bouquets, and many corsages were used by the girls returning home. Columbia, Premier, Russell and Hadley roses were most in demand, at prices that ranged from $4 per hundred for the short-stemmed stock to $25 per hundred for the better grades. Good stock sold readily at all times and the market cleaned up well daily.

Easter lilies are plentiful at this time. They are good in quality and sell at from $8 to $10 per hundred. Gladioli are arriving in heavier supply now and the best of the stock can be had at $8 per hundred.

American Beauty roses are poor, but still they are in demand. Orchids sold well at from $100 to $200 per hundred. Exceptionally fine Cattleya gigas readily brought $200 per hundred. Lily of the valley was in rather large supply.

The stock cleaned up pretty well, however, at $6 to $8 per hundred.

Phlox is just coming in. It is finding a ready sale, because it is one of the best flowers for wedding decorations. Large quantities of Dorothy Perkins ramblers were brought into the market during the last week. A large part of the receipts were shipped to other cities. Ramblers were used extensively in this locality in the many decorations for weddings and commencements.

Florists' Club Meeting.

Members of the Florists' Club, assisted by a large number of lady guests, June 5 held their first meeting in their new quarters in the rooms of the Gavel Club, 719 Thirteenth street, northwest. The housewarming was in the nature of an informal dance, followed by a "singing bee," no more time than absolutely necessary being consumed in transacting the business of the meeting.

George B. Shaffer, Otto Bauer, Adolph Gude and Albert Schnell were responsible for the decoration of the club rooms, and all present agreed that the decorators did an excellent job. Roses, carnations and other flowers were used in connection with palms and ferns, turning the place into a miniature garden.

Following the conclusion of the routine business, Miss Ruth Ayler, Mrs. J. Lester Books and J. H. Paynter entertained the club and its guests with a number of songs, after which the floor was cleared and a couple of hours devoted to dancing. During the evening ice cream, cakes and punch were served; the weather being warm, the refreshment tables were well patronized.

Deciding that it was too warm for dancing, about 11 p. m. chairs were drawn up and the orchestra persuaded to switch from jazz to real music, such as "In the Good Old Summer Time," "Under the Old Apple Tree" and similar favorites, and some time was spent in a good old-time singing bee. Francis F. Hart, assisted by the Sauer brothers, scription of $20 was made by the C. Federle Co., of Hamilton, Ont.

Local florists have arranged to hold an outing on Loughery island July 12. From reports, there will be a 100 per cent attendance, retail men saying that they will close their stores at 9 a. m.

Arrangements have been perfected for the state convention, which is to be held at Cincinnati June 21 and 22.

On invitation of N. Weron, it was decided to hold the next meeting at his place Wednesday, July 5.

Luncheon was served after the meeting. After luncheon, several games of quoits were indulged in.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Last week the flower market was typical of the month of June. Each day quantities of outdoor flowers arrived and the weather was ideal. Good rains have helped stock along in good shape. June is also keeping up its reputation for weddings. Every florist has been busy along this line and some fine decorations have been made. Graduations are also in full swing and many flowers and palms are being used for these occasions. There have been many funerals, which have relieved the congestion of stock. The market has been fairly well cleaned up each day. Summer prices prevail. Roses are reaching us in abundance and are offered at attractive prices in quantity lots to clear.

HENRY SCHEUERMANN, Prop.

The heat last week was unusually intense for this time of the year, and roses have been the first flowers to suffer. There is a large quantity of Easter lilies reaching us, but their market is slow. Carnations continue to be fairly plentiful, but are much smaller in size and do not sell readily. Sweet peas have slowed up considerably and their quality is not good. Good delphiniums are reaching us and move well. Sweet william in a myriad of shades is in big supply. Hardy gypsophila is plentiful and sells well. Snapdragons are seen occasionally. Gaillardias and lupines are in good supply. Coreopsis moves well. Orchids have a steady sale. Peonies are in abundance and the demand is good. Daisies, mignonette, bachelor's buttons, pansies and calendulas are all in good supply.

Various Notes.

The peony show of the Rochester Florists' Association was held at Convention hall, June 12 to 14. Excellent blooms were on display and the exhibition was open to the public.

J. Geller, of the Geller Supply Co., called on the trade last week, and expressed himself as being much pleased with conditions in general in his line of business.

Society, for the best exhibition of rose blooms, all varieties; Hart & Vick, best arranged bowl of cut roses; Mrs. Thomas A. Whittle, most beautiful rose bloom.

East avenue merchants had a 3-day special sale last week, and George F. Boucher, as a special attraction for his window, advertised bridal work in particular, the bouquets being carried by an attractive young lady.

J. W. Vick, of Charlotte, N. Y., put in three of four heavy days last week. Funeral work has been unusually big and the staff found it necessary to work into the early hours of the morning to cope with the situation. H. J. H.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

Trade has been fair. June weddings have helped out considerably, but decoration work for weddings has not been what it should be. There are plenty of outdoor flowers to be had. Sweet peas are to be obtained by the millions. It seems that more were planted this year than ever before, and they are extra fine.

The business of the Memphis Floral Co. was to be sold at private bids May 30, but no bids were offered. It was then decided that the business would be sold at public auction June 14 as a whole.

Trade in bedding plants this season has been extra good, on account of the advertising done.

The Berclair Greenhouses are shipping thousands of gladioli daily to northern markets.

Albert A. Johnson has built a small greenhouse for the growing of bedding plants. His gladioli are fine.

The Cartwright Floral Co. is shipping fancy gladioli. Of these the firm has a large supply, along with a good supply of outdoor flowers.

The trade in vegetable plants for the entire season has amounted to practically nothing.

Seedsmen who attended the convention of the Southern Seedsmen's Association, at New Orleans, report a good time.

The Memphis Seed & Plant Co. is hunting for novelty dahlias to plant in the field.

Notes from Cornell.

The department of floriculture of Cornell University was honored by a visit from the foreign delegates who attended the conference of the F. H. B. W. G. Lobjoit, of England, Dr. Van Slogteren and Dr. Van Poeteren, of Holland, spent the day, May 23, inspecting the various departments of the university. Dr. Van Slogteren lectured to the students in floriculture on bulb culture in Holland. The visitors were entertained at luncheon by Dean Mann and other officials of the College of Agriculture. Louis Sander and Charles Pynaert, of Belgium, stopped over in Ithaca May 31, while en route from Chicago to New York. They seemed intensely interested in methods of instruction as given in an American agricultural col-bloom and the peonies will be at their best next week. The department expects to move the gardens during the summer and fall to a more accessible area, where the soil is better suited for garden flowers.

Letters have been received from Professor A. H. Nehrling announcing his safe arrival in England. He sailed on the Mauretania, May 16.

BALTIMORE, MD.

The Market.

Most of the florists are now beginning to realize that the summer season is at hand, with the consequent lull in business. The retail stores are busy with commencements, weddings and funeral work, but the average sale of flowers has fallen off somewhat. Peonies are gone. Snapdragons are also scarce, although there are still a few good ones to be had. Roses are still good, but the flowers are getting small. Gladioli are reaching the market in fair quantities, the quality being good. A few carnations of fair quality are still on the market. The supply of orchids is limited. There is a good supply of delphiniums and these flowers are quite popular at this time of the year. There is a good supply of valley, although the price is a bit high. A few good outdoor sweet peas help out a bit, but the flowers are unsatisfactory at this season of the year, for they drop quickly. Cornflowers are plentiful. Marguerites are about over with. Myosotis and pansies have run their race too.

The Festival of Lights and Flowers.

On the grounds of the future Episcopal cathedral there is being held a beautiful pageant called the "Festival of Lights and Flowers." Everywhere one walks in the beautiful grounds our great slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is brought to mind. Flowers are the principal actors in this great pageant, and the lights only act as a setting or a help to stage artistically this great scene of beauty. At one end of the grounds there has been erected an altar, with a background of tall cedars. In the center of this altar there is a high screen upon which the lights from the color organ play, and upon which at the close appears a vision of the future Episcopal cathedral of Maryland. When completed, it will be a beautiful structure. Around this great picture there is a border, to represent the frame, composed of twelve hundred Easter lilies. Down the sides of the pathway of flowers leading toward the screen, rustic booths have been erected from which flowers and other articles may be purchased. Thousands of people have visited these grounds and admired the beauty of the scene and each one has left with this thought uppermost in mind, "Say It with Flowers."

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Extremely hot weather last week flooded the market with stock of all kinds. Business was the worst it has been for a long time. In order to move stock, wholesalers were compelled to lower prices drastically; more stock, almost, went to the street men and the rubbish box than was sold. Small growers from neighboring towns sent in their stock, which, added to the regular local supply, created an immense over-supply.

Roses are not particularly good, while carnations are getting smaller daily. Outdoor stock of all kinds was plentiful last week, with an overabundance of delphiniums.

Local peonies are coming in, but the quality is not nearly so good as in the past. All manner of stock is now arriving in quantity, and is moving either slowly or not at all.

Various Notes.

The marriage of T. W. Lisy's daughter to a local doctor here was an event of last week. The bride and groom have left on a honeymoon to Europe.

Fred Witthuhn, with his wife and daughter, will sail June 20 for an extended trip to Europe.

Steve Kubit has left the employ of the wholesale store of the J. M. Gasser Co.; Harold Collister has taken Mr. Kubit's place. W. A. R.

NEWARK, N. J.

A considerable amount of June wedding work is now being done by florists here, and graduation work is beginning also. Flowers are reasonable in price. Peonies are coming into the market in larger quantities than at any time this season, while the quality of the blooms is excellent. Potted plants for transplanting are passing. Hydrangea plants are plentiful and the blooms of these are of good quality.

Harry I. Stein, proprietor of the Terminal Florist, reports a good business, especially in wedding work. R. B. M.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The usual midsummer dullness pervades the market, even though it is still only spring. Intense heat prevails over the entire eastern section of New England. For three days in succession the thermometer has registered about 90 degrees in the shade. Peonies had to be cut twice a day, because they matured so rapidly. The market is flooded with them, and fine large blooms wholesale at $6 per hundred. June weddings are not numerous and funeral work is scarce. Where the cultivator has not been worked weekly, crops are drying up badly, although a good thunder storm would do much to revive vegetation.

For some reason or other hot weather seems to cut down business at least one-half, and this, together with the other reasons stated above, make for one of the duller weeks in the present year. Some of our city florists are carrying a great deal of stock, while others are conservative in their buying, and expect the growers to rush stock to them quickly when orders are received. A.

ROSE CHAFERS COME IN JUNE.

Watch for Them.

About the time of the blooming of many flowers outdoors, long-legged beetles, about one-third of an inch in length, of a light ochre or yellowish brown color, called rose chafers, or "rose bugs," appear in many sections. They come suddenly and some years in vast swarms. In the northern states they come usually toward the middle of June and about two weeks earlier in their southern range. They strip bushes and vines of blooms and foliage, overrunning the garden, vineyard, orchard and nursery. Almost every form of vegetation is devoured.

The beetles do not confine their ravages to any particular part of a plant, but consume alike blooms, leaves and fruit. Small animals, like chickens and rabbits, which sometimes feed on these beetles are often poisoned by a neurotoxin contained in their bodies. In about a month or six weeks from the time of their first arrival, and after they have done a tremendous amount of damage, the beetles disappear as suddenly as they came. A single generation of the species is produced in a year's cycle, and about three weeks is the average duration of life for an individual adult.

Difficult to Combat.

bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture, is one of the most difficult of our insect enemies to combat successfully. If the insects are present in excessive numbers, no thoroughly effective remedy is known. The greatest difficulty encountered is that any application is unsuccessful unless applied almost continuously. Every beetle on a plant may be destroyed by poison one day, but the day following the plant will again be completely covered by the beetles. It is difficult to spray an entire garden so that every bud and bloom will be coated with the poison.

The various compounds of copper, lime, kerosene, pyrethrum, hot water, tobacco and quassia, as well as solutions of hellebore, alum, and many proprietary remedies, have proved ineffectual. Paris green damages the flowers and is only successful when repeatedly applied. Arsenate of lead acts better than other arsenicals, both as a repellent and a poison, but it works slowly and leaves a whitish deposit. Other arsenicals also have disadvantages.

It is possible that a heavy application of arsenate of lead will largely protect ornamental plants that are hardy. This method should be tested by those confronted with this pest. Thorough applications should be made on the first signs of the insect's presence and repeated as found necessary. Regular spraying with arsenicals in vineyards should be part of the routine work, as other grape pests are controlled at the same time.

The old-fashioned remedy of hand-picking is of service when the beetles infest low-growing plants. The beetles may also be jarred from trees or bushes over sheets saturated with kerosene, but these methods are tedious and must be practiced daily in the early morning or towards sundown to be effective.

Netting may be used to cover choice plants, and bagging may sometimes be employed profitably. Bagging of grape clusters for protection against the rose chafer is often practiced and affords protection against other insect pests as well.

All ground that might serve as a breeding place for beetles should be plowed and harrowed in the spring, while the insects are in the delicate pupal stage. In the latitude of northern Ohio the most favorable time for doing this is from about May 25 to June 10.

Remedial practices of any sort should be begun when the insects first appear and continued until they have gone. As there are many wild plants and weeds that the beetles like and that may grow near cultivated ground, the area surrounding the garden should be gone over as well as the garden itself. Oxeye daisies and sumac are especially attractive to rose chafers.

PRUNING ALTHEAS.

In a row of twelve altheas one of the plants is still in the dormant state. I have cut several twigs from it from time to time and the wood seems green, but the leaves fail to sprout. What is the matter with it? F. X. F.—Mich.

Probably the althea has been winter-killed. It is not uncommon for this plant to be killed back, and it often happens that one plant may suffer while the others go unharmed. Prune the affected plant back quite hard, and it will break if there is any life left in it. This applies to all plants of a deciduous nature, which are slow at starting into growth in the spring. Pruning is especially necessary in the case of newly planted stock, and it is always good policy to prune back deciduous stock well at planting time. The larger the tree or shrub the more incumbent it becomes to prune hard. This applies equally to all newly planted hardy roses.

C. W.

REPOTTING RUBBER PLANT.

What is the matter with a rubber plant which is sprouting new roots, but is otherwise dormant? The plant was transplanted into a larger pot last fall, and a slight dressing of bone meal was added to the soil, but the plant has refused to move since. The lower leaves look healthy and are green, but the plant has lost about six of these during the winter.

F. X. F.—Mich.

See to it that the pot has a good drainage. Shake away all the loose soil and repot your plant in fresh loam. Do not use any bone or plant food until the pot is well filled with roots. Possibly you have given the plant an overdose of bone meal. It is most unwise to sprinkle bone meal or any other plant food on the soil of any newly potted plant.

C. W.

KILLING WHITE FLY.

I had been bothered with white fly on Pelargonium Easter Greeting. I sprayed the plants, but this did no good, so I burned all of the plants. The white fly has now migrated to other plants, and I should like to know how to use gas to rid my greenhouses of this pest.

A. G.—Okla.

Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas is the best remedy for white fly, but the gas must be used with great care, this gas being extremely dangerous, and in warm weather the possibilities of injury are always greater than when the temperature is moderately low. Used with due care, it is perfectly safe and a great number of growers now depend upon it entirely. Make inquiries of your state college and ascertain if you can secure a permit to purchase cyanide to be used for greenhouse fumigation. An exposure of thirty minutes will suffice, if the mixture is made strong, but in this case it will be necessary for you to devise some means of opening the ventilators from the outside. If you prefer a weaker mixture, you can subject the plants to an all-night exposure. If you have not preserved the issue of The Review in which instructions for the use of hydrocyanic acid gas were given some months ago, send for a reprint of the pages.

CUTWORMS ON GLADIOLI.

Let me know how to rid gladioli of caterpillars and other chewing insects.
A. J. L.—Mo.

Cutworms, which are soft-bodied caterpillars, are apt to do much damage by cutting off the tops of choice gladioli. To get rid of them, use a poisoned mash of fresh shorts, molasses, Paris green and lemon juice. Mix in the following proportions: Twenty pounds of fresh shorts, or bran, ten quarts of thin molasses, one pound Paris green, juice of three lemons and three and one-half gallons of water. First mix the bran and Paris green dry. Squeeze the juice of the lemons into water and cut the pulp fine; then add gradually to and mix well with the bran and Paris green.

Scatter this in little patches all over the soil covered by your plants, preferably in the evening, as cutworms work at night. Keep chickens and ducks away from the patch. Continue this method and it will clean out the cutworms.

at a new low price. The last printing was sold out at $48.00 the set of 6 volumes—a very reasonable price considering war-time costs of printing. Now a new printing has been made and the publishers authorize The Review to give its readers the benefit of the saving made in present competitive conditions in the book-making trades in the East. This means a new price of $40.00 per set for the CYCLOPEDIA—a saving of $8.00 per set.

Send Your Orders Now—Delivery by First Express, Prepaid

REMEMBER—BAILEY'S STANDARD CYCLOPEDIA OF HORTICULTURE is in 6 large volumes, over 3,000 pages. It is authority in all matters of plant names and spellings. Besides the purely botanical matter one would expect to find in such a work, there are many hundreds of cultural articles, chapters on insects, diseases, remedies, etc.—a veritable horticultural library, all carefully and completely indexed.

SEATTLE NOTES.

from a flower shop instead of the china or department store if it is given an opportunity. The run of general decorations has been holding up well.

Frank E. Scrivnac, representing the United States Foil Co., has been calling on the western Washington trade during the last few weeks.

Melby's Flower Shop has enjoyed a good general run of business, with roses one of the most popular items at the present time.

Felix Rosaia has been moving large quantities of seasonable flowers through effective window displays of late, and this shop has been showing some of the finest Columbia roses seen on the market this year.

Eugene Lambie, of McCoy's, was a recent visitor at the Beall Greenhouses on Vashon island. General business has held up well, and there has been a satisfactory total for funeral work.

The Art Floral Co. has one of the shops that have especially benefited by the continued demand for bedding stock; its location is ideal for securing this type of business.

P. F. Rosaia, of Rosaia Bros., left the day following Memorial day on a three weeks' motor trip to California, combining business and pleasure.

Decorations for the first large wedding of this season were handled by the Hollywood Gardens last week. From this time on, business of this type promises to be heavier.

Rosaia Bros. report that the supply of poinsettias for the coming holidays is being put in at the greenhouses, over 3,000 plants being set out this year. Only red stock is being handled this time, the demand for white and pink offerings having been too light in previous seasons.

Irving Harris has been moving large quantities of small potted geraniums at the Bon Marche Flower Shop, this stock especially appealing to the store buyers.

The Orpheum Floral Co. has been making a display in front of the store of hanging baskets, with good results. This shop has been showing fine gladioli; a large stone vase of these has been made the centerpiece of the recent window displays.

The growers' association held a meeting at Meve's cafeteria Saturday, June 10, at which matters of general interest to the wholesale grower came up for discussion.

The induction into office of E. J. Brown as mayor proved a source of extra business for the City Flower Shop, the incoming executive receiving a large number of floral baskets in honor of this event. The fact that two women council "men" also took office led to a larger demand than usual for flowers.

The B. E. Hammond Co. reports a good summer demand on certain lines from nearby florists, and has been doing a much larger business in general supplies. Further expansion of lines in this direction is planned by the wholesale house.

Considerable interest was aroused among growers by the second annual rose show of the Kitsap County Rose Society, held at Bremerton, Friday, June 9, several sending entries for the event. Some attractive prizes were offered. H. M.

Increase your sales

ONE important detail of your business has an important bearing on increased sales. It is the containers in which cut flowers are displayed. Discriminating florists now use "Fibrotta" Vases. They look like polished mahogany but are inexpensive. Water stays cool in them a long time. They do not chill the water when placed in your refrigerator, since they are non-conductors of heat and cold. Write Cordley & Hayes, 14 Leonard Street, New York, for details.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the demise of G. V. Van Zanten, oldest partner of Van Zanten Bros., Hillegom, Holland, is made on the obituary page of this issue.

THE 1922 production of crimson clover seed is expected to be larger than last year's small crop, although it will not approach the heavy production of 1918 and 1919, according to reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture.

ON his way to visit relatives in Philadelphia, E. Malis, proprietor of the Santa Barbara Seed Co., Santa Barbara, Cal., stopped in Chicago June 12. Previously engaged in the landscape architects' profession, Mr. Malis opened a seed store four years ago and has been adding to its lines and to its business ever since.

ALTHOUGH the world war stimulated the production of most kinds of vegetable and field seeds, it had a deterrent effect upon the production of other kinds commonly exported from this country, such as timothy, redtop, meadow fescue and Kentucky bluegrass. High hay prices, increased acreages of food crops and limited demand for seeds of grass crops from European countries, among other factors, resulted in the cutting of a smaller acreage of the grasses for seed purposes during the war.

THE pea crop is unusually backward in both New York and Wisconsin. One canner reports that usually farmers start their planting the first and second week in April, but it was May 1 before any seed was put in the ground. Even then the work could not be done continuously. April 25 in one district a heavy snow fell. A Wisconsin posting is to the effect that planting was three to four weeks late, as the entire state experienced cold weather in March and April. Whereas planting often is done by March 25, it was April 24 this year before it was started. Many canners will not be able to get in all of their contracted acreage, while others have rushed in a large planting, which will result in a heavy yield all at once unless the summer is cool, allowing a slower growth.

REDUCED RATE TO CHICAGO.

A reduction to one and one-half fare for the round trip on the certificate plan will apply for members, as well as dependent members of their families, attending the meetings of the American Seed Trade Association, the Association of Official Seed Analysts and the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association, at Chicago, June 21 to 23.

The following directions are submitted:

Tickets at the normal 1-way tariff fare for the going journey may be bought on any of the following dates, but not on any other date: June 17 to 23.

Be sure when purchasing your going ticket to ask the ticket agent for a certificate. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. If, however, it is impossible to get a certificate from the local ticket agent, a receipt will be satisfactory and should be secured when the ticket is purchased. See that the ticket reads to the point where the convention is to be held and no other. See that your certificate is stamped with the same date as your ticket. Sign your name to the certificate or receipt in ink. Show this to the ticket agent.

tificate at least thirty minutes before departure of train.

Certificates are not kept at all stations. Ask your home station whether you can procure certificates and through tickets to the place of meeting; if not, buy a local ticket to nearest point where a certificate and through ticket to place of meeting can be bought.

Immediately on your arrival at the meeting, present your certificate to the endorsing officer, C. E. Kendel, as the reduced fare for the return journey will not apply unless you are properly identified as provided for by the certificate.

A joint agent of the carriers will be in attendance June 21 to 23 to validate certificates. If you arrive at the meeting and leave for home prior to the arrival of the joint agent or if you arrive at the meeting after the joint agent has gone, you cannot have your certificate validated nor secure the benefit of the return reduction.

No refund of fare will be made on account of failure either to obtain a proper certificate, or on account of failure to have the certificate validated.

It must be understood that the reduction for the return journey is not guaranteed, but is contingent on an attendance of not less than 250 members of the organization and dependent members of their families at the meeting holding regularly issued certificates from ticket agents at starting points showing payment of normal 1-way tariff of not less than 67 cents on the going trip.

If the necessary minimum of 250 regularly issued certificates is presented to the joint agent and your certificate is validated, you will be entitled to a return ticket via the same route as the going journey at one-half of the normal 1-way tariff fare from place of meeting to point at which your certificate was issued up to and including June 27.

Return tickets issued at the reduced fare will not be good on any limited train on which such reduced fare transportation is not honored.

IOWA SEED DEALERS MEET.

The annual meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association was held at the Savery hotel, Des Moines, Ia., June 7. After the usual business was carried out, Professor L. C. Burnett, of the farm crops department of Iowa State College, gave an interesting talk on subjects of importance to farmers and seed dealers. E. L. Redfern, of the Iowa food and dairy commission, gave a talk on the new Iowa seed law, which was followed by a general discussion of the subject. Mr. Redfern complimented the seed dealers of Iowa for the manner in which they were endeavoring to comply not only with the letter of the law, but the spirit of the law as well. The seed dealers in turn were gratified to have the coöperation of Mr. Redfern in regard to the matter.

A luncheon was served at noon in the Chamber of Commerce dining room.

Five new firms were admitted to membership; namely, J. Rosenbaum & Son, Williamsburg, Ia.; Dehner Seed & Supply Co., Burlington, Ia.; American Horticulture Co., Des Moines, Ia.; Haley-Neeley Co., Sioux City, Ia.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, H. W. Talbott, Talbott Grain Co., Osceola, Ia.; vice-president, Henry Kling, Hamilton Seed & Coal Co., Cedar Rapids, Ia.; secretary, A. M. Eldridge, Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia.; treasurer, J. T. Hoffer, Hoffer Seed Co., Nora Springs, Ia.

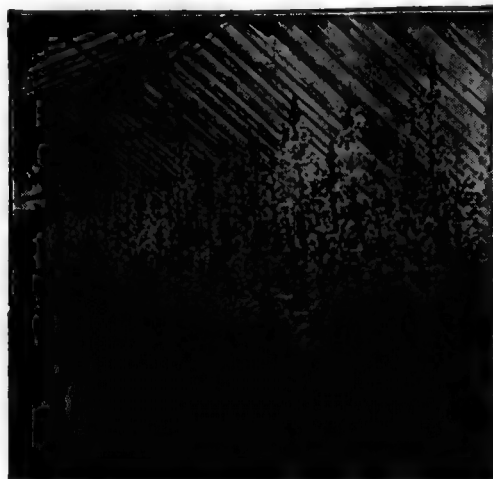

The meeting of the association in September will be called to order on the college grounds at Ames, Ia., and the members are looking forward to much pleasure at that time.

A. M. Eldridge, Sec'y.

TEACHES SEED TESTING.

Persons interested in learning the approved methods of testing commercial seeds are offered the facilities of the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington, without charge. Although the department does not pretend to conduct a seed school with outlined courses and classes, it has for a number of years permitted a few people to study in the government seed-testing

SNAPDRAGON

Snapdragons have moved into first place with all wide-awake florists and are earning growers more money than any flower in cultivation. This is especially true among growers with a retail outlet. Splendid blooms may be had any month in the year, with a bumper crop over the three great flower days, Easter, Mothers' Day, and Memorial, extending throughout June graduations.

Snapdragons are easy to grow and good seed may be had at such small cost that there is no excuse for having inferior stock. Producing snapdragon seed is our one business and the ever increasing orders show how well we attend to it. Years of experience and our reputation are back of every packet of seed. See complete list below. First comes our business through the critical world war period. Helen is a stately variety, medium tall, early and very prolific. We have never had so many pleasing comments by visitors and many advance orders have been placed. This variety will please the most exacting and should be in every collection. Note low price.

A NEW ONE: We are happy to announce a new addition to our snapdragon family and introduce "HELEN," a gorgeous, delicate salmon, named for a daughter who graciously assisted in bringing

Those who have taken advantage of the opportunity in past years have been in most instances the sons of seedsmen or young men and women sent out by seed companies to learn the best methods that have been developed. These students become familiar with crop seeds, seed adulterants, weed seeds and other foreign materials frequently found in commercial seeds. They are shown also how to make detailed analyses for purity and how to

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy Seed

- No. 12. KENILWORTH GIANT PRIZE. I have improved this strain by selecting and saving seed from the best shaped flowers of the most gorgeous color for many years. It is of the blocked Masterpiece type. The plants distinguish themselves by their robust growth and healthy-looking foliage; they are deep rooted and stand the hot, dry weather better than most other varieties. The large flowers on long, thick stems are carried well above the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size and of good substance. The petals are exceedingly broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double. The border of each petal being conspicuously undulated and curled, the gorgeous and varied colored blossoms of velvety texture, perfect form and giant size, frequently measuring 3½ inches in diameter; the ground color such as yellow, white, deep orange, mahogany brown, bronze blue, and endless variations. Most petals are beautifully marked with a large blotch, a few are self-colored. They are specially fine for planting under glass or outside for cut flowers at all seasons. Trade pkt., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.35; ½ oz., $2.60; 1 oz., $5.00; 4 oz., $35.00.
- 10 KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of the best varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivaled mixture. Trade pkt., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.35; ½ oz., $2.60; 1 oz., $5.00; 4 oz., $35.00.
19. TRIMARDEAU GIANT PANSY, improved; it is far superior to the ordinary run of Trimardeau that is sold. It is a very showy class of vigorous, compact growth. Flowers of enormous size in all the self colors, blocked, striped, margined, etc. It is very doubtful if any other pansy will give as good satisfaction as the improved Trimardeau for all general purposes. Trade pkt., 35c; ¼ oz., 75c; ½ oz., $1.35; 1 oz., $2.60; 4 oz., $18.00.
20. PRINCESS, the New Upright Pansy. This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems, carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; 1 oz., $3.10; 4 oz., $21.50.
22. GIANT KENILWORTH STRAIN. The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are 3-inch. It is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, medium or dark mixtures. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; 1 oz., $3.10; 4 oz., $21.50.
- 24 GIANT KENILWORTH SHOW is undoubtedly the largest flowered Pansy in the world; the immense flowers are of circular form. A beautiful collection of colors and markings. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; 1 oz., $3.80; 4 oz., $27.00.
26. GIANT KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 6 or 7 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; 1 oz., $3.80; 4 oz., $27.00.

- No. 28. GIANT MASTERPIECE. A remarkable type, the curled wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance; large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; 1 oz., $3.80; 4 oz., $27.00.
30. GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES. A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich, velvety colors; reds are particularly conspicuous, the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large, dark blotches. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; 1 oz., $3.10; 4 oz., $21.50.
32. GIANT PARISIAN. The flowers are of enormous size and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground; an unusually showy mixture. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; 1 oz., $3.10; 4 oz., $21.50.
34. GIANT BRONZE. A fine mixture of all shades of velvety brown bronze, Havana brown, mahogany and copper shades. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; 1 oz., $3.10; 4 oz., $21.50.
36. TRIUMPH OF GIANT. Remarkably beautiful. The imposing five-spotted flowers on long, vigorous stalks surmount the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size, perfectly round and of unusual substance. The individual petals are very broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double, the border of every petal being conspicuously curled. The plants are of a robust growth and form compact bushes of a round shape. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; 1 oz., $3.10; 4 oz., $21.50.
40. GIANT BATH'S EMPRESS. The finest of fancy English Pansies. Flowers are very large, mostly frilled and blotched and of great substance and the colors are brilliant and varied. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; 1 oz., $3.80; 4 oz., $27.00.
70. ORCHID-FLOWERED, Mixed. A dwarf, free bloomer, with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other Pansies; a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, bluish mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamois. Trade pkt., 35c; ¼ oz., 75c; ½ oz., $1.35; 1 oz., $2.60; 4 oz., $18.00.

New Early Flowering Giant Pansies

They are three to four weeks earlier than other Pansies, in coldframes or field; they have four or five large blossoms, when other Pansies planted at the same time are only showing bud. The richly colored, large, well formed flowers, on long, stiff stems, are very fragrant.

Free Offer of Kenilworth Grown Pansy Seed THE BONUS MIXTURE

I have a surplus of the four best selling varieties due to the unusually good season for growing Pansy Seed. I will give it as a bonus with all orders for Pansy Seed at the rate of 1,000 seeds for every dollar's worth of seed and with other amounts in like proportion.

THIS IS A TIP-TOP MIXTURE and is sure to please YOU. It is made up of KENILWORTH SHOW, the largest pansy grown; GIANT MASTERPIECE with curled and wavy petals; GIANT THREE AND FOUR BLOTCHED, and the GIANT BRONZE mixture, a fine mixture of all shades of bronze, brown, Havana brown, mahogany and copper shades. THIS OFFER HOLDS GOOD AS LONG AS I HAVE A SURPLUS OF THE ABOVE VARIETIES.

the peculiarities of his business, he is given aid in solving it. The department welcomes the opportunity to give those who know the commercial side of the seed business additional knowledge of its technical aspects.

Persons who contemplate taking up this work this season should plan, if possible, to start about July 1.

SWEET PEAS AT MORSE'S.

From the seed ranch headquarters of C. C. Morse & Co., at San Juan Bautista, Cal., George J. Ball, Glen Ellyn, writes: "You can imagine I am having an interesting time here, looking over a 3,000-acre seed farm, of which every square foot is clean and every plant well bred. The sweet peas look unusually strong here this year. They are near the coast, where it is quite cool and green fly does not trouble them. I have never seen such big, long-stemmed flowers as there are here by the million."

From San Juan Bautista, Mr. Ball went to Guadalupe, to visit the seed farms of the L. D. Waller Seed Co. So enthusiastic is Mr. Ball over what he had seen up to the time of writing that he says: "This trip will certainly be an annual affair with me. Life is more than worth living out here."

NEARLY A HALF CENTURY.

R. A. Van Der Schoot is known among American buyers of Dutch bulbs as well as among the English. They will be interested in reading the following of the veteran, clipped from the Horticultural Trade Journal, of London: "Forty-seven years is a long period in the life of a business man; forty-seven annual visits to our country by a Dutch bulb grower is surely a good record. Perhaps few who noticed R. A. Van Der Schoot, of Hillegom, Holland, at the Chelsea show realized that he holds the unique distinction of visiting England over a period of forty-seven successive years. R. A. Van Der Schoot 'the man you know,' made his first trip at the age of 16 years; he is now 63, looks fit and strong, and hopes to make up the half century. He is now assisted by two of his sons, C. G. and W. F. Van Der Schoot, both of whom are traveling in England."

SEED CONDITIONS IN FRANCE.

Reporting on the seed crops in France, the bulletin of Joseph Paquet says: "The frosts of April have been prejudicial to beets, carrots, celery and lettuce. Beets and carrots have suffered much, but lettuce has suffered more and the crop will be reduced. Of chervil one may rely upon an ordinary crop. Of spinach, according to appearances, the crop will be good. In Italy, the crops of all the sorts will be smaller than the crops of last year, especially of onion, cauliflower and cucumber."

"The April weather on the Cote d'Azur has been cold and unfavorable to the plants; that will reduce and delay the crops."

As to flower seeds, the bulletin says: "Primula obconica, which produced great enough quantities of seeds in March, have given small crops in April. The principal crop will take place in May and June only. In France flowers have not suffered much from the bad weather of April, except in places where nestly the end of the present situation, which is principally caused by the resistance of Germany to fulfill the clauses of the Versailles treaty. The 1921-22 season is nearly finished, and we do not think it ends with important stocks of old seeds. The purchases made by the government of the Russian Soviets have cleared the market."

THE SEED TRADE AND THE STATE.

Their Coördinating Relations.

The seed trade and the state have been comparative strangers until recently, but these two organizations will hereafter be on sufficiently friendly terms to come to an understanding before they come to blows. It has been the fixed policy of the commissioner and board of agriculture so to execute the North Carolina state seed law as to protect both farmers and seedsmen and to enlighten these parties regarding their several liabilities to each other.

In considering the crop, a better idea of the relative importance of a perfect stand can be had by a simple calculation of the possible yield of corn from an acre on which each hill of corn produces a good stalk with a good ear. A piece of land 210 feet square contains about one acre. If the corn is planted eighteen inches apart and in rows three feet apart, there will be 9,800 hills to the acre. If each hill produces a stalk with a good ear, there will be 9,800 good ears to the acre. There are a number of causes that may operate to reduce the stand to one-half or two-thirds normal, but among the leading causes must be reckoned that of poor seeds that either fail to sprout, or, sprouting, fail to come up and grow into a vigorous stalk capable of producing a good, well matured ear. Suppose the seed corn planted had forty grains out of every hundred that would not come up, or that the seed corn showed only sixty per cent germination. This low germination would at once reduce the stand from 9,800 to 5,880 hills to the acre, and thus reduce the yield from a possible ninety-eight bushels to an actual fifty-nine bushels.

Seed corn is often damaged in only a slight degree and will, under favorable conditions, sprout and send the first leaves above ground. But every farmer has seen the yellow, spindling, unthrifty corn plant that never amounts to anything. Add to the loss of stand caused by poor seed, the losses caused by cut worms, bud worms, birds and accidents, and the effective stand is reduced to fifty per cent or less, with the consequent reduction in yield. Every corn grower knows the "replant" is worth little except for forage.

Vitality, Development and Maturity.

Not only is the crop yield frequently reduced by an imperfect stand, due to dead seed or seed of low vitality, but the development and growth of the plant and the normal maturity of the crop are also affected by the use of seed of low germinating power. A careful examination of a field of wheat, for example, when the crop is first coming up, will generally reveal plantlets of different degrees of growth, and this difference is generally maintained throughout the development and maturity of the crop. Retardation due to weed growth cannot be ignored.

When the farmer pays the seedsman $25 for a bushel of clover seed that contains twenty per cent of weed seeds and sows these seeds without recleaning them, he loses a vast deal more than the $5 cash paid for the weed seeds. In a field sown to such unclean seed the owner is likely to find all the noxious weeds.

From what has been said, it is evident that the farmer's first interest, in the process of securing a normal crop yield, is to know precisely what kind of seeds he is about to plant; whether they are pure, sound, well matured and viable.

It is always wise to test seeds before planting them, and, in most cases, the farmers should have all commercial seeds examined for purity and germination by the state laboratory before purchasing. The farmer should always require the seeds he buys from seedsmen to be sold under a guarantee of purity and germination, and see that they are properly tagged to show the percentage of purity and germination, and the date the ger-

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

GEORGE F. VERHALEN, of the Verhalen Nursery Co., Scottsville, Tex., stopped in Chicago this week on his way home after a tour of the nursery centers, including Rochester, N. Y., Bridgeton, N. J., and Painesville, O., following his attendance at the quarantine conference at Washington. In Chicago he met his father, S. J. Verhalen, embarking on a sales trip to conclude with the A. A. N. convention at Detroit.

CALIFORNIANS CONVENE.

President Barnicott Speaks.

"For business, pleasure and the discussion of problems of mutual interest," members of the California Association of Nurserymen assembled at the twelfth annual convention of the organization, which was held at Sacramento June 1 to 4. During the business sessions many good talks were heard. In his address President J. W. Barnicott said, in opening the convention:

"I am not going to burden my hearers with statistics relative to the magnitude of our industry; suffice it to say that our ornamentals are being shipped by carloads to eastern markets; our flowers are going to the farthest outposts of the American continent, and our fruits are finding their way to the uttermost parts of the earth.

"It is fitting, indeed, that this convention should meet in the springtime, for as the grain is ripe for the sickle and the fruit is giving its promise of a bountiful harvest, so the hopes and aspirations of this association during the last few years are being brought to their full fruition.

"Never in the history of our organization was it more necessary to keep step in the march of events. The California Association of Nurserymen must be the dominant factor in California horticulture. Realizing this, your executive committee a few months ago secured the services of a permanent secretary, Chancellor K. Grady, who devotes his entire time to the work of this association.

"This was the outcome of the Fresno convention, which created a budget to provide the necessary funds for this work. I do urge upon all the members of this association their duty of subscribing to the sustaining fund. This is your work; questions of vital importance confront our industry, and we must have your support.

"We are ready to take our place among the other great associations of this state, but it is imperative that we have the financial support of every nurseryman, florist, seedsman and landscape engineer. The old scriptural text was never truer than today: 'For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.' Support the work of your organization financially and you will support it in every other way."

Recommendations.

President Barnicott recommended that the executive committee be increased by the addition of two members, a seedsman and a florist. He said it was essential that every branch of the industry should be represented on this committee. He also recommended the election of at least a part of the executive committee to serve for another year. He said this last had been a short term, practically six months only. The committee, he said, had just started policies with the new secretary, with which the committee alone was conversant.

NEW SALES PLAN ADOPTED.

Nurserymen to Collect Part Cash.

At the meeting of the Western Nurserymen's Association last January a resolution was adopted to the effect that the association would go on record as recommending to its members that they give thorough trial to the plan of collecting a portion of cash at the time the order is taken and allow the customers a premium of a certain per cent of the advance in cash, the premium to be of nursery stock. It was further resolved that each firm offer some prize to the salesman who collects the most cash on this plan, the salesmen to give bond for all money handled.

A committee was appointed to investigate and work out a plan that would be suitable for the purpose. The committee met in Kansas City February 24, and worked out in detail the various aspects of the plan and have outlined recommendations for the consideration of the members of the Western Association of Nurserymen. In order to have a good, workable organization, the committee's first recommendation is that all nurserymen should adopt the plan and all the retail nurserymen follow the same general policy—a policy which has been tried out successfully for several years by a number of individual nurserymen.

The plan as worked out by the committee is to the effect that a ten per cent premium is offered to customers who make a deposit on their orders. This ten per cent of the amount paid down—that is, customer's check made payable to the nursery firm at time order is taken—is to be used by the customer, who selects trees, shrubs, plants, etc., to this amount from a list which each nursery will select. If the customer's order amounts to $100 and the customer pays $20 in advance, his extra premium will be ten per cent of the $20, or $2. The customer must always make selection from this special premium list. It is, however, important that all nurseries should allow the ten per cent premium plan. If the percentage is larger in some cases and smaller in others, a bad practice will be started, which will result in an unprofitable business. If the ten per cent is allowed by everyone, the practice will soon become standardized, and it will be recognized by the buying public.

To remove all suspicion of untrustworthiness of the salesmen, these men would be required under the new plan to give a surety bond. The committee received a special ruling from one of the largest and best known of the national surety companies, which solves one of the biggest problems which confronted the committee.

The plan of collecting cash at time orders are taken will be not only a big advantage to the salesmen, in pres-cept orders more readily if they have already paid part cash, and they will be better pleased with their stock, for they will not try to find excuses that will enable them to refuse the order. If a customer has agreed to pay for his order on delivery and has made a cash deposit, he must live up to his contract or he will forfeit the cash deposit. If no cash has been paid, he can refuse to accept the trees and the nurseryman either has to take the loss or go to the local courts, which is expensive and unsatisfactory. The customer who has paid part cash for the order has an interest in that order and he will come out on time for it. If a customer has paid part cash down, the nurseryman has a leverage to keep him from canceling his order.

Due to the slow turn-over of the nursery business, once a year, most nurserymen have to finance their business from June 1 until the following June and depend upon the coming year's business to pay their bills. All is well if deliveries and collections are good. All is wrong if these are not good. Therefore, by receiving a certain portion of the purchase price of the stock when the order is received, the nurseryman has a reasonable assurance of receiving the remainder at delivery. The possibility of having "left-on-hand" orders at delivery time is done away with. The extra money received from the part cash payment gives the firm additional capital with which to enlarge its business. The firm will not have as much interest to pay on borrowed capital under this plan.

Advantages to Salesmen.

The salesmen will make more money, because under this plan there will be less rejects and countermands, and the firm can afford to give the salesmen more money in the way of bonuses. Greater confidence in the salesman is instilled in the customer when it becomes known to him that the salesman is under bond. With a decrease in losses there will be a proportionate decrease in the price of the stock and a consequent increase in the number of orders taken. The salesman has an effective sales talk. He can never make a customer own up to the fact that the customer is not following a good business policy; that is, taking advantage of the discounts offered him by the firms

PRIMULAS As Cut Flowers

By using our December-sown stock, you can have the Primula Obconica commence blooming in September, and in full bloom by November, which the later sown stock will not do, as they are not old enough. A half dozen more flowers per plant used as cut flowers, just adds that much more profit and still leaves a salable plant and they are a cut flower that lasts.

This Illustration Shows a Basket of Cut Flowers

Get your plants now from December-sown stock, grow them on in pots or, better, plant them out; the results will surprise you, they will average just double as much.

from which he buys his stock. The customer knows that a merchant who does not discount his bills is looked upon with suspicion by his banker as well as the wholesaler, because the merchant is permitting a good profit to be lost.

Advantages to Customer.

By making a cash deposit the customer is benefited also. In addition to a number of other benefits, he receives valuable stock free of charge. In other words, the customer saves ten per cent, because he gets ten per cent of his money paid in advance in extra trees and plants. If the customer makes an advance payment of $20, he gets ten per cent of this advance payment in extra stock. If the advance payment is made three months before time for delivery, this stock received represents forty per cent interest on the cash advance paid. The customer will in this way be able to buy his trees cheaper, because the nurseryman will be dealing with a higher type of customer, who is sure to pay his bills on time. The "bad debts" item is to some extent eliminated and the good customer will not be required to pay the debts of the bad customer. Above all, the customer is protected from dishonesty and fraud through unscrupulous tree dealers and agents.

Presenting Plan.

The salesman should be specific in presenting the plan to the customer. Experience has shown that salesmen can best arouse the interest of the customer by keeping in mind some specific tree, shrub or plant which will appeal to the customer as a bonus. This is better than just making the mere statement that extra nursery stock will be given as a bonus. The salesman, from his list of premium stock, can allow the customer to select what he prefers. The following is a letter given by the principal to the agent, more satisfactorily to establish the agent's identity and to show the customer that the agent is working in good faith when asking for a deposit on the order:

You are hereby instructed to collect at least twenty-five per cent of the face value of each order at time of taking such order. As a bonus for part payment in advance, the customer is to receive ten per cent of the amount paid in cash in the form of additional nursery stock. The customer will thus receive a very large return for his money and should have no hesitation

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

HEATING ONE HOUSE.

I have one greenhouse 39x150 feet. The distance to the ridge pole is twenty feet. The house is divided into three sections and the section on the west end is to be kept at 55 degrees when the outside temperature goes to 20 degrees below zero, while the other two sections are to be kept at 45 degrees. I am using a low-pressure steam boiler and employ a night fireman. The house is exposed on all sides, standing on a hill. It is necessary for us to remove all of our old pipes, as they are rusted through. How much radiation will this house require? What make of pipe do you recommend? Is Byer's malleable pipe worth the difference in price?

A. F. H.—Ia.

The sketch shows that the ends of the house are rounded, and that the walls are six feet high, with three feet of glass. It is inferred that there are doors at each end and at the middle of the sides of the house. The middle room will require about 300 square feet of radiation in addition to the mains. This may be supplied by means of four coils twenty feet long, each consisting of seven 1½-inch pipes. In the west house each coil should contain twelve pipes.

The main flow should be a 3-inch pipe. The coils on the south side of the middle house may be supplied by a 2-inch main carried under ground. The other coils may be connected to 2½-inch flows, carried on the plates in either direction around to the ends of the houses.

SIZE OF HEATER NEEDED.

Will you please tell me the size of water heater which would be needed in order to heat a greenhouse 25x50 feet in size and containing 2,000 square feet of glass? On one side there is a cement wall four feet high and on the other three sides there are cement walls three feet high. I desire to heat the house to a temperature of 50 degrees when there is an outside temperature of 20 degrees below zero. What size of pipe would be best to use, considering the fact that I plan to make an addition of about fifty feet later on?

C. A. P.—Me.

For the house described it would be advisable to use a hot water heater rated at about 950 square feet of radiation and with a grate about twenty-five inches in diameter. However, if it is to be doubled in size within two or three years, it will be advisable to install at this time a heater which will be able to handle the house after it is enlarged. This will mean a heater rated at about 1,700 square feet of radiation.

For the radiating surface, which will

One or Many?

Which will give better service—a furnace lining made up of many bricks bonded together, or one of a refractory material that is molded into shape when plastic, forming a one-piece, jointless lining?

The latter, most certainly, everywhere known as PLIBRICO is easily applied; it has no joints where disintegration may start; it is unaffected by heat up to 3100° F.; it outlasts laid-up fire brick from two to four times; it permits the production of more power at less fuel expense; it lessens labor expense. In a word, PLIBRICO meets the present-day need for a furnace lining that endures.

Don't you want to know more about PLIBRICO? Send for our book, D-67, on "Modern Furnace Building," and ask to have our nearest representative call.

not require any change when the house is enlarged, it would be advisable to use five 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one under the ridge, one under each side wall plate and the other two on the purlin posts. There should be five coils, each containing three 2-inch return pipes.

The main supply pipe, with which the flows are connected, should be a 5-inch pipe, or two 4-inch pipes may be used. The main return pipe or pipes should be of the same size. Run the flows and the returns downhill and connect the expansion tank with the highest part of the system. R.

a mass of flowers in Shriner colors. Masses of broom are already installed. The store is featuring eccentric dolls.

The staff of Podesta & Baldocchi, with wives, children and fiancées, will be fifty strong at the florists' picnic. Many of the men who work for this firm are musical. George Ventura, of the staff, will leave next week for the Russian river, where he will play the banjo for a jazz orchestra for a period of two months. Dan Bacigalupi, who comes from Calaveras county, is going to visit home, to congratulate his friends on winning highest honors in the '49' celebration.

J. W. Keegan, who has been with Pelicano, Rossi & Co. for a number of years, is going south for his annual vacation.

Brown & Kennedy are making up a big party, consisting of the staff and friends, to attend the florists' picnic at Fairfax park in a body.

F. C. Jaeger & Son are featuring Shriner decorations.

The Suzanne Floral Co. reports a number of orders for banquets at various hotels, to be given in honor of visiting Shriners. John Tait, of restaurant fame, is opening what he calls a coffee shop de luxe, on Ellis street, and the Suzanne florists are busy with good luck pieces and decorations for the opening.

Avansino Bros & Co. have had a wedding a day for the last two weeks, which looks as if the June bride were coming into her own.

Yukichi Noda, of the Growers' Floral Co., reports that the firm is cutting a good crop of everlasting flowers, statice, helichrysum and gypsophila, and that orders are brisk in all these lines.

Enomoto & Co. have just received shipments from Japan of bamboo canes of all sizes, frieze and frieze bells.

Domoto Bros. are handling crops of fine peonies, which have been shipped from Ukiah, Mendocino county, Cal.

The United Flower & Supply Co. is handling and drying large crops of everlastings. I. Inoue, the manager, is visiting growers at San Mateo and other down-peninsula points. M. M.

King GREENHOUSES

42-Foot House Built for Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass.

“—of course we will have King Construction”

Six years ago a King Iron Pipe Frame house, 42 x 200, was built for a prominent New England florist. That florist watched every detail of construction, the quality of material and was so pleased that in January, 1917, he wrote: “We are naturally proud of this house and pleased with the treatment accorded us by your firm and we thoroughly appreciate the care exercised in all the details of construction. We hope to have this house continued sometime and, of course, will have King Construction.”

In January, 1922, he wrote: “Enclosed is signed contract for one King Iron Pipe Frame Greenhouse 42 x 150 feet. In 1916 you erected the same style house. It has proved so satisfactory that I will extend same to 350 feet.” in paying all or at least twenty-five per cent of his order.

You, too, can be just as well pleased if your next house is of “King Construction.”

Be fair to yourself—get the facts about King houses.

When you think of good greenhouses, think of KING.

You are under bond and this letter confirms instructions already given you to collect money in advance on orders. If customer prefers, he can make remittance direct to us and secure the bonus nursery stock. He will find that we have a splendid rating in Dun's and Bradstreet's and we can also refer him to our local bank.

Almost all of your customers are familiar with the fact that we have carried on the practice of collecting deposits with orders during the past several years. Furthermore, they know that this is the practice in many other established lines of industry. Consequently, your customers will not hesitate to take advantage of the generous bonus offer we make them for the payment of cash at time you take orders.

The customer can hand his check to the salesman, made payable to the principal, or he can mail it to the principal himself, if he so desires. If the customer is still unconvinced that he should make a deposit on the order, the order can be taken without the deposit, and the salesman can leave a card with the customer, explaining to him the advantages to be obtained by making the deposit on the order. All refunds and advances on sales can be made direct through the office of the firm, and the salesman would receive his credit accordingly. A good plan for the firm to follow would be to mail a card to the customer stating the amount of the order, the amount of the deposit paid, etc. This would be a check on the salesman, who would be required to send in all orders promptly.

Premium to Salesman.

The salesman could be given premiums for collecting the most money as an incentive to give the plan a thorough trial. The salesman will soon recognize that the amount of money he collects will act as a barometer as to his worth to the firm and will induce him to make as good a showing as possible. If the salesman is on a twenty-five per cent commission contract, all payable at time orders are taken, or if he is on a straight salary, it is suggested by the committee that a three per cent bonus of all cash collected in advance be paid him each week on the amount of cash collected in advance for that particular week. This will mean more money to the salesman and encourage collecting as much as possible. If the salesman is on a reserve commission contract, in which twenty per cent is advanced and the remainder paid after deliveries are all made and cash collected, it is suggested that, in addition to his regular twenty per cent advance to which he is entitled, he be allowed ten per cent advance of cash (checks payable to nursery company) collected by him. It would be understood that this special advance and his regular advance are to be deducted from the total commission due him as per contract. Say a salesman sells $100 worth of orders a week, he gets twenty per cent regular advance, equaling $20. At the same time he collects $30 in advance on the $100 worth of orders. Then, he will get ten per cent of the $30, or an extra $3 advance, making a total advance for that week of $23. It will be understood that this $23 will be deducted from the total commission due him when his deliveries are all settled and paid for.

HOOSIERS TO VISIT CAVES.

The June meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana will be held Wednesday, June 21, at 3 p. m., at the greenhouses of Anders Rasmussen, at New Albany, Ind.

This will be a 2-day meeting. Thursday, June 22, the members of the association will make a trip to the Wyandotte caves. This will undoubtedly attract a big attendance. A chicken dinner will be served at the cave at a cost of 75 cents. The cost of the trip through the cave will be $1, a reduction of 50 cents, since the regular price is $1.50.

Those who are going on the trip should bring old clothes or overalls to wear in the caves, as there are not enough at the caves to supply a large crowd.

It is important that as many as possible go to New Albany in automobiles, so it will not be necessary to hire extra machines to make the trip to the caves.

Reservations should be mailed to Anders Rasmussen, at New Albany, Ind. State whether you will attend in an automobile and whether you will require a room to pass the night.

This Picture Tells the Story

The eye of a genius is not required to appreciate the extreme simplicity and practicality of the construction and operation of the Thoro-Mix Soil Shredder as shown in the above bird's-eye view of a portion of the machine. At the bottom of the picture may be seen part of the hopper and conveyor, or spiral; just in back of the hopper is the clean-out with cover removed; at the rear is the beater, which revolves 300 revolutions a minute; the belt is also shown with shield removed. THORO-MIX SOIL SHREDDER to grow and keep growing because it helps the flowers and plants to grow to their maximum of size, beauty and quantity, which means more stock at peak prices. Nor is that all—the saving in labor alone will pay for the machine in a very short time. Two or three men and the machine will do the work in one day that would require several days without the help of Thoro-Mix. The saving of labor is obvious; there is no comparison in the quality of the work.

Works in All Kinds of Soil

Rough and stony soil, sod and clay, to the finest loam, are all alike to Thoro-Mix. It has never, as yet, failed or balked, and it is at work all over the United States and Canada. Wet, soggy soil may be worked with Thoro-Mix which otherwise could not be touched.

THE SEED TRADE AND THE STATE.

trash on some of our honest retailers, to the detriment of both retailer and farmer. Not long ago a neighbor of mine purchased a lot of sweet clover seed from a local seed dealer. This seed was sold under the usual ironclad guarantee of the wholesale house. The local dealer thought he was making an honest deal and accommodating the farmer. But to this day, not more than a dozen sweet clover plants have ever showed themselves on this 4-acre tract of land on which the farmer sowed fifteen pounds of seed to the acre. Was the loss of the crop to the farmer the only damage done by this unfortunate sale? By no means! I happen to know this farmer purchases several hundred pounds of clover and other seeds each year, but not one pound does he now purchase from the firm that cheated him. Moreover, he advises his neighbors not to buy from this firm, because he has found it unreliable; and they take his advice.

This farmer did not raise a hubbub and take the matter into court. He was too wise to spend $50 to regain $10. He simply took his loss and advised his neighbors. Had he taken it to court the matter might have been satisfactorily arranged and confidence restored. But he acts on the proposition that the burned child fears the fire, and his confidence can never be regained by this firm which was victimized by an unscrupulous wholesaler.

Laws Governing Seed Trade.

Dealers have to meet the farmer's contention that his wheat turned to cheat; his cabbage to collards, and his red clover to white, though satisfied that the seeds originally purchased were true to variety name and purity guaranteed. The farmer, not knowing that thousands of weed seeds will lie dormant in the cultivated soil for years and come up only when the land is seeded down, finds his pastures and meadows covered with weeds and charges the seedsman with their presence, maintaining that the dealer sold him impure seed in the beginning. Then again, an ordinary cyclone will scatter weed and other seeds far and wide and sow lands to weeds entirely unknown in the localities before.

Our laboratory has, for a number of years, made a sympathetic study of the seed business both from the standpoint of the dealer and that of the farmer. Changes became necessary to meet existing conditions in the seed trade. Only last year, if our old standards had been rigidly adhered to, our seedsmen could not have legally handled seed oats at all, because it seemed impossible to get oats that would measure up to the required standard of germination—oats, the country over, seemed to have become heated and rendered unfit for seed.

Under our present law almost any seed can be sold, provided it bears the state seed tag, with the correct analysis on it. The farmer and the seed dealer can make any contract they desire and the farmer can come back on the dealer only in case he can prove the dealer deceived him. Section 18 of our state seed law reads in part as follows:

The following standards of purity and viability are hereby fixed. Seeds measuring up to the required standard may, when properly tagged, be labeled and sold as "standard seeds," but seeds falling below the required standards of purity and viability may also be sold in this state, only provided they are properly tagged and labeled as required in sections 2, 5 and 17 of this act.

When seeds are properly tagged, with the correct analysis on the tag, the farmer knows what he is purchasing and will be protected by the common law of contract. The analysis on the tag, however, is a guarantee only in case the seedsman is an honorable man. The state seed tag can be placed on any package whatsoever and bear no relation to the contents of the package that carries it. Here the farmer can invoke the law of contracts for his protection by sending a representative sample of the seed to our laboratory and having the guaranteed analysis on the tag verified.

The service of our laboratory is free to all our farmers and state seed dealers. Section 16 of our law reads as follows:

Any citizen, firm or corporation of this state shall have the privilege of having samples of seeds tested free of charge in the state seed laboratories; while individuals, firms and corporations outside the state shall have a like privilege on payment of a fee of 25 cents for each purity test and 25 cents for each germination test.

Publicity is the key to the whole situation. Let the tag on the package tell the truth and all the other factors will soon be whipped into line; and a sympathetic understanding will grow up between seed seller and seed planter such as has hitherto not been known.

Wyomissing, Pa.—The establishment of Philip A. Weiler, at Evans and Cleveland avenues, is being enlarged by the King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y. When the improvements are completed, Mr. Weiler will have in all about 20,000 square feet of glass. There are two new houses under construction, one 35x100 feet and the other 45x150 feet. A new heating plant is also being installed at the range.

A True Story

SOW BUG.

Sow Bugs in greenhouses it is sure death. For SLUG SHOT but they got out where it is used.

Office of Alfred Goldring
Florist
Cobleskill, New York

March 17th

We use HAMMOND'S SLUG SHOT on Currant Bushes in the Spring before the leaves are started. We put it on around the roots and have done it for two years, and find that the worms are killed before they get on the bush. For potatoes we put on SLUG SHOT as soon as the bugs come, and we have good vines, plenty of tubers and no bugs. It is the best thing we have ever used. For

ALFRED GOLDRING.

Slug Shot for Sow Bugs

It is with great pleasure each week I read your valued paper, and I like to give a helping hand when I can. I do not wish to say anything against the use of Paris green and sugar, or bran, or any other material, for I know these are all good to kill bugs, such as wood lice (sow bugs), etc. But I would like to state, as I have done formerly, for the benefit of anyone bothered with sow bugs that I have thoroughly cleared my greenhouses of this pest by dusting freely with HAMMOND'S SLUG SHOT, spreading it well in the walks, under the benches, along the side walls and between the plants, using about 20 lbs. to a 20 ft. x 100 ft. house. This Slug Shot will not injure Carnation plants. I hope that this recital of my experience will be of help to others in trouble and especially recommend its use as it is not dangerous to human life as is Paris green.

CYCLAMEN

CYCLAMEN PLANTS
READY NOW.

We can emphatically recommend them as a superior grade of plants, inasmuch as we have specialized on CYCLAMEN for years and have constantly improved our strain and methods of growing.

Through the use of a specially prepared compost, we have produced wonderful root action and a fine foliage, in fact we have never produced a finer lot of plants of the very best known varieties.

We have broken all records this year in the sale of plants and seedlings and have even shipped in full carload lots to eastern points.

Our plants positively have no trace or sign of the mite or any other diseases CYCLAMEN are subject to.

Orders booked in rotation.

RAIN WHEN YOU WANT IT

Will He Or Won't He Get Your Crop? Here's Something That Says NO!

Right now your plants may be looking very frisky and full of promise, but who knows what the weather is going to be?

The sun may pelt the very life out of things in a few days' time.

It may look like rain for days, and only look like it.

Every day there's less chance of your getting out more money than you put in. Or as much, even.

Right now is when the Skinner System with its Portable Sectional line comes to the rescue. It makes rain whenever and wherever you want to make it.

You can take a chance or you can take $39.75 and send it to us for a 100-foot line, that will water 5000 feet at a time without moving it.

Costs $39.75

Complete, all ready to set up and attach to your hose. Two men can move and set up 100-foot line in 20 minutes.

The Du Pont Monument to Horticulture

At Longwood, Pierre Du Pont's Estate, twelve miles from Wilmington, is a group of glass gardens, that in size, beauty and masterfulness of conception, the whole world has nothing that approaches it.

The extensive growing houses are of U-Bar construction. But it is the so-called orangerie that is the real masterpiece. In design, as you see from the illustration, it harks back to the days of Ancient Greece and Rome, when architecture held such marvels.

Here is a vast colonnade-bordered orangerie, with extensive fruit houses on either side, while luring you from the orangerie is a sunken garden which further adds to your wonderment. Fortunate, indeed, you are if the pipe organ is playing. As its rich, deep notes stir your very depths, or its bird-like ones lift you up, you almost feel yourself transported to another land. A land of flowers and music, free from life's rush and rant and hurry-worries. And so this wonderful monument to Horticulture first awes, then inspires; a bit of which we hope these photographs have conveyed to you.

We said it was a monument, but as you walk down these aisles, you begin to feel it is more like unto a floral cathedral.

AGMCO Builds Nine Houses for Forest Home Cemetery

After a complete investigation, AGMCO was awarded the contract of five steel frame houses 31'x100', three leanto houses 12'-6" wide and 80', 92'-6" and 167' long, and one flat rafter conservatory 20'x55'. Three different kinds of construction, and AGMCO can build them best.

Why did we land the order? Because our price was right, designs were the most modern with latest improvements, and our reputation assured them that every detail would be handled correctly.

If you are going to build, it will pay you to investigate AGMCO construction. There is no obligation, and our assistance may be of value to you.

Remember when they used to think narrow greenhouses with lots of air were best for Carnations?

Now the best stock is grown in houses 36 feet wide and wider.

Since we designed our new pipe frame construction with bolted through galvanized steel fittings, it has been possible to build semi-iron houses up to fifty feet and wider, with safety, and they surely grow good stock.

CAN MAKE PROMPT SHIPMENT—F. O. B. Chicago

The W. W. BARNARD CO., 231-235 W. Madison St.
CHICAGO

Both Of Us Are Right Only Both Of Us Are Wrong

Right you are, dipping a piece of cypress material in a prime coat bath of paint, does cover every part.

But covering is one thing, and getting into every little crevice with a stay put grip is quite another. After using and advertising the dip priming method instead of the brushing for years, we found we were wrong.

Now the prime coat on every piece of cypress and metal is not only brushed on but thoroughly brushed in.

Paint makers will even go so far as to tell you that a poor paint brushed in will last longer than a paint that's better, brushed on.

Everything to hold, must have a grip.

Brushing paint in, gives it a grip.

In addition to changing our priming method, we have changed the formula of our priming paint, so that it is the best that can be made.

The chief expert of the largest paint pigment concern, says no better paint for the purpose is made.

PANSY SEED

AMERICAN BULB COMPANY

"PRIVATE STOCK" MIXTURE

Realizing the importance of the Pansy to many growers both as cut flowers and for bedding plant sales, and the fact that FANCY PANSIES are half sold when offered to the public, we have combined a mixture which we believe will create a sensation because of the many new and odd shades it contains, many of which have originated with various growers who are in charge of large private estates throughout the country, particularly the so-called "Henna" types. In short, an experience of over thirty years both as seedsman and grower, is back of our "PRIVATE STOCK"

Cyclamen Seed

A NEW AND BETTER STRAIN

From the World's Foremost Grower, Ferd Fischer, of Wiesbaden.

TO MY CUSTOMERS IN AMERICA:

Those who are in the market for high grade Cyclamen Seed, I wish to advise you that I have perfected the finest strain of Cyclamen Seed I have ever offered, as for the past five years I have devoted my attention to improving my varieties. Cyclamen offered by me this season are all true to name and selected only from the best and healthy plants, which in turn give very good results.

I have paid strict attention to my Salmon and Red shades particularly for the American trade. My seed will be offered by the American Bulb Co. It is with pleasure that I recommend to all florists who are growers of high class plants to try out my seed. I hold recommendations from the best growers in the world.

Yours very truly,

FERD. FISCHER.

Owing to a bountiful crop, Mr. Fischer has authorized an important reduction in prices—a genuine opportunity to secure the highest grade of Cyclamen Seed at nominal cost.

MCCRAY

REFRIGERATORS for ALL PURPOSES

This view of Dards', Inc., at Madison Avenue and 44th Street, New York, shows how the McCray harmonizes with the surroundings of the most exclusive shop.

What florist does not appreciate the importance of preserving his stock in its fresh beauty, not only to prevent loss, but to increase sales? It is doubly significant, therefore, that most of them choose the McCray, that this quality refrigerator is found in so many of the best floral establishments.

The reason for this choice lies in the efficiency of the McCray. For the McCray patented cooling system, forcing a constant circulation of pure, cold air through every compartment, provides thorough refrigeration, and the high quality materials assure lasting service.

Various styles and sizes in stock and special equipment built to order. There is no need to delay installing a McCray; easy payment may be arranged if desired.

SEND FOR YOUR FREE BOOK, describing and illustrating the superior construction of the McCray, showing the complete line.

MOTHER'S DAY—Pure White

A decided novelty of superior merit. Perfectly hardy, a compact grower, stems requiring no staking. A most prolific bloomer. Fragrance unsurpassed. Field grown blooms averaging 2 to 2½-in. diameter. Truly a Carnation pot plant that will fill a long felt want. Just the plant for Mothers' day and Decoration day. If you have the ground, it will pay you to plant a quantity in the Fall. Will withstand the severest Winter. Stock ready in October 1922 (this fall). Field grown plants, $20.00 per 100, $180.00 per 1000. Rooted Cuttings, January and later deliveries, $12.00 per 100, $110.00 per 1000.

"BETTY JANE"—A. Jablonsky

Awarded S. A. F. and O. H. Silver medal, American Carnation Society, Hartford, Conn., January, 1922. Also Silver Medal for the best 100 blooms of any undisseminated variety at the National Flower Show at Indianapolis, Indiana, March 28, 1922. Grower's Description: "Betty Jane" is a seedling of White Wonder and Ward. Color: An ideal shade of Ward pink. The flowers are as round as a dial, 3½-in. to 3¾-in. diameter. Stem: Sturdy and wiry, holding the flower upright at all times. A good, vigorous grower in the field and under glass; not subject to rot, and produces very few split calyxes. An early bloomer, starting right after housing; free flowering and keeps on continuously throughout the season; produces a good proportion of cuttings on the flowering stem, which root easily. It is a most excellent keeper, which also makes it a good shipper. Price, $12.50 per 100, $110.00 per 1000.

NATALIE—Joy Floral Company

Color, true rose (not rose pink); habit, vigorous; stem, medium to tall; size, medium to large, 3-in. blooms in November; calyx, long, does not burst; petals, broad; substance, firm; keeping qualities, good; blooming qualities, free and early. Patten & Company, the well known Carnation specialists of Tewksbury, Massachusetts, who have a few thousand Natalie on their place, write us as follows: "Natalie" has produced (32) thirty-two blooms per square foot to date (April 26th), averaging 3 in. in size with a good stem. This variety, which we have handled in a commercial way, has averaged just under eight cents per bloom from September 15th to date. The greater part of our production is sold through commission men, the above average being our net returns. Natalie is not an exhibition variety, but strictly commercial. Price, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

SURPRISE—

F. Dorner & Sons Co.

In color a trifle darker and the nearest approach to Laddie of any Carnation we know. A well grown flower of Surprise is nearly equal to Laddie and the combined size and color, in addition to its productiveness, will make it a close rival to that favorite.

Its popularity will be in—

- 1st. The easy propagation, strong growth, and shapely, upright plants.
- 2nd. The color, which is a more even shade of pink, and just a little darker than Laddie.
- 3rd. The very early and profuse flowering habit, equal to the best of the standard varieties.
- 4th. The large size, good form and commercial quality.
- 5th. The opening of the flower, which is quick and never bursts the calyx.
- 6th. The transplanting of the field-grown plants, which become quickly established and throwing very early flowering shoots in quantity and of surprising length.
- 7th. The quick growth in the field, with its early flowering habit, produces long, stiff stemmed flowers of a beautiful shade of pink, nearly equal to indoor grown. "Surprise" will be a paying proposition for flowering in the field. (Plants intended for benching should be kept topped and not let flower in the field.) Price, $12.50 per 100, $110.00 per 1000.

HILL'S AMERICA

THE E. G. HILL CO.

(Rose Premier x Heesler Beauty)

Bud long and pointed; flower immense; strong in texture. A good keeper. Foliage large, dark green; stems almost thornless and strong. Resembles Columbia in its extraordinary, strong, quick growth and does not crimp the outer petals under any growing conditions; scores very high on form and size.

The color is a gorgeous rose-pink. Quite distinct; a fine addition to the "Big Rose" Class.

HALL'S NICOTINE FUMIGATOR

For fumigating greenhouses—12½% Nicotine guaranteed. Effective and economical. Packed in airtight tins—retains its strength indefinitely. A conical measuring dipper is enclosed in each tin. Dip out the required number of cones and you are ready to fumigate. One cone will fill 7,000 cubic feet with deadly Nicotine fumes. Three cones will rid the average size greenhouse (20 by 100 ft.) of aphids, thrips and similar soft-bodied sucking insects. And the cost will be only 25c. 10-lb. tins $8.50, 2½-lb. tins $2.50, 1-lb. tins $1.25.

HALL'S FREE NICOTINE

For effective greenhouse spraying or vaporizing—40% Nicotine guaranteed. This powerful insecticide contains Nicotine in the free state—particularly adapted for indoor spraying. Diluted according to directions it makes a deadly spray costing only 2½c a gallon. Where a liquid is preferred for fumigating, it has all the killing power of Hall's Fumigator. 8-lb. tins $15.00, 2-lb. tins $4.25, ½-lb. tins $1.40, 1-oz. bottles, 35c.

WHAT GROWERS WHO KNOW THINK OF IT.

"We think very well of this fertilizer, getting extra good results wherever used. We have been feeding the Rose beds in the greenhouse and like it better than any fertilizer we have ever used."

Yours respectfully,
W. J. PALMER & SON,
By B. S. Myers, Manager.

"For flowers it has no equal."
L. W. DAVISON,
Western Springs, Ill.

"It is a fine product, free from weed seeds, makeweights and chaff, and ideal in its fertilizing quality, stimulating, bacterial action and absolutely without fault."

W. H. MORSE,
Hartford, Conn.

"During the past year, we have been using your Poultry Manure on Carnations, 'Mums and other stock with splendid success. As a top dressing for the Carnations we are carrying over into the second season, we have found it most excellent. We find that any crop which may be lagging somewhat in growth, can be quickly brought up to its normal stage by the use of your manure. We shall always keep a supply on hand."

Yours very truly,
BAUR & STEINKAMP,
Per A. F. J. Baur.

"It has proven that Poultry Manure is the best fertilizer obtainable for Dahlias."
GEO. L. STILLMAN,
Westerly, R. I.

"The growth and bloom has been abundant. We believe the fertilizer is a good article for almost any crop."
RICHARD VINCENT, JR.,
White Marsh, Md.

Says Icicle Ike:

It earns a 50% profit!

"Br - r - r! Here's some cold facts—the crisp - cold, briskly circulating fresh air from a Lipman preserves all the original freshness of your cut blossoms weeks longer. Keeps any desired temperature automatically—no attention required. Your Sundays and holidays are free from worry."

Just estimate how much you could save by ending all your ice bills and all losses from wilted, unsalable flowers. This saving can be made by Lipman Automatic Refrigeration as opposed to the use of ice—enabling you to pay for the machine in the first year or so of operation. After that the Lipman pays a 50% dividend on the investment! This is proved by users' figures.

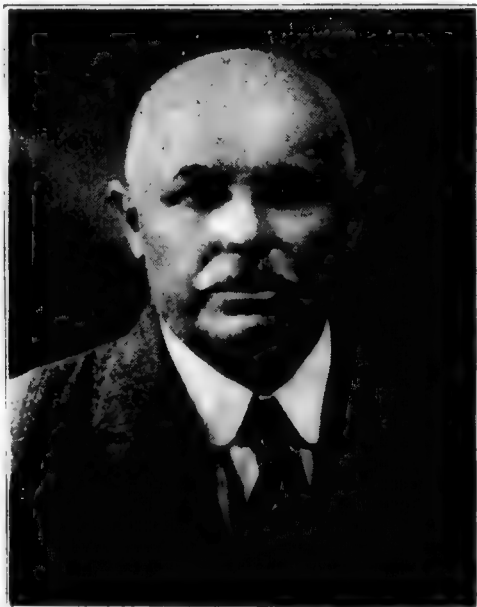

Write for free information on the savings a Lipman will make in your market. On request a Refrigerating Engineer from the nearest of our 50 distributing points will gladly call and investigate your refrigerating problem. No obligation—of course.

Burpee's Sweet Peas

The Burpee Early Flowering Sweet Peas are recognized as leaders in their various colors and they are grown extensively by all florists who demand the very best.

The careful hybridization work carried on at Burpee's Fordhook Farms in Pennsylvania, the growing of the seed crops on Burpee's Floradale Farms in California, and our extensive indoor and outdoor trials give us a unique opportunity to supply the florists with the very best that can be had in Sweet Peas. Everything possible is done to insure the quality of Burpee's Sweet Peas.

CRAIG SPECIALTIES

SPRING DELIVERY —1922—

Never before have we offered to our customers such a complete line of stock and of such high quality, including both Flowering and Foliage Plants. We are booking heavily on Spring orders and suggest to our many customers to either call at Norwood and make their selections, or mail order at once so that reservations can be made, to avoid disappointment. Prosperity is here and you should protect your best interests for bigger and better sales with Craig Quality Stock.

We cordially invite you to our new home at Norwood Station, Delaware County, Pa., easily reached by the Pennsylvania R. R. to Norwood Station, and Baltimore & Ohio R. R. to Holmes Station, or by trolley.

CROTONS

The Croton, with its highly colored foliage, is indispensable during fall and winter. We have the largest and most complete collection of Crotons in the world, carrying at the present time for spring sales over 50,000, all of the very highest quality and brilliantly colored. Immediate delivery.

4-inch pots, strong plants, $12 per dozen, $75 per 100.

3-inch pots, $35 per 100.

4-inch pots, $50 per 100.

Every retail store and grower should feature Crotons this spring. We know our stock will please you and your customer.

CROTON LEAVES AND SPRAYS

Cut Croton Leaves and Sprays have been supplied by us in the past few years to some of the leading florists, who have featured them in mantel, table and funeral work. Cut Crotons will last in a cool place from three to four weeks. We can supply them every day in the year.

Very highly colored sprays at 50c each; cut leaves, $5 per 100.

When you have orders for funeral or table work "out of the ordinary," order Craig's Cut Crotons.

DRACAENAS

There is no other variety of foliage plant so attractive as the highly colored Dracaena. The small and medium sizes can be used to great advantage in making up the popular spring baskets, while the large specimens have always been in great demand for decorative purposes. We are now growing more Dracaenas, in greater variety, than any firm in the country.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

GARDEN TRACTORS FIT FOR FLORISTS

Many florists and nurserymen have sought information regarding power cultivators, or garden tractors, adapted to meet their needs. To answer their queries and inform others in the trade of these labor-saving machines and the makes found most satisfactory, this article has been prepared.

FLORISTS and nurserymen have manifested much interest in the power cultivators on the market which are especially adapted to their needs. There are now several. The initial cost of them is small, the price being in the neighborhood of from $175 to $225. Such an investment pays rapid dividends, not only in larger profits, but in the saving of human energy, and it is within the means of one who has from one-half to ten acres of land under cultivation.

Save Man Power.

The time-saving and labor-saving features of such a machine are enough in themselves to make the investment highly attractive. The rapidity with which this little burden-carrier goes through a patch makes it possible for the florist to cultivate his entire crop more often; he can plan and time his cultivating work exactly in accordance with the needs of the plants and the texture of the soil. Because of the increased amount of power and greater freedom of the operator, the hoes can be made to dig deeper into the soil, not only loosening it, but also permitting the moisture to rise more rapidly from the subsoil; the roots are given more of a chance to breathe, and the soil is left in a better condition to absorb the moisture created by the dew in the evening, while the water from rains is prevented from running off. The plants grow faster, because the amount of plant food released is greatly increased and put into a more available form to be assimilated by the roots. The plants also find it unnecessary to send out so many rootlets in search of moisture and their growth is greatly enhanced thereby.

With such garden tractors, or power cultivators, as they are variously called, one man can do as much work as four men can do with hand wheel hoes, and while this one man is at work, his mind is entirely free to direct his attention to the steering and operating of the hoes. "Rest" periods are eliminated, more ground is covered, better work is done, the growth of plants is more even, insuring healthier plants and better prices, and the wages of three men are deducted from the expense sheet, to say nothing of relieving the workman of the back-breaking labor which reduces efficiency.

The machines can be used throughout the entire growing season. Some are so constructed as to pass over plants twelve to twenty inches high without injury. The majority of them will straddle 12-inch rows, permitting the operator to cultivate two rows at a time, or they will work between 24-inch rows.

Operating Cost Small.

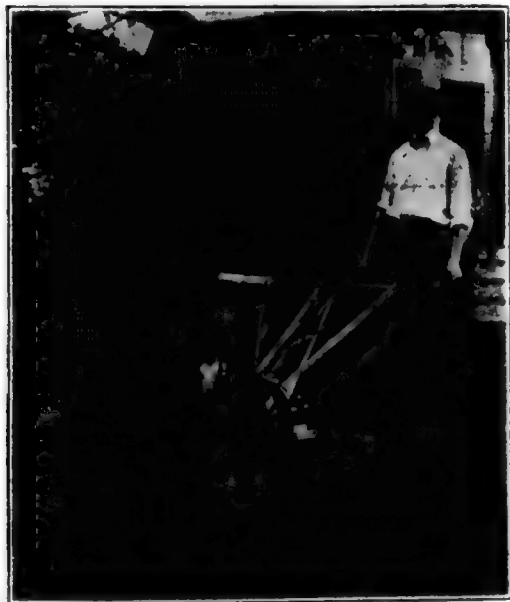

The power is transmitted from the engine to the traction wheels either by the loose pulley and belt method, or by means of a clutch, in the same manner as the power is applied to the rear wheels of an automobile. Both of these methods give the operator perfect control of the machine at all times. The control levers are placed upon the steering handles, in a convenient location, where they can be regulated with ease and speed. The adjustments for the hoes are also in the steering handles. The power is supplied in some by a 2-cycle, and in others by a 4-cycle, gasoline motor, developing from one to two horsepower. In the 2-wheel type this is balanced between the traction wheels; where there is but one traction wheel, the motor is swung inside it. Such a machine is economical in the use of fuel and lubricant, requiring about one gallon of gasoline for every four to ten hours of operation, depending upon the condition of the soil. The texture of the soil and the contour of the surface of the ground over which the machine runs somewhat affect the working of the machine. It travels at the rate of from 100 feet to 250 feet per minute, or an average speed of two miles per hour.

The differential is an additional feature of one of the machines. The minimum time is required in turning at the end of the row and the machine is small enough so that it can be driven as close to a fence as is desired, both in planting and cultivating. Here an additional saving is effected. Heretofore the plants at the extreme ends of the rows have always had to suffer, especially where a fence was encountered, because these plants were trampled down by a horse in turning to go back on the next row or they were abandoned to the weeds. This waste is entirely eliminated when the power hoe is used, as only a space of thirty to thirty-five inches is required to turn the machine. The fact that some rows may be crooked makes no difference in the effectiveness of the work performed.

Tools Adjustable.

The tools are so adjusted on the frame that they can be shifted in a little time by the operator. In fact, he can go from a cultivating hoe to a lawn mower in less than five minutes. Any tool can be attached in a short time, so that no matter what is the nature of the job to be done, there is a tool attachment for that particular kind of work. It is said of some makes that the machine can even be set upon a base and made to turn a grindstone, a bone-grinding mill, a pumping jack, or it can be attached to a spraying outfit and used in the field. In fact, almost anything requiring power to drive it can be operated by the power from one of these machines. They are far superior to a stationary gasoline engine, because with them one can take the power to the job instead of being compelled to bring the job to the power. The engine, however, is a little too light to do satisfactory work when attached to a field plow of the ordinary size.

The item of depreciation of the machine is small indeed if a little care is exercised, and a careful owner should receive the purchase price of the machine many times over before he is required to dispose of it as junk. There is nothing which deteriorates so rapidly as iron or steel, and once oxidation begins its destructive work, it is almost impossible to stop it. The only sure method of avoiding loss in this way is to prevent the tool from rusting, which can be easily done in a few minutes if the machine is thoroughly cleaned, oiled, covered and stored away in a place where the moisture cannot attack it when not in use. Under these conditions a machine should last a good many years, with only the necessity of occasionally renewing parts as they wear out.

Sales Plus.

One drawback which has discouraged a more extensive use of these machines in the past has been the unwillingness or the inability of the manufacturers to stand back of their machines with service. Either the firms were unreliable or they did not realize the value of the follow-up sales system. Under these circumstances the florist or nurseryman had no assurance that if his machine broke down in the midst of a busy season, he could get expert mechanics to help him out. Therefore, not being able to keep a horse for an emergency, nor being willing to do his work at the pleasure of the machine, he decided not to take a chance.

If a stumbling block of this kind did exist in the past, it has now been entirely eliminated. Parts have been standardized to a large extent, and the makers maintain supply and service stations throughout the country in charge of men competent to handle any trouble with which the unskilled person may find himself confronted. This service is generally rendered at a nominal cost if, in truth, it is not done entirely free of charge. Instructions, in untechnical language, accompanied by diagrams, are furnished with each machine, explaining how, when and where to lubricate and the kinds of oil to use, together with all the information necessary to operate the machine.

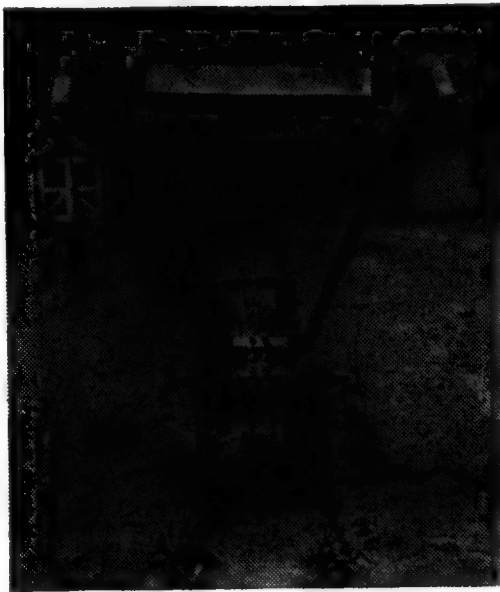

Who Makes Them?

Garden tractors are not entirely a recent innovation, and some of them have been in operation in florists' fields and nurseries for several years. These machines are making good, as will be indicated hereinafter.

The Merry Garden Auto-Cultivator, made by the Atlantic Machine & Mfg. Co., Cleveland, O., is a machine which some florists have found particularly attractive. It is light, weighing only 285 pounds, and has a speed of about two miles per hour. The handles can be adjusted up or down to accommodate any height of man or boy. The slots in the tool-holders allow a wide range of position of tools, and the transmission of power is effected by means of a train of case-hardened steel-cut gears with ratio of 1-30. The control is effected by means of a clutch. The machine mounts a 2-horsepower Evinrude motor, which is equipped with a Bosch magneto. It straddles a 12-inch or wider row and will work between rows twenty-four inches or more apart. It can be turned around in a 34-inch circle.

A number of florists have used the Merry Garden. "I have been using a Merry Garden Auto-Cultivator for two seasons with satisfactory results. While it is rather light for plowing, it is an ideal machine for cultivating. My 15-year-old boy has done the work," says J. M. Bassett, of Hammon-ton, N. J. "While we have had a little trouble with the machine from time to time, it almost invariably proved to be through some oversight of our own, due to inexperience with motors. We have cultivated from three to five acres with it easily and have kept them more thoroughly worked than we used to with horse power."

Makes Turning Easy.

The Gilson Mfg. Co., Port Washington, Wis., makes the Bolens power hoe, the only machine with a differential, enabling the operator to turn the machine at the end of the row with no more effort than the strength of one hand. It has a high arch, which permits it to work astride a row of plants fourteen to twenty inches tall without damage. The power is supplied by a 1-cylinder, air-cooled, gasoline-driven motor, and the gasoline consumption is about one gallon every ten hours. The speed is controlled by a thumb lever on the handle, which operates the throttle on the carburetor.

The Bolens machine, with its high-arched axle, its tool control, its differential drive, its easy regulation of speed and its snap hitches on all attachments, is an outfit especially adapted to florists' needs. It is designed for close cultivation and therefore has made friends where florists have seen it demonstrated.

The Bolens power hoe was shown at the national flower show, at Indianapolis last March. Users in the trade include the C. C. Pollworth Co. and Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Miles Co., Oshkosh, Wis.; J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, O.; W. W. Horlacher, Dayton, O.; Fifth Avenue Floral Co., Columbus, O.; John Wiemann, Burlington, Ia.; Daut Bros., Decatur, Ill.; Flick Floral Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.; Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.; Gray Floral Co., Chickasha, Okla.; Myers Floral Co., Bluffton, Ind., and Joseph Mahnke, Milwaukee, Wis. It is used by the city foresters of St. Paul and Milwaukee, the forestry department of the Dominion of Canada and the horticultural department of the University of Wisconsin.

Made in Minneapolis.

In Minneapolis the Beeman Tractor Co. puts out a garden tractor called Beeman, Jr., which is simply a little power plant built into a traction arrangement and designed especially to handle garden tool attachments. The cultivator attachment will cultivate one, two or three rows at a time. It has clearance height of fourteen inches and clearance width of ten inches, which permits going astride or between the rows. A gasoline-driven, air-cooled motor furnishes power, and the machine is thrown into and out of action by a simple but positive belt-tightener, operated at the right-hand handle.

One of the above-mentioned is found in use at the establishment of Luther Horlacher, Xenia, O., and Mr. Horlacher says in regard to the operation of the machine: "For the last two seasons I have been using one of these garden tractors, finding it indispensable. As a cultivator, it is far superior to a horse. Much more cultivating and more thorough work can be done than with a horse in a given time. Many times I have gone out into my field and cultivated an acre and one-half of 3-foot rows up and down twice after the evening meal. One can speed these tractors to suit himself, and there is no horse to tramp on the plants. One can turn from one row and go up the next without a minute's loss of time. This tractor is under perfect control, and can be guided as close to the plants as one desires. My tractor has been absolutely dependable at all times, not giving any mechanical trouble and always being ready for use. The Beeman Co. correctly advertises its useful tractor to take the place of a horse. In my experience, however, I have seldom seen one horse do the kind of plowing on our Ohio soil that a good grower should want on his land year after year. It takes a good team to do deep, thorough plowing, which is essential to maximum results."

Walking and Riding Type.

At Indianapolis, Ind., is made a machine called the Utilitor, of which there are two models, one a walking type and one a riding type. The latter will do even heavier work than that of the florist. This machine will plow, harrow, pulverize, plant, cultivate, mow lawns, drag roads, do belt work to four horsepower and many of those things which heretofore have been done with the horse or mule. It is made by the Midwest Engine Co. The front frame can be adjusted for either narrow or wide-row cultivation.

"On fairly level, solid ground the Utilitor does fine work and has an abundance of power. It turns to the right or left on its own power and can be kept going much more steadily than a horse," says Nixon H. Gano, proprietor of the Martinsville Floral Co., Martinsville, Ind. "In fact, if a man keeps it going to capacity all day, he will know that he has done a full day's work. We use ours for plowing, disking, harrowing, dragging, furrowing and cultivating. Almost anyone can learn to operate one of these tractors more readily and with much more satisfaction than he could drive a horse, if he never had any experience with a horse before. The Utilitor, when properly adjusted before starting, will give one no trouble at all. The machine is well built, and we have had no trouble with breakage. It is economical in the use of gasoline and lubricating oil. I much prefer the Utilitor to any horse I have ever handled."

"I have used a Utilitor tractor for two years for plowing and harrowing and like it for this purpose. If you have a tractor to do your work and a flivver to do your errands, you are well fixed," says H. Wells Taylor, florist at Spring City, Pa.

Simple and Serviceable.

A small tractor and power cultivator, which has a clutch control and carries the engine inside the large bull or traction wheel, is found in the Kinkade, manufactured by the American Farm Machinery Co., Minneapolis, Minn. "It is a wonderful machine for its size and easily does the work of three men operating hand machines," says C. A. Brazee, wholesale florist and bulb grower, of Wilmington, Cal. "It hoes and cultivates much deeper than a hand machine and makes work a pleasure. I can easily operate it in rows one foot apart, and it is so simple that a boy can operate it. It is strongly constructed, requiring little or no adjustment, and is always ready for work. Above all, it really does the work."

The Acme, Jr., power cultivator, made by the Acme Cultivator Co., Salem, O., is a compact machine, easy to handle. It is of the 2-wheel type and its construction makes its care simple and its life long.

Useful in Nursery Rows.

The Cultimotor, manufactured by the Shelby Tractor & Truck Co., at Shelby, O., has a notable advantage in its ability to pass between narrow rows, allowing cultivation regardless of the height of plants. Tool holders of various lengths, attached in a few minutes, are adapted to any of the standard garden tools, such as hoes, cultivator teeth, disks, side-hill and moldboard plows. Tools are thrown in or out of service by touching a foot lever. A clutch at the left hand and a thumb throttle at the right give control.

"Having only one power wheel of exceptional width, more traction is obtained than in the 2-wheeled type, which allows a slippage of the wheel on the side of least resistance," state the makers of this machine.

The drive is through gears and chain, enclosed in metal housing, while bronze-bushed and hardened roller bearings assist in obtaining a minimum of friction and wear. To withstand the hard usage to which a tractor is bound to be put, rolled steel is used throughout in framework construction. A 4-cycle air-cooled motor with enclosed flywheel magnet produces the power. It is equipped with a device for removing all dust from the air passing to the carburetor.

A small belt pulley and an attachment permits the use of any hand lawn mower in connection with the Cultimotor. A gasoline consumption of one gallon per ten hours, with oil consumption of about one-quarter pint, is claimed for this machine.

Used by Vegetable Growers.

A light power cultivator which stresses its specialized design and construction is the Motor Macultivator, manufactured at Toledo, O., by the Motor Macultivator Co. This machine turns in a radius of thirty-five inches, is light and powerful, and because of patented features gives an unusually wide range of tool placement at the option of the operator. The tool adjustment on the Motor Macultivator enables the operator to regulate width, depth and cutting angle of the tools in use. A special device on this machine enables the operator to raise the tools from the ground without lifting the machine. It cultivates from one-quarter inch to four inches in depth, one or two rows at a time, and, it is said, gets up within a half inch of plants. It will straddle the rows or work between them, as the operator may desire. Vegetable growers have found this machine generally useful.

In the Motor Macultivator the crank case and main frame are cast in one piece. There are few parts and these easily accessible. Its low center of gravity permits it to work on uneven surfaces or sharp inclines without danger of overturning. Left-hand clutch and right-hand throttle are controlled from the hand grips. The lubrication system consists of five grease cups; no oil can be needed. The motor is a one-cylinder, four-cycle motor. The drive wheel diameter is nineteen and one-half inches, width over all seventeen and one-half inches, height thirty-two inches, length fifty-four inches, clearance nine inches, weight 210 pounds.

The Motor Macultivator is readily converted into a power lawn mower by the use of an inexpensive attachment that is adaptable to practically any lawn mower or cutting unit now in the market.

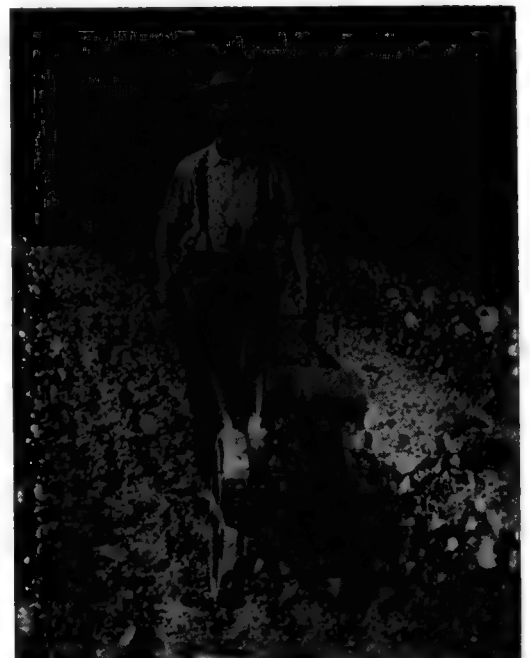

Nurseryman's Experience.

One of the first manufacturers to follow the trend toward specialized tractors of small size, the New Britain Machine Co., New Britain, Conn., has designed a small tractor fitted to the needs of truck gardeners, seed growers, nurserymen and florists with a small acreage of outdoor stock. Experiments have been made in eastern nurseries to demonstrate the ability of this machine to meet such needs. Last summer Swain Nelson & Sons Co., Chicago, bought one of these machines for use in cultivating nursery stock in regularly planted tree blocks, with rows as close as three feet. This company found that when the ground was not too hard or tangled with roots, the machine enabled one man to cultivate about twice the area that he could with a one-horse cultivator. "We found the machine easy to guide and have never had it tip over, nor have we lost control of it," says the superintendent of the nurseries of Swain Nelson & Sons Co. "After several days' usage, some part of the machine broke, not having been built strong enough to last long in this kind of work. The manufacturers furnished without cost to us stronger parts, and we are putting the machine into perfect shape for use as soon as time for cultivating arrives. No other machine we have tried has given nearly the satisfaction that the New Britain gives. We hope that, with the changes of stronger parts for the original ones, this will be a thoroughly satisfactory nursery motor cultivator."

Light, One-Wheeled Machine.

A light power cultivator is made by H. C. Dodge, Inc., Boston, Mass., and is known as the Sprywheel. This one-wheel tractor is found to work well in cultivating plants set out in narrow rows. An eastern nurseryman finds it particularly useful for cultivating young evergreens and azaleas, which are bedded out, five rows to a bed, with ten inches between the rows, in a heavy clay soil that packs hard, but has no stones in it. In this soil the machine goes from two and one-half to three inches deep; in light soil it will cultivate five inches deep. This nurseryman says: "In previous years this work has always been done by hand hoeing, as the rows are too close together and the stock too valuable to permit the horse cultivator. The trouble with the machine is to find a man who will keep up with it all day. By paying a little extra, however, we are able to save more than the cost of the machine in one week, over the expense of hand work, as it will do more and better work than ten men with hoes. For such work it is advisable to plant the

They are far superior to a stationary gasoline engine, because with them one can take the power to the job instead of being compelled to bring the job to the power. In Larger Nurseries.

In large nurseries a quite satisfactory tractor of the caterpillar type is the Cletrac, made by the Cleveland Tractor Co., Cleveland, O. It is heavier than the cultivators previously described and costs several times as much. It is economical of gasoline, runs equally well on hilly ground and on level ground, and it will go nearer a wall or tree than horses can. V. A. Vanicek, proprietor of the Rhode Island Nurseries, says, "It is handier and better for harrowing than any wheel tractor, and not so dangerous as the Fordson. It is just the thing I was looking for."

KANSAS CITY CONVENTION.

Railroad Rates.

Members and delegates, and dependent members of their families, journeying to Kansas City will be able to purchase round-trip tickets at the rate of one fare and one-half on the identification certificate plan, good via the same route in both directions only. Return tickets must be validated at Kansas City by ticket agents at the regular ticket offices of the lines for which they are issued, on any date to and including final return limit, provided a train selected reaches the original starting point prior to midnight of the date limit. Certificates will be furnished on application to the secretary of the S. A. F. One certificate will suffice for each member and includes the dependent members of his or her family. These certificates should be properly filled out before presentation to the ticket agent.

Trade Exhibition.

From reports received, it would seem that a few prospective exhibitors in the trade exhibition have the idea that all the space in the exhibition has been sold. This is not the case. The floor of the exhibition building is so laid out that there is a large oval space in the center, with arcades at the east and west. The space in the oval is, as has been announced, all reserved, but there are several good locations still to be had in the arcades, none of them at a disadvantage in comparison with the other locations. Prospective exhibitors, therefore, are urged to send in their applications for space without delay, and may rest assured that with promptness on their part they will be accommodated with reservations.

All exhibitors are advised that any decorative material, coverings, etc., used on their exhibits must be fire-proofed. This is not a regulation of the society, but of the fire department of Kansas City. Indeed, it is a requirement in all cities of the first class. Exhibitors who carry such material with their exhibitions would find it advisable to have the fireproofing done before shipment, thus avoiding much trouble and delay.

The following exhibitors are in addition to the list published last:

Pinehurst Floral Co., Pleasant Hill, Mo.
Nebel Mfg. Co., Cleveland, O.
Robt. Craig Co., Norwood Station, Pa.
Orchard Paper Co., St. Louis, Mo.
Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa.
Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago.
George Wittbold Co., Chicago.
Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia.
W. M. Woodruff's Son & Co., Lowgap, N. C.
Morehead Mfg. Co., Detroit, Mich.
Lindley Box & Paper Co., Marion, Ind.
Werthelmer Bros., New York.
Stuppy Supply Co., Kansas City, Mo.
Skinner Irrigation Co., Troy, O.

Convention Business.

The state vice-presidents are urged to send in their reports early. These reports, under a new arrangement entered into by the executive board, will be printed in full in the new annual volume which will be a feature of the society's records in the coming year. State vice-presidents who attend the convention may bear in mind that the official program will provide for a meeting or council especially set apart for them.

The Kansas City Chamber of Commerce has kindly offered to publish a folder for the Ladies' S. A. F., which shall set forth the inducements for the attendance of ladies at the convention. This folder is already prepared and is in the hands of Mrs. A. M. Herr, the secretary of the organization, and, on completion, will be sent out from the S. A. F. administration offices.

President S. S. Pennock has recently spent a day or two at the secretary's office, in conference as to the official program for the convention, with the result that the draft of the program is nearly completed and will be ready for press shortly. In addition to the business which may be considered, more or less, as routine, subjects pertinent to the florists' industry, some suggested through our membership, are finding places on the program and promise to be most interesting.

ROSE SOCIETY MEETS

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Visitors Entertained at Syracuse.

Because of the notable work done by Dr. E. M. Mills in organizing a chain of rose societies throughout the state of New York and because of the interest displayed by amateurs in central New York state, the annual meeting of the American Rose Society was held in Syracuse this year. The officers of the Syracuse Rose Society planned and carried out a series of events which resulted in a day which will remain memorable to the officers of the national society and others who were fortunate enough to enjoy this privilege.

The day began with the judging of the Syracuse rose show, staged in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A., and except for the reduced number of exhibits caused by the ruinous rains, the show reflected a standard most creditable from the standpoint of quantity and quality. Frederick L. Atkins, of Rutherford, N. J., and John H. Dunlop, of Richmond Hill, Ont., were the judges.

At noon the entire party of visiting rosarians and others, accompanied by twenty-five or thirty rose lovers, were whisked away in high-powered cars to Lake Skaneateles, where luncheon was served at Krebs, famous to tourists. H. P. Dennison, who said that if he had his way all roses would be red, extended a cordial welcome to the invited guests, to which response was made on behalf of the American Rose Society by President Pyle; Leonard Barron, editor of Garden Magazine; John T. Roberts, lawyer, granger and farmer; A. L. Shepard, secretary of the Rochester Rose Society; F. L. Atkins and Professor E. A. White.

Election of Officers.

Another 20-mile run brought the party to the magnificent home of Mr. and Mrs. Hiscock, the former presiding judge of the Court of Appeals of the state of New York. Here was found a rose garden of luxurious appointment, exquisite taste and excellent culture. Complete beds of twenty roses of a kind, such as La Tosca, Willowmere and others, were seen. The business meeting of the society was held in this garden, with the usual reports showing the treasury in a more healthy condition than it has been for many years past.

The following officers were reelected: President, Robert Pyle; vice-president, F. L. Atkins; secretary, John C. Wister; treasurer, Charles H. Totty. The following directors, whose terms expired in 1922, were reelected for a term of three years; James Boyd, Philadelphia; Dr. E. M. Mills, Syracuse; George H. Peterson, Paterson, N. J.

Leaders Speak.

The evening meeting was held in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A., and was attended by approximately 300 people. The visiting rosarians were in entire charge of the meeting, with the floor of the auditorium devoted entirely to exhibits. After inspecting the exhibits, the audience arranged itself in the gallery.

The opening address was made by Dr. Mills, after which 15-minute speeches were made by President Pyle, on "The American Rose Society"; Samuel E. Hillger, president of the Auburn Rose Society, on "The Building of a Local Rose Society"; F. L. Atkins, on "The Use of Roses in Public Places"; Fred C. Wallace, of Canandaigua, N. Y., on "Help for the Amateur"; J. Horace McFarland, on "Climbing Roses and Climbing Membership," in which he clearly pointed out that the success of a rose society, either local or national, depends absolutely upon the activities of the members themselves. He cited, as an example of the world-wide influence of the American Rose Society, a letter received from a countess in Italy, who, by reason of her affiliation with the American Rose Society, had enjoyed the opportunity of entertaining in her garden a member of the American Rose Society from Norway.

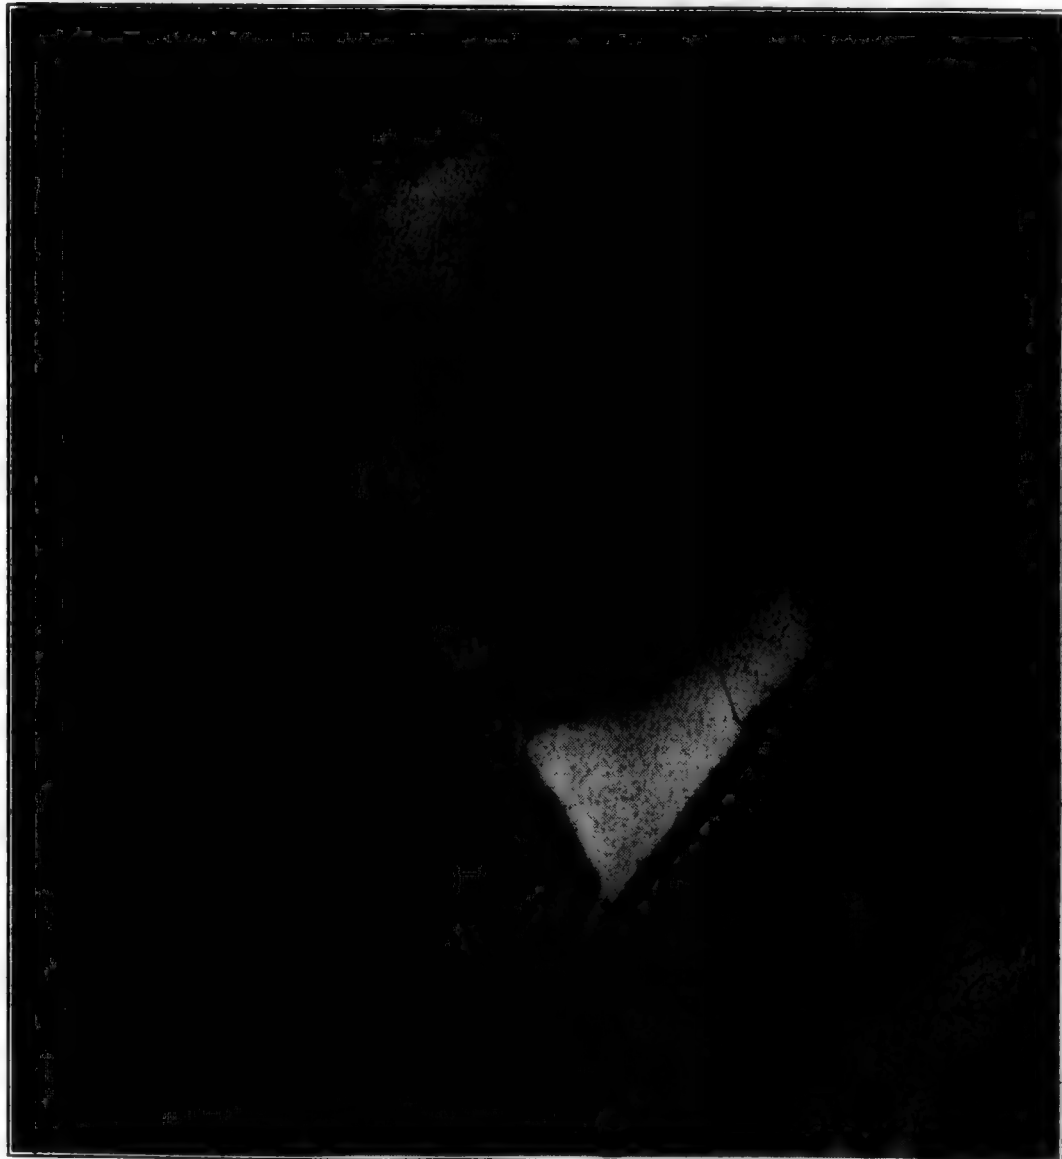

Friday's Tour.

In Auburn, June 16, the party was met by Samuel E. Hillger, president of the Auburn Rose Society; Mr. Adams, secretary; and David M. Dunning, patron of the rose, long an eminent rose grower of Auburn. The officers of the American Rose Society were taken on a tour of Auburn, beginning with the famous prison, in which have been developed separate rose gardens for the men and for the women, not to mention the greenhouses.

From here the party went on to the gardens of the Auburn Theological Seminary, Dr. Stewart presiding. The appreciation of beauty at this institution is evidenced in part by the magnificent tiffany stained glass window which adorns the chapel.

A visit was also made to the gardens surrounding the residences of the famous General MacDougal, George Pier-son and Mrs. C. W. Ross. This series of visits found its culmination in the garden of David M. Dunning, whose success in growing outdoor roses has for many years made his home a Mecca for rose lovers. A specimen of Frau Karl Drusecki in veritable billows of bloom, with wrist-sized trunks ten feet high, was only one of the many outstanding varieties seen. Most prominent among other varieties were Mrs. Wemyss Quin, Gloire de Chedane Guinoisseau, Maman Turbat, Lady Pirrie, Gustave Grunerwald, G. Amade Hammond, rows the long way of the beds, if drive-ways are necessary between these beds, to have the rows opposite to one another."

In Larger Nurseries.

In large nurseries a quite satisfactory tractor of the caterpillar type is the Cletrac, made by the Cleveland Tractor Co., Cleveland, O. It is heavier than the cultivators previously described and costs several times as much. It is economical of gasoline, runs equally well on hilly ground and on level ground, and it will go nearer a wall or tree than horses can. V. A. Vanicek, proprietor of the Rhode Island Nurseries, says, "It is handier and better for harrowing than any wheel tractor, and not so dangerous as the Fordson. It is just the thing I was looking for."

KANSAS CITY CONVENTION.

Railroad Rates.

Members and delegates, and dependent members of their families, journeying to Kansas City will be able to purchase round-trip tickets at the rate of one fare and one-half on the identification certificate plan, good via the same route in both directions only. Return tickets must be validated at Kansas City by ticket agents at the regular ticket offices of the lines for which they are issued, on any date to and including final return limit, provided a train selected reaches the original starting point prior to midnight of the date limit. Certificates will be furnished on application to the secretary of the S. A. F. One certificate will suffice for each member and includes the dependent members of his or her family. These certificates should be properly filled out before presentation to the ticket agent.

Trade Exhibition.

From reports received, it would seem that a few prospective exhibitors in the trade exhibition have the idea that all the space in the exhibition has been sold. This is not the case. Avoca, a plant in full bloom six feet high; Cissie Easlea, one of the richest yellows, though not quite the favorite with Mr. Dunning that Daily Mail is.

Mr. Dunning had a Lyon rose on a trellis twelve feet high, which was a perfect blaze of color. He preferred Willowmere to Los Angeles; and Red Letter Day, while similar in color, was much more vigorous than Kitchener of Khartum. Mr. Dunning's choice among hybrid perpetuals, of which there were many, were Anna de Diesbach, Baron de Bonstetten and Ulrich Brunner.

Polyanthas Seen.

Having had a look in at the country club, the party was welcomed at the home of a miracle worker—at least, you would call him so if you realized the transformation that had taken place since April, 1920, when Mr. Ferrin began with a patch of bare ground. He welcomed to his home some seventy-five guests, who came, saw and were filled with delight upon seeing the display in full bloom. Of some 300 rose plants, including not only climbers, the best of which was Paul's Scarlet Climber, and polyanthas, among which Greta Khuis and Marie Pavie were outstanding sorts, the latter a most inveterate bloomer, but also, probably most distinguished among the roses in this new garden, tree roses planted only a year ago last autumn, but with heads of generous spread and twelve to eighteen blooms to a plant. After a delightful luncheon, Mr. Ferrin explained that it did not require a million dollars or a large piece of property to have roses; he modestly presented this little example of how he had started with a swamp and in less than two short years demonstrated the possibility of having a rose garden on a 30x100-foot lot within easy reach of a modest purse. The demonstration was indeed a delightful example. Mr. Ferrin called in turn upon the newly elected president of the American Rose Society, who gave a short address on "Popularizing the Rose."

J. Horace McFarland was introduced as the editor of the Rose Annual, and presented several groups of the best roses and those especially adapted for use as shrubs. F. L. Atkins was introduced as the father of the tree roses that Mr. Ferrin had planted, and he demonstrated to the audience how tree roses may be successfully grown.

Rose Show Visited.

Returning through Auburn, the party visited the scene of the rose show, which was staged in the Chamber of Commerce the following day, and as the party left the town it was impressed with the completeness of Auburn hospitality, by hearing the chimes from a neighboring church peal forth "The End of a Perfect Day."

Officers Visit Rochester.

In this little 2-day journey the officers of the American Rose Society felt themselves fortunate in being able to visit the Rochester rose show. For more than one generation has Rochester been known as the Flower city, but it remained for the young blood of the present day of floral enterprises to put Rochester on the map again, rosewise. Through the capable career of this organization, started by a master hand within the last two years and stimulated into active service by the rose patron of these parts, Dr. E. M. Mills, it has grown until its rose shows of this year make a triumph for extent and quality. Other people have much to learn, but when you can get close to 1,000 people to come out of a night and study your roses, to say nothing of the arduous labors of staging such shows on the part of many of the busy business men and hustling housewives, you have certainly made great progress and, so far as appeared to some of the visitors, it would seem as though Rochester would soon take the lead.

John Dunbar, of the park department, with his assistant, Mr. Dukelow, used two entire tables to display climbers and species of bush roses in extensive varieties, clearly labeled. Outstanding among the exhibits by the amateurs was a huge bowl of Old Gold, a stately display of Paul's Scarlet Climber and a charming vase of Souvenir de Claudius Pernet.

Among the few nurserymen in attendance were Charles Maloy, an integral part of the former firm of Ellwanger & Barry; Albert L. Shepard, secretary of the Rochester Rose Society; Mr. Glenn, now with James Vick's Sons, and Mr. Baird, all busy boosters among the larger group who are making the Rochester Rose Society the largest in the Empire state. BIG GATHERING AT DALLAS.

Texas Florists Look for Large Crowd.

The annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association attracts members of the trade not only of the Lone Star state, but from all over the south as well. And not a few come from north of the Mason and Dixon line. In point of numbers and in interest, the Texas conventions have attained a rank of their own among state gatherings. This year's meeting, to be held at Dallas July 5 to 7, promises to maintain the reputation established by the Loan Star florists in previous years.

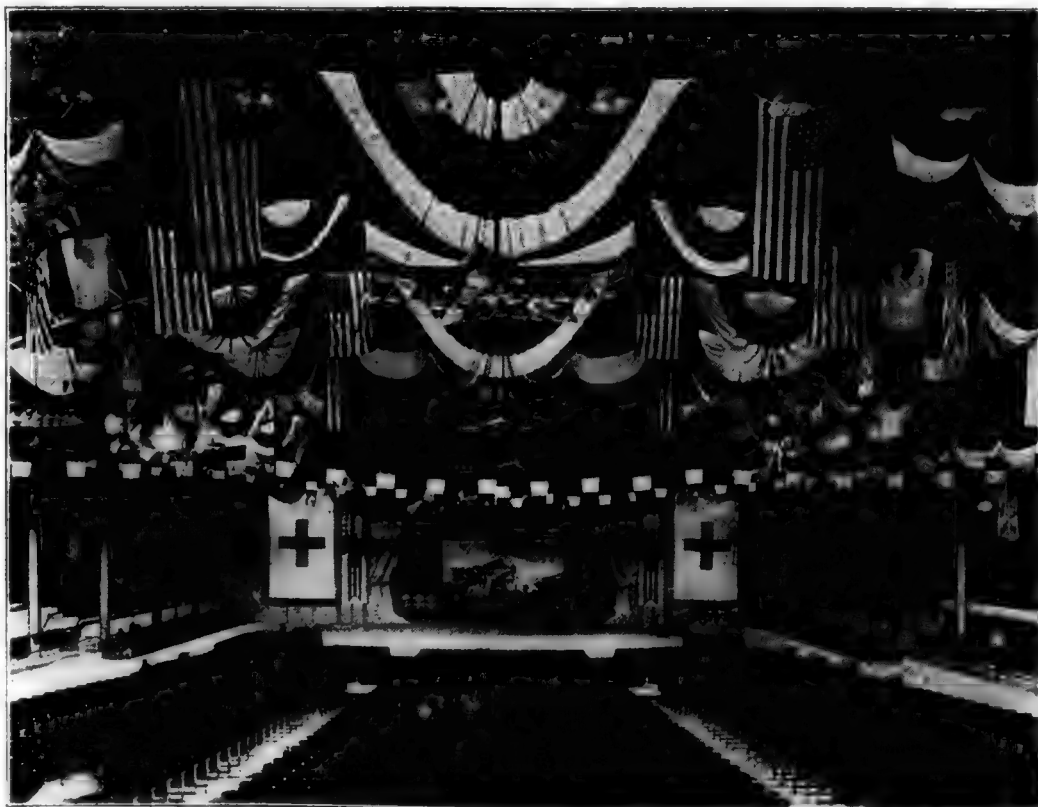

The city of Dallas has long used the slogan, "The City of the Hour," as expressing its position as a leading community in the southwest. No other city in Texas, at least, has shown such rapid growth in recent years, and its spirit is likened by those who have visited it as akin to the briskness of larger urban centers in the northern latitudes of the country. Though in point of population, according to the 1920 census, Dallas is about 2,500 souls behind San Antonio in point of size—it may have made up the difference in the two years since the census—in rapidity of growth its progress is unparalleled in the southwest. From 1900 to 1910 it more than doubled its population, and from 1910 to 1920 it came near repeating the feat. Dallas today has a population close to 160,000. The exact figure of the 1920 census was 158,976. The illustration on page 27, which gives a view of the skyline of Dallas, indicates better than words are able, how metropolitan a community this Texas city has become.

Many Exhibits Expected.

Not only has the city merits which will make a trip to the convention well worth while, but arrangements for accommodating the meeting will provide for a bigger one than has yet been held. The illustration showing the interior of the convention hall indicates how many must attend ere the room will be crowded. The convention is to be held in the Fair Park Coliseum, where space for trade exhibits and for visitors' accommodation has been provided on a large scale. There is an abundance of room for the trade displays, and an exhibit of any size can be accommodated. A considerable number of supply houses and greenhouse equipment manufacturers have already made reservations for large displays, for this is considered a first-rate opportunity to get in touch with the trade of the southwest. Space will be furnished free to exhibitors, but each one is expected to stage his own display and care for it throughout the convention.

The present head of the Texas State Florists' Association is one whose presence at the helm assures a meeting full of energy and enthusiasm. The gathering at Fort Worth in 1920 is bright in the memories of those who attended it, and its success was chiefly due to Verner J. Davis. At that time he was described as "the man behind the Texas florists' biggest convention." The coming Dallas convention, with Mr. Davis as presiding officer, is expected to add to the renown of the Lone Star state organization. Vice-President Henry Greve is also exceedingly active in making preparations for the gathering, which will begin on Wednesday, the day after the Fourth of July holiday, and continue till Friday. The veteran secretary and treasurer, Louis J. Tackett, adds assurance of a successful gathering from his experience and skill in the important post he holds. Firms who wish to reserve space for a display on persons who wish to learn more regarding the meeting can do so by communicating with Mr. Tackett, at Fort Worth, Tex.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Unusual Support.

The publicity committee is pleased to observe a little more than ordinary enthusiasm in the work of the campaign, considering the time of year. As will be seen from the subscription returns herewith, the campaign is a live issue in the thorough acceptance of the term. These returns really may be considered as our "honor roll," and while, perhaps, none of the amounts recorded seem big, they are important as units in the fund's maintenance. Of the items recorded, mention might be made of the $25 per month subscription of John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, made direct to the campaign, and segregated from other subscriptions to publicity work made by this firm. A substantial subscription is also recorded as from J. C. Vaughan, Chicago.

In the past week the secretary's office has been busy sending out memoranda of subscriptions to a number of subscribers. It is earnestly hoped that these memoranda—one hates to call them "bills"—will receive immediate attention. It is a case of "money makes the mare go" with the committee and, with money in hand, they are prepared to carry out their plans for what they consider the best advertising to be obtained in the magazines—and it should always be remembered that the advertising pages of the best magazines are laid out and the forms closed for a particular issue many weeks in advance of dates of publication.

Club Meeting.

The June meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Strickler, at Engleside, in the form of a garden party. Their gardens of herbaceous plants are considered among the best in this section and they were a mass of bloom. Considerable space is devoted to vegetables under the Skinner system of irrigation, and a succession of crops from frost to frost is the rule.

About thirty-five members were present and a most enjoyable time was had. H. K. Rohrer presided. Three new members were elected. On motion of Charles B. Herr, colors will be adopted by the club and pennants procured to be used on visiting trips. On motion by B. F. Barr, the club voted $25 toward the fund being raised by Pennsylvania nurserymen for fighting the Japanese beetle.

The club picnic in August will be held on Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Barr's lawn, the date to be announced later.

In July the club will be the guests of the Reading Florists' Club.

After the meeting refreshments were served by the hostess. H. K. R.

HAIL HAVOC AT OMAHA.

One of the most severe and freakish hail storms ever encountered at Omaha, Neb., struck there June 18, at 6 p. m., and in a few moments had damaged the place of Ammett Hooze to the tune of $2,000, breaking, among other things, between 8,000 and 9,000 feet of glass, none of which was insured. Lewis Henderson lost between 3,000 and 4,000 feet of glass, but it was fully insured. Louis Zadina suffered the loss of from 300 to 400 broken panes; this was insured. Robinson's Greenhouses, at Waterloo, Ia., lost 400 panes of glass. T. E. E.

PEONY MEN MEET

PEONY SOCIETY'S CONVENTION.

Proves Most Successful.

The American Peony Society, in co-operation with the Ontario Peony Society and the London Horticultural Society, held the nineteenth annual exhibition in the large armories, London, Ont., June 16 and 17.

The armories, which form a most difficult place to decorate, were delightfully entrancing, with the thousands of peonies, large and small, in all colors of old and new varieties, and with, last but not least, the large quantity of numbered seedlings.

Arthur H. Fewkes, president of the society, at the annual banquet, held at the Tecumseh House, was loud in his praises of the local societies for obtaining such facilities for the show. He said that of all the shows he had attended, this was the first one which had been efficient enough to allow the judging to be done by daylight.

Bertrand H. Farr asserted that of all the seventeen peony shows he has attended, this year's was the top-notch in quantity and quality.

Elect Officers.

At the business meeting held the night of June 17, numerous items of importance to the peony grower were discussed. There was a lengthy discussion on some method of registering peonies, so that there would not be several names in different parts of the country for the same peony. Professor Crowe, of Guelph, gave an interesting talk on a method of registering fruits, and wondered if the system described would be applicable to the peony growers.

The local committees for this show were headed by K. Casselman, Gordon Philips, J. C. Middleton, W. E. Saunders and S. F. Wood.

The election of officers took place, with the following results: President, A. H. Fewkes, reelected; vice-president, W. H. Thurlow, West Newbury, Mass.; treasurer, Dr. W. E. Upjohn, Augusta, Mich.; recording secretary, W. F. Christman, Minneapolis; corresponding secretary, W. E. Saunders, London, Ont., and director, James Boyd, Haverford, reelected.

St. Paul, Minn., is the lucky place to be chosen for the peony exhibition for next year.

Decisions of the Judges.

The results of the judging in classes open to commercial growers were as follows:

Not more than 100 named varieties, double, one bloom each—W. H. Thurlow, West Newbury, first; F. L. Green, Greenwood, second, and T. H. Hill, London, third.

Ten named varieties, double, three blooms each—W. H. Thurlow, West Newbury, first, and M. E. Blacklock, Meadowvale, second.

Twenty blooms, double, named, white or cream, one variety—M. E. Blacklock, Meadowvale, on Baroness Schroeder, first, and T. H. Hill, London, on Madame Emile Lemoine, second.

Twenty blooms, double, named, light pink or pink and cream, one variety—M. E. Blacklock, Meadowvale, on Venus Kelway, first, and W. H. Thurlow, West Newbury, on Sarah Bernhardt, second.

Twenty blooms, double, named, dark pink, one variety—T. H. Hill, London, on Madame Forel, first, and M. E. Blacklock, Meadowvale, on Claire Dubois, second.

Twenty blooms, double, named, red or crimson, one variety—M. E. Blacklock, Meadowvale, on Felix Crousse, first, and T. H. Hill, London, on Louis Van Houtte, second.

Six blooms, double, named, any variety—Henry S. Cooper, Kenosha, Wis., on La Perle, first, and A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., second.

One bloom, double, named, any variety—W. H. Thurlow, West Newbury, on Avalanche, first, and J. C. Fairley, London, on Soulangue, second.

Representing various types of flower. There was a fine display, but no prize was given.

Japanese and single varieties, three of each—H. M. Rolph, Markham, first, and S. F. Wood, London, second, the best exhibits of this class being King of England, Gypsy and Japanese.

New varieties, introduced since 1905—A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., first, and Lee R. Bonnewitz, Van Wert, O., second.

Best blooms of ten varieties—A. P. Saunders, on La France, first; W. H. Thurlow, on La Lorraine, second; A. P. Saunders, on Keiway Queen, third; A. P. Saunders, on Miss Solway, fourth; A. P. Saunders, on Bayadere, fifth; H. Bartley, London, on Venus, Kelway, sixth, and W. H. Thurlow, on Mont Blanc, Lemoine, seventh.

Seedling class—Honorable mention to A. M. Brand, of Faribault, Minn., for his seedlings: No. 20-22, a faint pink; 20-27, a light pink, and 20-23, a pure white. Honorable mention to W. H. Thurlow, of West Newbury, for his seedlings: No. 19, a dark rose-colored peony, quite odoriferous; 18, an excellent specimen of good lasting qualities; Katherine Havemeyer, pink, lighter than 18, and President Wilson, light pink. Honorable mention to Professor Saunders on No. 8-77, which is of a delightful rose color. Special mention to H. M. Rolph, Markham, Ont., for his Japanese seedling exhibition.

Collection of double peonies, one of each, rating 9.0 and over—W. H. Thurlow, West Newbury, first.

GROWERS BANQUET

CHICAGO GROWERS BANQUET.

Officers Elected.

At the business meeting held in conjunction with the third annual banquet of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago at the Randolph hotel, June 15, the election of officers for the coming year was the principal business taken up. Those elected were as follows: President, Peter Pearson; vice-president, George J. Ball; secretary, Otto H. Amling; treasurer, Paul Amling. The executive board lost one member, Walter Amling, whose term expired this year. Andrew Benson was elected in Mr. Amling's place for a term of three years.

It was voted that the president of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago should represent that organization at Kansas City in the event that the national growers hold a meeting in that city during the S. A. F. convention, August 15 to 17. It was also decided to dispense with further meetings of the organization until September, giving the members a respite of two months. The business session then came to an end, and the members acted on the suggestion of Joseph Kohout that they "return to the ladies," and the banquet and entertainment were on.

An excellent dinner was served to approximately 100 people. The tables were attractively decorated with ferns and carnations, while two immense vases of peonies adorned the speakers' table. Those attending were given a delightful surprise by seeing at this late season a box of jonquils and two boxes of hyacinths in full bloom. The plants were grown by Peter Pearson and were held back by him for the occasion by being placed in a cold storage warehouse for about two months.

Many of those present responded to the request of the president that they say a few words for the organization. Among these were Loren Miller, Carl E. Roth and Herman Schiller, president, secretary and ex-president respectively of the Up-Town Chicago Association, all of whom spoke in high praise of the growers' organization and in particular of its president, Peter Pearson, whose untiring efforts and zeal in behalf of the organization they thought unequaled.

Advertising Shown.

A great many points were brought out in regard to the recent advertising which was done for Mothers' day and Memorial day. A number of slides were shown of the advertisements that had been run in the daily papers prior to these days. Slides were also shown of the advertising for Christmas, graduation, June brides and the "brides of other Junes." New business creators were also shown, such as bon voyage bouquets, etc.

Walter McGee, who returned in February from a three years' trip abroad, spoke on his experience in the Old World. Mr. McGee recalled the fact that most of the growing in Europe is being done outdoors and that the glass area there per acre is much smaller than it is in this country.

Complete Plan of the Range of the St. Louis Rose Co., of Which Two Houses Are Now in Course of Erection.

Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, and B. Katzwinkle, of Mendota, Ill., were present and made pleasing remarks regarding the organization.

The entertainment committee, composed of Peter Pearson, Rudolph Ellsworth and Andrew Benson, received commendation for the entertainment provided for the evening. Eddie Kavanah, Hamilton Walton, of the Orpheum circuit, and Eddie McIntyre were engaged and produced much merriment for the audience. Eddie Kavanah sang a number of new selections. Hamilton Walton mimicked a conversation between an Irishman and a Chinaman when the former attempted to get his laundry from the latter. Mr. Walton introduced many other stunts in mimicry, some of them quite difficult. Eddie McIntyre appeared in "Drafted." Dancing was enjoyed till late in the evening.

MEETING A MARKET'S NEEDS.

Corporate Enterprise Extends Field.

The era of corporate enterprises has added a new aspect to production and selling in this trade as well as in others. Today, those who do business with a larger vision are not content merely in finding a market for what they have to sell; they find what the market wants and then proceed to get it to sell. Instances of this in the florists' trade are not so generally known as are those in other fields, since writers in the popular magazines cite the latter, while few, even in the trade, are aware of the former. But the case might be mentioned of a large wholesale firm in one of the principal markets, which found its supply of roses ample, but its consignors of carnations too few; so a carnation range within a few hours' train ride of the market was bought, so that its output would be available to the firm. Another case might be cited, too, of a wholesale house, in another city, which found itself in a similar condition and which, when none of its rose consignors was willing to put even part of his houses into carnations, bought a range devoted to roses and then changed its crop to carnations.

Most Recent Instance.

More recent than either of the preceding is the case of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. This company has been expanding rapidly in St. Louis since its organization a few years ago. It first received particular attention when, in 1919, finding the building then occupied too small for its business, the company purchased property two doors east and erected its own building, one of the best adapted to the florists' business in the west. Continuing expansion, in 1920 the men connected with the company purchased a range of glass consisting of more than 40,000 feet, on five acres of land, which is devoted entirely to potted plants, a much desired addition to the cut flowers which were received from consignors.

In January of this year the company came to the conclusion that, in order to handle its local and shipping trade properly, a larger supply of roses was needed. In the St. Louis district this item of stock has never been given glass area proportionate to the demand. So the directors of the company decided to build a large range devoted entirely to roses.

After several months spent in inspecting possible locations, one that was thought among the most ideal was found at Larimore Station, on the Burlington railroad. The St. Louis Rose Co. was formed, and its first act was to purchase twenty-three acres of land at Larimore. The officers and directors of the new company are as follows: President, Louis A. Hoerr; vice-president, David S. Geddis; secretary and treasurer, Roland M. Hoerr; directors, S. H. Campbell and Paul Hranicka.

After the company was organized and the land secured, M. C. Wright, head of the western organization of the Lord & Burnham Co., was invited to come down from Chicago to visit the property and prepare plans for a modern rose range. The contract was soon signed and two houses, each sixty feet seven inches wide and 400 feet long, are expected to be completed and planted by July, so that the roses will be ready to supply next season's trade. As may be seen from the accompanying illustration, the plan is to include in the range six houses of the size mentioned. The two middle houses are being put up now, and it is expected that two houses will be added at a time, one on each side of the first pair. In this way a balanced lay-out will be preserved, making for economy in handling and heating. The range is to be composed of six houses of Lord & Burnham's most modern type of style and construction. When they are completed the supply of roses in the St. Louis market will be enlarged and the ability of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. to meet its customers' requirements will be enhanced.

SCRANTON, PA., CLUB TRAVELS.

To Bloomsburg for Meeting.

The florists of Bloomsburg, Pa., and vicinity, including Charles H. Dillon, A. Underwood, J. C. Stradling and E. J. LeDue, invited the Scranton Florists' Club to Bloomsburg for an outing and field day June 14, at the Bloomsburg Country Club. The club gladly accepted this kind invitation and sixty motored or entrained to this, one of the most delightful spots on the face of the earth. William MacDonald, who has traveled extensively over our country, including the far west, says he has failed to find any view surpassing that from the Bloomsburg Country Club. The writer calls to mind the view from Mount Royal, Montreal, which is conceded to be the most beautiful and extended view to be seen anywhere; this Bloomsburg view is a close second.

Fine Day and Fine Time.

The day was ideal and the route through the different cities and villages of the 60-mile drive in the noted Wyoming valley and along the Susquehanna river, over fine paved roads, was most delightful. The welcome extended by the Bloomsburg florists was royal in every way. On opening the large double doors to the clubroom, our eyes feasted on beautifully decorated tables and a log brightly blazing in the open fireplace. The outing was of the basket picnic type, each family or group being furnished with a table with a fine centerpiece, products of the Bloomsburg greenhouses, and the Bloomsburg florists passed hot coffee, ice cream and delicious Bloomsburg cookies. They had liberally and wonderfully provided for our entertainment. The Scranton Florists' Club pronounced it one of the best outings ever.

Scrantonites had the privilege of visiting the extensive greenhouses of C. H. Dillon, comprising 100,000 feet of glass and situated on the hillside; those of A. Underwood, about 20,000 feet, and of J. C. Stradling, with 25,000 feet. These ranges gave us an idea of where our Bloomsburg cut flowers and plants are grown. But few availed themselves of the 10-mile trip on to Danville to visit the place of E. J. LeDuc.

Business Session on Porch.

The business session was held on the large veranda of the club house, where the climate and the beautiful outlook were ideal.

In the absence of the president, B. E. Cokely, who is away on a vacation for two months, and T. B. McClintock, first vice-president, the meeting was called to order by Charles H. Dillon, second vice-president, who also conducted the business session, which, in the main, was routine. The matters concerning the coming fall show and the closing of all florists' shops on Wednesday afternoons during July, August and September, were discussed and all points approved.

The thanks and appreciation of the club were extended to the Bloomsburg florists for the splendid time.

The Bloomsburg florists and those contingent to Bloomsburg who are members of the club, extended the invitation for us to join them next year in September for an outing and also to make it an annual affair; this was accepted most heartily. Plans were laid for our outings in July, August and September of this year. John Hill, whose hospitality we enjoyed on two occasions last year, invited us to come for our July gathering to the beautiful grounds adjacent to the placid Lily lake.

After the business session a baseball game was entered into most energetically; the Scranton nine vs. the Bloomsburg nine. The Scranton boys won by a score of 27 to 26. You can believe it was some game. Charles Goudy, representing the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, umpired, and, from the little he knows about it, you can imagine the fun.

portunity to gain a theoretical and practical knowledge of gardening under proper supervision. An announcement of the course is now being prepared by the Massachusetts Agricultural College and will be made public shortly.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market has improved to the extent that for several days shipments have been lighter, and the demand has seemed better, taking clearances into account. The only comfort to be taken from the situation, however, is that, for the time being, values of a few items have advanced. Peonies have passed and there is nothing on the horizon at present to disturb conditions; but this is not saying much, as gladioli may arrive any time in quantity, together with asters. As regards the quality of the latter, reports are not favorable. The aster disease is showing in many localities. Japanese irises are arriving, and it is expected that this item will be a factor in the market for a week or two.

Roses are in good supply and prices have advanced a little, owing to the diminished supply of other commodities. American Beauty is plentiful and moves rather steadily within the price range of $20 to $40 per hundred. Hybrid teas, too, are plentiful, but little stock over the fancy grade is available; the price range is $2 to $6 per hundred for the ordinary run of grades, with tops going as high as $12 per hundred. Warm, muggy weather is playing havoc with the quality of these.

Carnations are abundant, but there is little good stock in evidence. The few good flowers that arrive command $3 per hundred, but the bulk of sales is at the $2 mark. Growers are cleaning out their benches, and quality in carnations need not now be looked for until the new crop comes in.

Cattleyas continue in good supply, but the demand for them is only moderate. The price range is $35 to $75 per hundred for the general run of arrivals, with $100 and $125 for specials and good hybrids.

White lilies are not overplentiful, but the demand for them is light, at $10 to $12 per hundred; and, by the way, it is necessary to compete with arrivals of Lilium regale from outside plantings. Lily of the valley continues druggy and much stock is left over from day to day.

Sweet peas are about finished, although a little stock, cut with a liberal supply of haulm, is available. Herbaceous flowers are plentiful, but clean up fairly well. There is a wide choice, embracing gaillardias, calendulas, delphiniums, stocks, pansies, gypsophila, daisies, veronicas, thrift, centaureas, cornflowers, schizanthus, coreopsis, pyrethrum, candytuft, gladioli, Japanese iris, mignonette and campanulas.

Various Notes.

Alfred T. Bunyard, the Madison avenue florist, was operated on in the Post Graduate hospital May 16 for appendicitis. He is reported as doing splendidly since the operation.

Hans Plath, of San Francisco, has been looking around the trade establishments for the last few days. He sails Saturday, June 24, for Europe.

GARDENERS PLAN

GARDENERS TO CONVENE.

The plans are now well under way for the annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners, which will be held this year in Boston, September 12 to 15.

President Robert Cameron, of Ipswich, Mass., has selected the following convention committees, of which W. N. Craig, of Brookline, Mass., ex-president of the association, is general chairman: Banquet and entertainment committee—Andrew Rogers, chairman; James Methven, William Downs, Stewart A. Forbes, Henry Stewart, A. P. Dewar, L. B. Whyte, Gordon P. Stewart, John G. Duguid, William Till, Percival C. Veinot and James Donald. Program committee—Patrick W. Burke, chairman; W. D. Nicholson, John Morris, W. D. Coutts, Thomas H. Westwood, Peter Arnott and Donald McKenzie. Ladies' reception committee—Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy, chairman; Mrs. W. N. Craig, Mrs. William Anderson, Mrs. George Stewart, Mrs. Duncan Finlayson and Mrs. Andrew Rogers. Finance committee—William Kennedy, chairman; Frank Murray, Peter Miller, William Anderson, George F. Stewart, Eric Wetterlow, Herbert W. Clarke, William R. Thornhill and John L. Russell. Transportation committee—Walter H. Golby, chairman; Julius Heurlin, Duncan Finlayson, Alfred E. Parsons, William C. Rust, James Marlborough, B. Hammond Tracy and James Wheeler. Publicity committee—William N. Craig, chairman; Gustave Thommen and E. I. Farrington.

The members of the association in and around Boston are most enthusiastic to make the 1922 convention, which will be the second convention of the National Association of Gardeners to be held in that city, a rousing success, to show how the association has progressed since the first Boston convention was held there.

Interesting and instructive trips to inspect the many fine estates and historic landmarks of that part of New England, where the convention will be held, are being arranged, as well as lively business sessions for the discussion of problems of vital interest to the members of the gardening profession.

The proposed course for training men in the gardening profession, which is to be established at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., under the supervision of a committee of the National Association of Gardeners and the college authorities, was adopted recently by the board of trustees and directors of the National Association of Gardeners. This decision was unanimous, as the board of trustees and directors believe the association is taking a step in the right direction in giving the men interested in making gardening their life profession an op-rists' Club record an attendance of three generations of a member's family at one of its meetings. At the last meeting Anton Schultheis, with his 80-year-old father, and "Spike," his son, vice-president of the club, were conspicuous among those present.

The Henshaw Floral Co. is now displaying a fine lot of English and continental pottery at its auxiliary quarters in the Eighteenth street market.

Joseph S. Fenrich is closing his residence and moving to his summer quarters at Bradley beach, from which point he will commute daily to New York. J. H. P.

Sydney B. Wertheimer has just returned from a trip abroad, during which he visited the principal European markets. Mr. Wertheimer suggested a number of original ideas to the European manufacturers, which have been admirably carried out, and Wertheimer Bros. promise the trade a number of surprising innovations for the fall season. Mr. Wertheimer states that, in his opinion, chiffons will be none too plentiful when the fall season opens, as many of the manufacturers, not having confidence in the advance in raw silk, did not mount their looms, causing a shortage of the finished goods. The silk market has shown remarkable firmness, due, as many explained, to the civil disturbances and floods in China. The two mills of Wertheimer Bros. are now busily operating on ribbon and chiffon fabrics for the fall demand. Mr. Wertheimer states that the advance orders booked from the florists' trade indicate a healthy condition and prospects of exceptionally good fall business.

THE INGENIOUS FLORIST.

Some trades are operated by rule, but not so the florists' business. Consequently the florist is a resourceful man, accustomed to meeting situations as they arise, developing methods as he goes along. One successful invention leads to another. So it is in the case of J. C. Rutenschroer, who recently has been calling on florists in the middle west showing them how to save time tying string, much as in the accompanying illustration. Mr. Rutenschroer is a well known grower at Price Hill, Cincinnati. He has two greenhouses and a considerable acreage in dahlias, which are his specialty. Invention is a side line, but it comes naturally to him. He has developed half a dozen labor savers for florists. What he calls the "Nu-wa" tie is a container for a ball of twine, with a loop for the fingers and a knife blade conveniently attached for cutting the twine when the knot is made. A patent has been procured and arrangements for manufacture have been made, as practically every grower who has seen the device has ordered from one to a dozen. The "Nu-Wa" basket hanger is another of Mr. Rutenschroer's inventions, designed for retail trade. It has two unique features, based on well known laws of physics. Hung on a pivot, the basket can be swung outside the porch rail for watering. A level, in principle like that of the carpenter's, is located on the upper arm of the hanger, which is so adjusted to the weight of the basket that the evaporation of water is shown on the level, which, therefore, indicates at a glance whether the basket is wet or dry; in other words, whether or not it needs water. Mr. Rutenschroer has several other inventions that he is in the process of developing and marketing.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Horticultural Society.

The advancing of the date for the June exhibition of roses, strawberries and spring flowers, and a discussion of methods to stop the despoiling of the public parks of this city by thoughtless or malicious persons, were the principal topics that commanded the attention of the members of the Newport Horticultural Society at its regular meeting last week. President Dorward was given discretionary power regarding the changing of the date for the June exhibit; the consensus was that the season was nearly two weeks early and that unless the date is set forward, the display will have passed its zenith.

To overcome the utter disregard for public property, in parks, playgrounds and even in some of the cemeteries, by the public and particularly by the youths of the city, it was suggested that the members of the society do what they can to bring about a change; also that the coöperation of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Boy Scouts be enlisted.

James E. Knott, Jr., of the farm bureau, gave an interesting and instructive talk on the peach tree borer, exhibiting live specimens and telling how to control them by the use of the para-dichlorobenzene treatment, which it is alleged has been proved here to be both efficacious and inexpensive.

On exhibition at the meeting was a vase of the beautiful thornless, red climbing rose, Zefferin Deuhin, for which a cultural certificate was awarded to the grower, James Hooper, gardener to Mrs. Theodore Kane Gibbs.

Various Notes.

After J. J. Whitty had bid $150 for the greenhouses, the entire estate comprising the former summer home of Gordon McKay, on Marine and Ruggles avenues, containing 108,978 square feet of land, was sold at auction last week to C. A. Dingey, of Boston, for $26,222.80. The estate at the last assessment had a tax valuation of $82,000.

J. G. Leikens, Inc., of New York, has leased the store at 110 Bellevue avenue for this season. Robert A. Clifford is in charge.

Oscar Schultz is giving his greenhouses, on Houston avenue, a general overhauling.

John S. Martin reports an unusually busy season in landscape and outdoor work.

Fred P. Webber had the decorations for the commencement exercises at St. George's school last week.

Albert Lawrence has been bringing in some remarkably fine strawberries from his farm in Portsmouth.

Henry Irwin and Donald H. Thompson are serving as petit jurors in the Superior court.

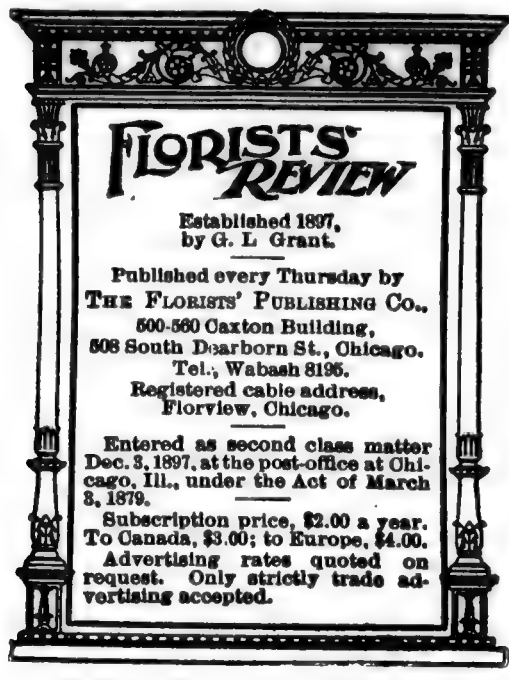

Wenham the Florist has opened his Bellevue avenue store for the summer. The store is that formerly occupied by Bunyard, of New York, but has been thoroughly renovated and redecorated in blue and white. W. H. M.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

New York, N. Y.—Samuel Seligman, who was adjudged bankrupt February 27, has asked for a full discharge, and a hearing on his petition has been set for Wednesday, July 19, at 10 a. m., in the United States District court, in the United States Court House and Post Office building, Manhattan.

Chicago, Ill.—In the court action June 20 regarding the change of receivership of the Continental Seed Co., the resignation of the ancillary receiver was accepted by Judge Ryner upon the agreement of all concerned that the receiver's report was satisfactory and with the provision that objections can be entered within sixty days. The final settlement of lawyers' fees and the appointment of a new receiver was to occur later. The Continental Seed Co. went into receivership about two years ago, with liabilities of $1,000,000 and assets of $100,000.

Memphis, Tenn.—The property of the Memphis Floral Co. was sold at auction Thursday, June 15, in chancery sale. The fixtures, glass, boilers, trade name, delivery truck, lease, claims and accounts were sold for $2,500 to a man by the name of S. Kabakoff, who makes a business of buying whatever is offered for sale in the courts. No information is available as to whether he may have been bidding for someone else. Creditors will get little, if anything, since there was a first mortgage of $2,000 and a second mortgage of $1,500, trustee certificates of over $2,200 and court costs in addition. The last two items are paid out of sales first; so it appears that the holders of the two mortgages, as well as the unsecured creditors, will lose all.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

NOTE the increasing number of offers of bulbs grown on the Pacific coast.

ONE more item formerly imported that is now commercially available in this country is grafted double gypsophila. A California firm has worked up a considerable stock.

If each of us in every case were to do by the other fellow as we would have him do by us, what an uplift this good old trade would get! Most of the complaint clerks could be set to filling orders.

GROWERS of gladiolus bulbs did so well during the selling season that most of them have increased their plantings. Given a fair growing season, there should be enough bulbs to keep everybody selling in the spring of 1923.

It is said the officers of the F. T. D. are considering a proposition from the Saturday Evening Post to employ surplus income from dues in advertising the telegraph delivery service to the millions who read the Post. With the right kind of "copy," it surely would be a profitable use of the money.

DECLARING that statistics prove that two principal reasons for failure in business are lack of ability and lack of capital, a prominent credit man recently asserted that many who succumb for the latter reason might have been saved if they had presented a financial statement to their banker for his judgment as to their proper course. A banker is of much more use than merely to keep your money in safety.

THERE is a decided change for the better in the industrial atmosphere. Dun's review last week said: "Existing business conditions contrast sharply with those of a year ago. Instead of the repressed demands of the earlier period, current buying in various lines reflects breadth and activity, and price advances, rather than declines, now predominate. Less is heard at present than was the case last year of the quieting influence of the near approach of the summer, because there is more work to be accomplished, and it is significant that the question as to whether business has improved has changed to discussion of the extent and scope of the revival."

RECENT increase in the florists' business—which has been considerable—has been the result of new people starting up rather than the growth of old, established concerns, a good many of which are doing well to hold their own in the face of new competition.

THE radio is used by the United States weather bureau to warn ships in the Gulf of Mexico of approaching hurricanes. Some day, perhaps, the Department of Agriculture will broadcast the coming of a hail storm, so that greenhouse owners may get out screens or other protection.

COPIES of the summer advertisements being run in national magazines by the S. A. F. publicity committee have been mailed to florists, so that they may see the value to be received for their contributions to the campaign, if they are subscribers, or see the good work they are not supporting, if they are not subscribers. If you want to help the good work, send a check to Secretary John Young, 43 West Eighteenth street, New York.

"ASK and it shall be given" is easy to say when one has as loyal and helpful a body of readers as has The Review. Last week a request appeared on this page, on behalf of the Library of Congress, for a copy of the issue of November 13, 1919, to complete the file at the national library in Washington. By return mail came such a copy from Charles J. Lensch, Cedar Rapids, Ia., followed later by two others. This note is published so that other readers intending the same assistance will be notified they need not break their files. The prompt help extended by Review readers whenever it is asked is highly appreciated both by the Editor and those who receive such aid.

By the clip sheet supplied to Illinois newspaper editors for their garden departments, J. A. Young, secretary of the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association, is doing a service for florists as well as for nurserymen, since he answers questions and includes short articles on flowers, as well as trees and shrubs, in the material which he sends out. The editors of the newspapers to which the clip sheet is being sent find a keen interest displayed by their readers in the matter and practically everything Mr. Young writes is included in the garden department running in these newspapers, now numbering over 200. The slogan, "Plan to Plant Another Tree," at the top of many of these garden departments is pushing this phase of the horticultural business in the same way that the florists' slogan in the public press pushes another.

JONQUILS have never before graced the Editor's desk in June, but a box of these bulbs in full bloom have occupied that place for the last week. This box is one of three which Peter Pearson put in cold storage in April and took out in time to decorate the tables at the annual banquet of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, June 15. The other two boxes were filled with hyacinths. The hyacinths, after being in cold storage for two months, and the jonquils, after a stay in the vault of six weeks, were in as fine condition as any stock at Easter. How Mr. Pearson retarded bulbous stock for Mothers' day has already been told in these columns. The result of holding these three boxes in the cool room twice as long as the stock sold at Mothers' day gives fuller proof of the possibilities of timing such stock for a given date by this means.

WORKING WITH AMATEURS.

In the American Rose Society's membership of 2,500 only a handful, comparatively, are commercial growers of the flower. Yet this handful constitutes the leaven which has made the organization what it is. The members of the trade who are active in the organization's affairs—and they are among our most prominent—speak enthusiastically of the influence which this society wields in promoting active interest in horticulture, and they point out that the garden clubs of the country could be made likewise helpful to us if the trade entered into their affairs with similar spirit.

Apropos of this opportunity, a florist writes: "While the Syracuse rose show, June 15, was confined almost exclusively to amateur growers, yet one cannot but feel that it is from this zealous and untiring enthusiasm of the amateur that the universal love and popularity of flowers spring. Considering the beauty of the roses on exhibition and the fact that only three days before the show central New York was in the throes of a cloudburst, which devastated farm crops and flooded city gardens, the thirteenth annual rose show was a high tribute to the enthusiasm and determination of a society bound to prosper and create a wider love of flowers as years go on. Wednesday evening, preceding the opening of the show, several of the officers of the American Rose Society gave talks on roses. It was plainly to be seen that behind the love and enthusiasm of the members of the various rose societies throughout the country lies the foundation upon which the professional florist might greatly popularize flowers. I wish I had the ability to convey adequately the possibilities to the trade that such shows might develop."

ISN'T BUSINESS GOOD!

Judged by what we see and hear of other trades, we in the florists' business have been remarkably fortunate this spring. Business with most florists has been excellent. The report is general. It comes from florists all over the United States, like these users of Classified ads:

Cut out advertisement; sold out.—Telegram from W. P. Long, West Grove, Pa., June 17, 1922.

Discontinue aster ad; all sold out.—Telegram from P. J. Potomkin, Muncie, Ind., June 19, 1922.

Please cancel vinca ad; sold out.—E. R. Tauch, Marquette, Mich., June 18, 1922.

Please discontinue ad of fern runners; sold out.—O. L. Schmaltz, St. Joseph, Mo., June 17, 1922.

Please cancel my ads in The Review, as I am sold out.—E. R. Pound, Newark, O., June 17, 1922.

Please drop our fern ad; sold out.—Storm Lake Floral Co., Storm Lake, Ia., June 17, 1922.

Kindly discontinue our advertisement for geraniums and vincas, as we are entirely sold out.—United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y., June 17, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Business was good all last week. The flower parade caused a demand for stock that cleaned up the market. Extra fine gladioli have been arriving, both home-grown and shipped. Wedding work continues good, using all the white flowers that can be found. The month has been above the average for June thus far.

Kansas City's Floral Parade.

The floral parade of Kansas City's park and plan week was a great success. The parade was held Friday afternoon, June 16, and was the main feature in a great celebration commemorating the thirtieth year of parks and boulevards in this city. Thirty years ago the first driveway and pleasure ground for the public were begun. More than 100 cars were entered in the parade. Between the cars at intervals were bands and decorated trucks. Leading the pageant was the executive committee of the park and plan celebration. Next came the mayor's committee, members of the park board, the mayor's own car, the city plan commission and women's executive committee. Then appeared the queen, seated on her throne. The queen's float was artistically designed and executed. It was a long, white body, banked high and wide with white floral sheeting. Pink chrysanthemums, roses and strands of smilax and ferns, trailing roses, arbutus and garlands of pink flowers offset the high-pitched canopy throne. Tipped by a big butterfly, the craft gave almost a boat effect. A floral fountain, with wreaths to represent water spray, formed the group center for the eight maids of honor. All the flowers with which this car was trimmed were artificial.

Fawcett Robinson, designer of the Priests of Pallas floats, and director of the parade, commenting on the pageant said: "I have seen the tournament of roses in Pasadena for twelve years. I have seen the rose show in Portland, Ore., many times. The floats and cars in the floral parade last Wednesday surpassed anything I have seen in those two cities. In color scheme and wealth of flowers, I believe nothing like it has been seen in the United States before, and it will prove we are an artistic, art-loving people. I earnestly hope it will be an annual affair in Kansas City."

William L. Rock's car, decorated with a handsome combination of purple petunias, pink begonias, lavender larkspurs, pink gladioli and hydrangeas, won first prize in class A. This prize was a silver loving cup. The W. L. Rock Flower Co. also had an entry. Lavender predominated in tone effect, artificial mums being used. Two arches of smilax were draped over the body of the store truck. Palms, ferns and assorted plants gave it an appearance of a mass of bloom. Mr. Rock's car was an individual entry, while the truck was the entry for the firm.

The float entered by the Kansas City Florists' Club won first prize in class B. This was a handsomely decorated car and reflected great credit on the club. On either side of the radiator was a flag made of carnations, cornflowers and candytuft. A heart over three feet high was on each side of the car, typifying the Kansas City spirit. Red and white carnations were used for the letters "K. C." around the flag. The radiator was banked with peonies. Peonies were used, too, on the hood of the car. Fenders and running boards were covered with gypsophila and red carnations. On the front were blue larkspurs and delphiniums. The back of the car was a mass of pink gladioli and tamarix. Garlands of roses hung over the windshield and sides. In the center of the car was a large phoenix palm, flanked with pedestal baskets of gladioli. Arbor-vitæ was used for a background on the entire car. The wheels were covered on both sides with pink carnations. All the flowers were put into wet moss, which made them hold up in good shape through the entire four hours of the parade. More than 10,000 flowers were used on the float. These were given by Henry Kusik, John Stevens, the Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co., the T. J. Noll Floral Co., the Stuppy Supply Co., the Pinehurst Floral Co., Ed. A. Humfeld, S. Bryson Ayres and the W. L. Rock Flower Co. Glenn K. Parker designed the float, using his own 7-passenger touring car. R. L. Motes, of the Chandler Floral & Landscape Co., assisted him. Mr. Parker drove the car in the parade. With him were his daughter, Miss Marion Parker, Miss Virginia Hobbs and little Miss Margaret Shirling. The young women threw flowers from the car along the line of march, several thousand blooms being provided for this purpose. The prize won by the Florists' Club with this car was a complete auto camping outfit.

There were less than a dozen entries in the class for natural flowers. The rest of the floats were artificial or combinations of artificial and natural flowers.

The second prize winner in class B was the car entered by the Catholic Women's Club. This was decorated by the W. L. Rock Flower Co.

J. E. Murray & Co. decorated the car of the Women's Commercial Club, which won fourth prize in the same class. This car was trimmed with pink and lavender, using roses, larkspurs and pussy willows for the main features.

Miss Schweiger and William Fitzhugh, of the Alpha Floral Co., decorated three cars for the parade. Miss Schweiger's car was entered by the Kansas City Motor Car Dealers' Association. A globe twelve feet high and nine feet wide, covered with white carnations, represented the world. Down the sides were rows of delphiniums. In front of the radiator was a star of Ophelia roses. From this star, representing a comet, was a streamer of gold tulle caught at the top of the globe by a dragon made of flowers. The wheels of the car were covered with carnations and over each wheel was a wing of white carnations, representing the spirit of the invention. Mr. Fitzhugh decorated the car of the Rotary Club and also that of the Hardware, Implement and Tractor Club. The Rotary float was of blue and yellow flowers. A 6-foot Rotary wheel was made of blue and yellow immortelles, cornflowers and yellow daisies. Fifty balloons were tied to the car. Forty hoops of florists' design wire, wrapped with strips of yellow and blue matting and covered with yellow daisies and artificial blue carnations, were suspended at different angles. The second car decorated by Mr. Fitzhugh was in lavender and white.

The car of W. J. Barnes was greatly admired. It was completely covered with roses and tamarix. Pink, white and lavender were the main tones.

Ed. A. Humfeld decorated a car for Electric park. A foundation of silver cloth was built up with gladioli, delphiniums and rambler roses. Yucca plants were used at the corners. Bows of chiffon and silver ribbon tied these standards.

Edward Ellsworth trimmed the car for the board of trade. Poppies and white flowers were used with sheaves of wheat and pampas grass. The young women in the car wore white capes with collars of poppies and carried white parasols with strands of poppies.

Various Notes.

The Stuppy Supply Co. will have a booth at the S. A. F. convention, August 15 to 17. Supplies and a full line of stock will be displayed.

A social meeting of the Florists' Club was planned for Wednesday night, June 21.

Fred Horst, decorator for A. Newell, has made up several unusual bridal bouquets this month. Instead of holding to the conventional white flowers, he has used colors. The idea was well liked by the customers. For one wedding he made the bride's bouquet of Butterfly roses and valley. Tulle and white satin ribbon were used for the ties. For one bridesmaid the bouquet was of coreopsis, for the other cornflowers, the wedding scheme being blue and yellow.

The Rosery will build three new greenhouses back of the store, Thirty-fifth and Main streets. Mr. Ellsworth intended to keep the space for garden stock, but decided that the greenhouses would be of more value to the store.

Glenn K. Parker and John Stevens were in St. Joseph, Mo., Wednesday, June 14.

George W. and Mrs. Preston, El Reno, Okla.; Andrew L. Dygard, of the Iola Greenhouses, Iola, Kan., and R. L. Isherwood, Pleasant Hill, Mo., were recent visitors. J. E. K.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

With 95 degrees of heat June 16, it was to have been expected that there would be little life in the market, but as a matter of fact last week ended with such large demand that many wholesalers saw the backs of their ice-boxes for the first time in weeks. If the market was not clean at closing time June 17, it was because of the presence of stock useless for school closings, which constituted the bulk of the demand; for funeral work, which ordinarily holds first place, or for weddings, which are a special factor at this season. Also, there were many low-grade carnations which could not be shipped, but all good roses, carnations, lilies, valley, sweet peas, gladioli and other popular items were cleaned out and the market gave evidences that a turn had been made after weeks of oversupply.

With so clean a market at the close of last week, with cooler weather and the height of the commencement season at hand, it was inevitable that the present week should open briskly. Good flowers again commanded stable prices—not high prices, but prices in keeping with the season and the quality of the stock. The appearances are that this week will be more than a good one. It will, in all probability, rank with the best June weeks on record. The month thus far has been one of plenty of sales, but of low values; the penultimate week of the month should, with the changed situation as regards supply, see prices back where they belong.

The close of the open-air season for peonies has been a large factor in strengthening the market. Fresh cut peonies some days ago stopped coming in and the low-grade stock in storage also has been worked off, so that the peonies now on hand are strictly high-grade goods; indeed, they are being held at prices the like of which have not been seen since the first week of the season. These peonies probably will hold out for some time. Most of the houses hope to clean out in June, but one or two have arranged to maintain their supply of peonies into July.

Roses are dropping down to the summer standard, in supply, size of bud, stem and price. There are not nearly so many roses as a fortnight ago, but the average quality is better and the money income is at least as much as the larger quantity produced earlier in the month. The demand for red, white and yellow continues unusually strong.

Carnations are going fast. They have deteriorated so rapidly in the last few weeks that shipping them is precarious, with the result that demand is light and large quantities of low-grade stock have been wasted. Consequently many growers already have stopped shipping and before June is ended carnations will be in small supply.

But as carnations go, gladioli come. They will dominate the market before many weeks have passed. Outdoor flowers are plentiful and some are fine, like Delphinium Belladonna, largely used with gladioli for basket and table work. Candidum lilies are here to take the place of Easter lilies and callas, both less plentiful than ten days ago. Water lilies also have arrived. Valley is in good demand. So are sweet peas, but good stock of the latter is not plentiful.

Various Notes.

Otto Amling has taken over the greenhouse establishment of his cousin, Herbert Amling, at Maywood, and has renamed it the Proviso Floral Co. This is the establishment made famous by the late W. H. Amling, who for many years was one of the market's most successful growers of chrysanthemums and sweet peas. Herbert Amling has gone to Pana to join his brothers.

Last week a prosperous-looking individual touched two local florists for sums aggregating $125. In one place he represented himself as Philip Breitmeyer's brother-in-law and gave a check on a bank at Flint, Mich., which subsequently came back marked "No account." At the other place he claimed to be Mr. Breitmeyer himself and, no one present knowing the difference, borrowed all the cash in the register.

Acting on the advice of his physician, W. J. Smyth changed his vacation plans almost on the eve of departure for the Yellowstone by automobile. The doctor said Mr. Smyth's blood pressure was too high to make such a trip advisable and sent him, instead, to the quiet of the Smyth summer home at Lake Marie, Antioch, Ill. The western tour may be made later.

Miss Zandra Anderson, who for some years has handled the office work of the John Kruchten Co., resigned last week and was married June 17. She was one of the most popular young ladies in the market, for her efficiency as well as her Arthur M. Anderson, formerly textiles buyer and later merchandise manager for the A. L. Randall Co., now has general supervision of the florists' supplies and equipment departments.

John P. Risch says that last week was one long to be remembered. June 16 he and Mrs. Risch celebrated their silver wedding anniversary and June 14 their eldest daughter, Marie, became the wife of Raymond O'Donnell, of Detroit. There were large gatherings of friends for each event.

Champ Weiland, greenhouse manager of the Weiland-Risch Co., has been critically ill at St. Francis hospital, Evanston. An intestinal operation has, apparently, saved his life, as he is better now.

George J. Ball arrived home June 17 from his trip to the Pacific coast. He visited the sweet pea ranches of C. C. Morse & Co., the L. D. Waller Seed Co. and the W. Atlee Burpee Co., as well as a number of other places of trade interest, stopping at Salt Lake City to see Robert Miller's, to him, surprisingly extensive range at Farmington. Compelled to limit his sight-seeing by pressure of business duties at home this year, Mr. Ball contemplates making a similar and longer excursion annually hereafter.

Charles Klehm, who handles the peony business of Klehm's Nurseries, has had a busy season. The stock bloomed and was cut this year under unusually favorable weather conditions, and the quantity now in storage is the greatest this grower of many years' experience ever has had for June and July. Usually one of the big rooms in the Western Cold Storage Warehouse contains the Klehm stock, but this year one room was not enough. Mr. Klehm needs more space than most of them use for peonies, because he does not bunch his flowers before they are put in the buckets of water in the warehouse.

The officers, employees and friends of Peter Reinberg, Inc., picnicked June 18 at the grove of Gust. Ehrhardt, the Park Ridge grower. Nearly 100 were present. There were games of many kinds and prizes enough so that every woman and every child received at least one trophy or gift. The weather was delightful and, as the saying goes, an enjoyable time was had by all.

ciation is providing its growers with a paper tape on which the grower's number is printed. The idea is to have a piece of this tape tied in with each bunch of flowers. It is primarily for the purpose of making certain that each grower's consignments are properly credited, but it has the advantage of identifying the grower's stock for the buyer. If you like the carnations from No. 711 you ask for them the next time you buy. That affords an incentive to grow good stock.

of blooming hyacinths that graced the tables in the window of Kunze's fruit store, on Randolph street, where many persons expressed their curiosity regarding such flowers at so late a date. The box of jonquils occupies the Editor's desk at The Review office. Mr. Pearson put the hyacinths in cold storage about April 15 and the jonquils about May 1. The former, therefore, were in the cool room two months and the latter six weeks. When they came out they were in excellent shape and created a good deal of comment at the growers' banquet, since this experiment, on top of Mr. Pearson's success in retarding stock for Mothers' day by the same means, shows possibilities of timing bulbous stock not availed of before.

The American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. is making an investigation of heating different sizes and types of greenhouses, for the benefit of commercial growers. When it is completed a meter system will be established in the greenhouses at Pana, Ill., which will measure the amount of steam required to heat the connected, the disconnected, and the wide houses. This data will give the grower accurate information as to how much steam is needed to heat practically every type of greenhouse. It will be the first time that this has been tried and should enable the grower to make more accurate cost records and tell him what kind of coal is most productive, as well as what type of house is easiest to heat.

Among last week's visitors was A. A. Harper, of Pine Bluff, Ark., who was here on his way to and from the Milwaukee convention of advertising men.

Mrs. Ray W. Holt, who is associated with her husband in the operation of the Kirkwood Floral Co., of Des Moines, Ia., is at Hotel La Salle for a week on her way to New York, where she will attend Max Schling's school for retail florists.

J. W. Rodgers, of Dayton, O., who is a large buyer here, spent several days on the market last week.

The Market.

The demand for flowers last week was exceptionally good, as the market was practically cleaned up at the close of business Saturday night. Roses in the market were of an exceptionally fine quality for this time of the year, the varieties being Butterfly, Columbia, Crusader, Yellow Ophelia, White Ophelia, Premier, Pilgrim, Richmond and a large quantity of Mrs. Aaron Ward. American Beauties were also much in demand and they moved out at moderate prices. The supply of carnations far exceeded the demand and some of the carnations were not of good quality, the season being late. There were, however, plenty of novelty flowers in the market, such as sweet williams, blue lace flowers, foxglove, coreopsis and rambler sprays. These outdoor flowers were greeted by the florists with pleasure, as it gave them an opportunity of supplying their customers with something just a little different. A large quantity of field-grown gladioli was being received and these moved out daily at good prices. The demand for Easter lilies far exceeded the supply and each day's supply was cleaned up. Plenty of yellow daisies are in the market at the present time. Lilies of the valley have been exceptionally scarce. There has been a demand for valley almost every day. Some wonderful cattleyas are also being received in the market and are being used up nicely in corsage work. Huckleberry, one of the summer decorative greens, is also in the market and is being moved out nicely. The supply of coontie leaves is over for this season. The southern shippers have reported that their new crop will be ready for shipment about August 1.

From all indications, business for the month of June will exceed the same month of last year. The majority of florists state that business continues good.

Various Notes.

Louis Robert Eltcher will graduate from the Mars high school, Friday evening, June 23. Mr. Eltcher is the son of Louis Eltcher, one of the members of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co.

A severe hail storm visited sections of the suburbs of Pittsburgh Saturday evening, June 17. From all reports, the damage was not great. However, the Blind Floral Co. suffered a loss to its range, and many of the growers having garden flowers reported their losses heavy.

The wholesale houses in Pittsburgh have changed their closing time and will hereafter close at 5 p. m., daylight saving time. Please bear this in mind.

H. J. H.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Monday and Tuesday of last week were days of heavy supply. Then the supply lightened, making better values possible. The week closed with about the same amount of business as the week before—a much lighter supply and better average prices. Roses are the leading flowers. The better grades are in active demand at moderate prices. The shorts do nothing much. Carnations are declining; the good ones are fewer and prices are lower.

Outdoor sweet peas are more plentiful. Some of them are excellent, but some are only fair. Peonies are still in moderate supply. Easter lilies are selling pretty well at low prices. There is much valley and there are some orchids. Larkspur is much less plentiful, but all other outdoor flowers are so numerous that it is necessary to limit their number in the wholesale commission houses.

The first outdoor gladioli from nearby have come—only a few, but the indoor blooms will keep the market supplied until they become more plentiful. Calla lilies are about over. There is still snapdragon.

An Opportunity.

Philadelphia has long been recognized as a great horticultural center. To maintain and improve our position, alertness is necessary. There is a new enterprise on foot—the planting out of bench-grown roses in the open air for growing on for spring sales. Already over 200,000 2-year-old roses in a dozen or more varieties have been planted out elsewhere for selling next fall or next spring, as seems best. What will Philadelphia do?

A Big Job.

The Car Builders' Association held its annual convention from Wednesday, June 14, to Wednesday, June 21, on the so-called "million dollar" pier, at Atlantic City. The term, annual, should be modified, because last year there was no convention. The railroads having gone "busted," it was not worth while.

This year's exhibition is on an even larger scale than usual, despite the fact Wholesale Only.

S. S. Pennock in an interview said, June 17: "I think that a wholesale florist should sell to the trade only. It is good business for him to do so. This conclusion is certain when reasoning from higher motives, fairness, comradeship and so on, but, taken from purely selfish motives, the same result is reached. The older I get, the clearer it becomes that anything which interrupts the regular course of business is a disadvantage. To make up a funeral design for a friend may gain a few dollars at the moment, but it is almost certain to lose $10 or $15 by diverting effort from the proper object, that of wholesaling flowers."

Society, the Botanical Club and the Botanical Society of Pennsylvania in the garden of Dr. W. S. Pilling, in Pelham, Saturday afternoon, June 17. The garden was lovely, presenting a natural picture that gave great pleasure. The ceremonies consisted of an address of welcome by Dr. Pilling, a talk on some of the many flowers in bloom by Alexander McIlwee, landscape gardener of Fairmount park, and a stroll through the garden under the guidance of the gardener, Charles Pettiford. The features of the garden were: A beautifully kept lawn, shaded by rare trees; the evergreens, an archway, covered by Dorothy Perkins in full bloom; a fountainette, a rock garden, larkspurs, Canterbury bells and the finely colored sweet williams.

Baseball.

A feeling of satisfaction pervades the floral world that properly organized baseball is assured. The schedule covers a season of seven weeks from Thursday, July 6, until Monday, August 21, inclusive. Each of the eight teams is scheduled to play home and travel games with every other team, fourteen games in all.

The manager of each team is asked to file a list of his players with the secretary of the Florists' Club, Robert Kift, before July 6, such list to include the names only of those who are enrolled to play for their respective teams.

Various Notes.

Joseph M. Kennedy succeeded William C. Lynch as manager of the Philadelphia Growers' Cut Flower Market June 17. No reason is given for the retirement of Mr. Lynch, who has managed the market since it was organized last fall. Mr. Kennedy, who has been with the market as second in command, is receiving many good wishes on his promotion.

George Aeugle, manager of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., was taken to St. Luke's hospital June 12. June 17 Mr. Aeugle was pronounced decidedly better by the doctor in charge.

Harry Bayersdorfer motored from Atlantic City to New York and back for a wedding recently. Mr. Bayersdorfer says there were lots of flowers at this wedding.

ROWE'S RAMBLES.

Rose shows, peony shows and iris shows seem to have used much of the spare time of the flower growers of central and eastern Pennsylvania. Large cities and little towns, and most of the towns in between, have staged exhibits the last few weeks. Many of these shows were worthy of cities like New York and Chicago, and even the smallest did credit to the promoters.

Of the larger rose displays, that of the society of Harrisburg stands well up among the foremost of the early June exhibitions. The display was staged at the public library, with something like seventy-five exhibitors competing for first and second prizes, and awards of merit, given during the three days, June 8 to 10.

of blooms came from Breeze Hill, the private garden of J. Horace McFarland, editor of the American Rose Annual, who is an enthusiastic and noted rosarian. American roses and English roses, varieties from France, Japan and China, were shown in this section, which was for educational purposes only, and not in competition.

A collection shown by Lewis Haenlin included some of the newest introductions and took first prize for general display, together with two prizes for best varieties.

The judges were S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, and J. W. Brinton, of Harrisburg. E. F. R.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Two storms last week, one the severest in the history of central New York, damaged outdoor crops considerably. While greenhouses suffered little injury, the work of removing debris occupied some time, according to L. J. Mulhauser, of J. Mulhauser & Son.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

REPORT of the annual meeting of the California Association of Nurserymen appears in the Nursery Trade Department of this issue.

PASADENA, CAL.

C. L. Washburn has been in town, on a visit to his son, E. B. Washburn, inspecting the palm ranch at Sierra Madre. He left for Chicago June 16.

A visit to the Bassett & Washburn palm-growing establishment, at Sierra Madre, is declared a treat for any florist by Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., who was there June 15.

Closing exercises and graduations in the Pasadena high school and the Marlborough school, in Los Angeles, brought wonderful business to Siebrecht's House of Flowers. One solid load of flowers was sent to the Los Angeles school.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The glut of gladioli continues and some of the wholesale houses are sending out the flowers at ridiculously low prices. The plentiful supply allows retailers to make a good show for little money and many of them are taking advantage of it. A few fine dahlias are in, but they are not much of a feature as yet. Outdoor roses are scarce and indoor roses are good and plentiful. Carnations from inside meet a ready market, but the outdoor flowers are poor and sell cheaply.

There is still a good demand for delphiniums, Canterbury bells and snapdragons, as they make a good showing and are cheap. Greens are scarce. Wholesalers say that shipping is not up to the average for this time of the year.

Various Notes.

T. Honda, of Enomoto & Co., San Francisco and Redwood City, was a visitor last week. Mr. Honda says that business is good with his firm and notes that, although some stock is cheaper at San Francisco, better prices are being obtained for gladioli, possibly on account of better shipping facilities. S. Murata was showing Mr. Honda about.

Edward Reynolds, of George Hall & Co., is taking a trip to Bakersfield, Fresno and other points north of the Tehachapi. Shipping business is picking up well here.

Paul Miller reports a considerable improvement in shipping at the place of the California Floral Co.

Ralph L. Scott, of Portland, Ore., has arrived in Los Angeles again and says that this time he intends to stay.

Darling's Shop has some especially fine window displays in choice gladioli and roses.

D. Stathatos, of the Broadway Florist, says he is more than satisfied with the way business has been coming, especially in funeral work.

Albert Goldenson opened his new store at Sixth avenue and Spring street

June 10 and in the first few days noted a fine transient business. This is a wonderfully busy corner and should prove a success. He is still running the store on West Sixth street.

Howard & Smith report several good decorations from the retail store, at Ninth and Olive.

The funeral of a well known pioneer led to big business for Wright's Flower Shop last week.

At the store of the Alexandria Florist a fine window decoration of the new gladiolus, Virginia, was noted.

H. R. R.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Trade activities for the last ten days have been quiet. Little counter trade is being done, while some graduation exercises have taken place during the month of June, and also some doings in the order of the Eastern Star. Outdoor flowers are becoming more plentiful every day. Delphiniums are showing in the market. Gaillardias and coreopsis are running second. Peonies are past their prime, and during the hot weather they were not in prime condition.

Various Notes.

Gus Weisenstein, of the Lakewood Greenhouses, Milwaukie, Ore., intends to leave for Chicago with his family the latter part of June. He will combine business with pleasure.

Peter Bisset, of the United States Department of Agriculture, was a recent visitor. He was shown the various activities in horticultural lines, and enjoyed a wonderful trip over our famous highway.

Martin & Forbes are showing some fine zinnias in their store on Washington street.

The rose festival board is lining the "Summer Flowers"

Summer business has been getting better year after year. A few years ago we used to say that if we could close our stores and greenhouses on the 30th of June and not open them again until the 10th of September, we could make lots of money.

This condition has been changing from year to year until now the majority of us not only pay expenses, but make some money during the summer months. We have to work a great deal harder to do business during the summer season, but it pays to do it. The advertising and sales effort put forth in July and August is a great factor in bringing us a good autumn business.

We have recognized for several years the possibilities of summer business and have brought on crops of Roses to take care of this demand. These Roses are of the fine double varieties like Premier and Russell, that ship well, keep well, and are sure to please your customers.

The pick of the market in Asters, Statice, Gladioli, Shasta Daisies and all summer flowers come to our store.

We are factory agents, have the best lines, and most reasonable prices, on all florists' supplies.

florists up for the general display of the annual rose festival. Many florists are coming well prepared to make a grand display.

C. H. Perkins, of Jackson & Perkins, Newark, N. J., rolled into this city a few days ago with the order of the Mystic Shrine. He was shown a few of the leading rose establishments and continued his trip to the San Francisco Shriner convention. N. V. H.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Flowers are so plentiful that they are almost a drug in the market. The demand is fairly good, though it is not large enough to consume the flood of stock, which includes an abundance of roses, carnations, valley, gladioli, peonies, gillyflowers, cornflowers, snapdragons, marigolds, gypsophila, pansies, irises, baby roses and baby gladioli, an endless variety of sweet peas in pastel shades and quantities of strawflowers. There are some ranunculi. Gardenias are fairly plentiful and there are just enough orchids to meet all demands.

Various Notes.

The national convention of Shriners was the big event of the week of June 11. The number of Shriners was variously estimated at from 150,000 to 300,000. It is safe, however, to say that there must have been well on to a quarter of a million visitors in town, for many Rotarians visited San Francisco on their way from their national convention in Los Angeles, and a large number of the Shriners were accompanied by their wives and families.

Like all the other business firms, the florists decorated their stores lavishly to welcome the Shriners. Either by design or lucky chance, Joseph's building was painted red and green a few months ago, in Oriental tones. This florist added great window boxes of broom in a mass of yellow flowers, and obtained the Shrine colors in a striking way. Large green and red flower stands were also filled with yellow broom.

Many of the other florists displayed the Shrine colors and emblems in their windows, including Shellgrain & Ritter, Darbee's, the Suzanne Floral Co., the Conservatory, Brown & Kennedy and many others.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. obtained a strikingly decorative effect from red, yellow and green bunting arranged perpendicularly on their building, and by Shrine window decorations.

Podesta & Baldocchi had a mammoth Shrine fez placed on each of the large box trees which stand outside their building.

F. C. Jaeger & Son transformed their window into an "oasis," which had real desert atmosphere, the waste of sand being redeemed by a lake of mirror glass with real cactus growing around it and a camel drinking. A procession of kewpie Shriners, linked by the traditional rope, formed a caravan wending its way toward tents and pyramids. The Shrine emblem was done in red and white roses and yellow marigolds. Both the Jaegers are members of Islam Temple and were busy all week, welcoming incoming visitors at the ferries and joining in parades.

A distinguished Shriner visitor was Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia. Mr. Grakelow was registered at the St. Francis hotel. He is looked up to with great deference, even by Shriners who do not know his fame as a florist. In four years, it is stated, Mr. Grakelow will be Imperial Potentate.

Tommy Luke, of Smith's Flower Shop, Portland, Ore., a member of Al Kader Temple, called on his many friends. "I'm looking out for business, too," he said. "Portland is the rose city, and I'm arranging for some stock for our rose show, which takes place June 23."

Samuel Lundy, Denver, visited San Francisco with the Shriners.

W. A. Miller, of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, arrived with the Sunflower state delegation and called on Pelicano, Rossi & Co. and other friends.

"Everybody's busy celebrating with the Shriners, and no one is worrying about business," said J. A. Axell, in commenting upon the glut in the market.

"This kind of thing makes for a holiday," declared Frank Thatcher, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co. "Who wants to say that they've been busy with funeral work when the Shriners are here?" And, without further comment, Mr. Thatcher continued sticking carnations into a fine "Rest in Peace" offering.

Brown & Kennedy had the order to decorate the headquarters of the Knights of Columbus during Shrine

Fred Bertrand had the busiest week of his career during the Shriners' visit. He is a high-up Mason and a Shriner; so the duties of hospitality had to be attended to. Also, after twenty years of married life, Mrs. Bertrand presented him with a fine son and heir, and congratulations were showered on the fortunate couple. As if that were not enough, Mr. Bertrand virtually closed a deal for a new store which he plans to open in Fresno, July 1. This company had a number of Shriner dinner decorations at some of the leading hotels.

Julius Eppstein had many orders for floral baskets during Shrine week.

The Terminal Florist has been kept busy by the presence of the United States fleet in the harbor, as the stewards use many flowers for table decorations. This store also decorated the Matsonia, which carried a boatload of Shriners to Honolulu at the conclusion of the convention. Beside every plate in the dining hall was a boutonniere, ordered by the Navigation Co.

Mr. Copeland, of the Misses Hannon store, received a letter from the chairman of the women's reception committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, expressing keen appreciation of the beauty and novelty of the favors, which were much commented on by the visiting women. Mrs. Copeland made 1,000 corsage bouquets, which were given to the real estate women visitors at a special tea. M. M.

A. C. Brown and partner, florists, nurserymen and seedsmen of Hammond, B. C., and operating four retail stores in Vancouver, B. C., were visitors last week at the Kenwood Greenhouses, which are electrically heated. They made the trip to Tacoma especially to inspect this range, being interested in this method of heating, after reading an article on "Heating by Wire" in a recent number of The Review. They are planning to add more glass to their plant at Hammond.

A number of Seattle florists were visitors at the Tacoma florists' meeting recently, and plans were made for the two organizations to accept an invitation from the Portland florists to visit the latter at the time of the rose carnival, June 20 to 23. A good time was promised, and about seventy to eighty florists will be able to attend.

The officers elected at the meeting of the Tacoma Rose Society Monday night, June 12, at the home of Dr. Hiram DePuy, 3621 North Twenty-sixth street, were as follows: President, U. S. Lodge; vice-presidents, C. E. Curran, Sydney Anderson, Earl E. Paskill, Mrs. E. Peterson, Mrs. Lina Swartz, George Duncan; secretary, Miss Jennie M. Jones; treasurer, Dr. H. G. Rawlings. The trustees were chosen as follows: Dr. Hiram DePuy, James A. Hayes, J. H. Gordan and Carl S. Morisse. Another meeting of the society was called for lines, transient trade and the usual decorative and funeral activities.

The one new offering of last week was water lilies and these have been made the subject of window displays. The demand opened well and the light supply has been moved out in good order. The quality of peonies being delivered here at the present time leaves little to be desired, the white stock being especially fine. The cut of carnations is heavier at the present time, with quality all that could be asked. There has been a fair shipping demand on this offering, according to one grower, due to the fact that the crop in certain inter-mountain sections has failed to reach the total predicted for it.

There has been some increase in home decorations, as the June weddings have increased, but the individual jobs this year have failed to reach the size of those seen here last season. Orchids are again in heavy enough supply to care for the general trade demand and some nice stock is being received at this time.

As for potted plants, there has been a slow demand for ferns and only those items intended for replanting have met with any really good demand. Some nice hydrangeas are being offered at this time, but the outdoor production has increased to such an extent that the sale of this item has been slowed up.

Various Notes.

The delegation of Shriners on their way to the San Francisco convention brought many trade visitors through Seattle last week, and a number of these found time to call on a few of the shops. Among those that stopped were Donald Carmichael, of Boston. The middle western states sent especially large delegations.

Fine weather conditions have served to increase greatly the cut of seasonal flowers for Henry Morgan, and Morgan's Flower Shop has been showing some fine stock of late.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop developed a series of attractive pictures in the three smaller windows on the Union street side of this shop. One of these showed a pond with a bubbling fountain and gold fish swimming in it, backed by a nearly life-size statue of a negro boy holding a fishing pole. The next was a pool backed by a miniature farmyard, with a straw-thatched shed housing a number of ducklings, and the third showed a double waterfall dropping into a pool containing the first water lilies shown here this season. AMERICAN AT LONDON SHOW.

Wister Gives Impressions.

John C. Wister, president of the American Iris Society and secretary of the American Rose Society, who is spending the summer abroad gathering material for the lectures with which he supplements his activities as landscape designer, visited the Chelsea show of the Royal Horticultural Society last month, while in London. Of it he wrote the following record of his impressions for the Gardeners' Chronicle, of London:

"For an American gardener a visit to the Chelsea show is a rare and happy privilege, an inspiring lesson in the possibilities of making a flower show not only instructive, but beautiful, and also, alas! a source of despair in seeing so many exquisite plants which will not survive our cold winters and hot summers.

"In recent years we have had in the eastern United States many fine flower shows of which we are proud, but even the large size of our biggest national shows had left me unprepared for any show on such a gigantic scale as the 1922 Chelsea exhibition. We hope that the rapidly growing interest in horticulture may make such shows possible with us in the not far distant future.

"The show impressed me on account of its great size, its artistic arrangement, the high quality of the exhibits and the tremendous variety of the plant material used. I liked it all so much that it is difficult for me to try to pick out the best things to comment on, for, with the possible exception of the big Carter clock and the garden surrounded by bright pink dwarf rhododendrons, I liked everything.

"As my greatest interest is in the iris, I naturally spent much time in R. Wallace & Co.'s garden, which received such high honors. This garden was a gem of design and color arrangement, and contained two of the newest irises of English origin, Asia and Prospero, side by side with the French varieties, Ambassadeur and Souvenir de Mme. Gaudichau, and the American variety, Lent A. Williamson. Lady Foster, Crusader and Neptune also appeared to good advantage here, but Dominion had suffered from too hard forcing, and the flower was not characteristic. The lilies, azaleas and regeliocyclis iris blended well with the iris and made a perfect whole.

"The Bunyard iris garden was also a source of delight to me, and here Ambassadeur, Lord of June, Magnifica and Isolene stood out as giants among some of the older sorts. In the Perry and Whitelegg exhibits, regeliocyclis iris were the feature.

"Perhaps even more fascinating than the iris gardens were the rock gardens, something we hardly know in America. I liked Mr. Wood's conception best, because it was so simple that it reminded me of some exquisite bits of wild landscape in some of our New Hampshire or Vermont hills.

"R. Tucker & Sons' garden contained a greater variety of plant material and was also beautiful; in fact, nearly all the rock gardens struck me as being wonderfully artistic, as well as showing many exquisite little plants, and I spent more time with them than I did in some of the formal gardens.

"The rhododendrons were finer than any I had ever seen, the big bushes in one of the big tents and in R. Wallace & Co.'s natural garden being the most striking. To rhododendron experts the cut flowers were probably equally interesting.

"Another group of plants that I admired particularly were the clematis hybrids exhibited by G. Jackman & Co. and one or two others. European gardeners are used to these, but to an American all but one or two varieties are totally new. I do not know how they would grow under our conditions.

American Roses.

"We are used to fine displays of roses in our American shows, and perhaps for this reason the roses did not impress me so much as some of the other flowers. They were of splendid quality on the first day, and I was glad to see some of the triumphs of two of America's greatest rose breeders, Dr. Van Fleet and W. H. Walsh, both of whom have died within the past few months. The varieties noted were American Pillar, Hiawatha, Paradise, Excelsa and Minnehaha. We are glad that these are appreciated in England, where so many fine roses have originated. The American rose, Los Angeles, which won a gold medal at Bagatelle in 1918, was also noted in good condition, as were several other American varieties. The number of varieties exhibited was much greater than in most American shows.

"Paul's Scarlet Climber was seen in wonderful form, but I did not think the flowers of the beautiful new Souvenir de Claudius Pernet were quite as fine as those staged in our New York show last March.

"There were so many new roses to attract attention that I can comment on only a few. I liked Padre the best, but admired also Rev. F. Page Roberts; the singles, Mrs. Oakley Fisher and Pink Delight, and the polyanthas, Queen Wilhelmina and La Reine Elizabeth.

"The tulips were gorgeous. I have never seen a display as fine as Dobbie & Co.'s, although I have seen as fine flowers in small quantities in our shows at home. As usual, I liked La Tulipe Noire the best of all, and Dom Pedro, Faust and Louis XIV were noted in fine condition in many exhibits.

Carnations a Surprise.

"Carnations surprised me, because I had always supposed the American carnation was far superior to those grown in Europe. True, there was a liberal sprinkling of American varieties, like Enchantress Supreme, Beacon, Benora and White Wonder, all of excellent quality, and also a few of Laddie, which were not nearly so big as with us, but the British varieties seemed equally good. I made no notes on varieties, but Thor impressed me the most. We have no commercially important carnation of the color of Marion Wilson, which I liked very much. I was also impressed with the fact that at least one breeder was emphasizing the fragrance of his new varieties—a point forgotten by many American breeders in the race after size and productiveness.

"The sweet peas were as fine as those shown by Burpee in New York, and were shown in greater quantity. The display of orchids was larger than usually seen with us, with the exception of the recent special orchid exhibitions put on by A. C. Burrage, president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society."

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"Passed by the censor," commented Louis J. Reuter, representing Clarence U. Liggit in an official capacity and acting unofficially as observer for the horticultural department of a leading state university on the subject of the chrysanthemum midge. The comment was made at the Sunnyside Greenhouses, Schenectady, N. Y., and was well pleasing to the Felthousen boys, Edward and Raymond. Discussing the topic of geraniums later with the founder of this establishment, E. V. B. Felthousen, this gentleman expressed regret that the popular taste for geraniums has dwindled to Beaute Poitevine, Ricard and S. A. Nutt in the order named. While there seems no present likelihood of waning popularity in these, a larger variety would tend to strengthen the interest. A tour among the growers in Albany county found planting of chrysanthemums somewhat late. A watchful eye is being kept for the first signs of an invasion of the midge, familiarized through the information furnished by The Review. "This information is of inestimable value to all interested," observed our versatile confrere.

What were admitted by critics to be the most elaborate furnishings seen in many seasons were produced at a recent wedding where the Danker Flower Shop, Albany, N. Y., had carte blanche instructions to do its best. Commenting upon the general trend of the public taste, Fred A. Danker observed that it is refreshing to see the leaning towards the natural in flowers, giving due credit to the effort of the S. A. F. publicity committee in helping to bring this leaning about.

"How nice!" observed Conrad C. Gindra, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., referring to a compliment paid the establishment by a sweet Vassar graduate, who dropped in to pay her bill and say "A" revoir" for the summer vacation. " 'Tis such statements as this that make one feel compensated for any extra trouble encountered during the season, and which enable us to prepare for such another season or possibly an even better one," continued Mr. Gindra.

The Saltford Flower Shop, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., is highly pleased with the season's business. Since the shop caters to Bennett School and Vassar College, the clientele embraces the most exacting and, at the same time, appreciative members. The veteran George Saltford has the stock of cattleyas and cypripediums finer than ever.

J. Coonan & Son, Haverstraw, N. Y., mentioned that the strike in the brick trade apparently had no effect upon their business; they attribute the fact to the hold the love for flowers has upon the public—a testing time, so to speak.

"Wedding and funeral work has called for our best efforts continuously since Memorial day," commented Walter Dunning, of the Rosendale Flower Shop, Schenectady, N. Y. Friends in the trade will be glad to know that Influence

The biggest influence, I begin to believe, is the influence we don't know is influencing us.

T'other evening I was up to my friend Tut's apartment and found, much to my surprise, that over in the end of one room he had a regular work bench where he makes real sawdust and shavings.

When I came to look at it closely, found that the top was finely mahoganized.

Seemed like a fool thing to have a swell finish like that, and I said so.

"So everybody thinks," Tut replied, "but say, George, it's not just for looks. It was done to make me do things better. With that finish, I don't slam-bang things around on it so.

It makes me go kind o' careful like. Its fine finish is there all the time, looking me square in the eye, and by gummy if it hasn't made me make things finer and better than I ever thought I could. It never says anything to me, but it certainly does influence me."

The next day I saw to it that several things where the boys do their work were made a lot better than they seemingly need to be. Already it's had its influence. If talking hasn't helped, try influencing.

Proprietor Henry Eberhardt is again on the job.

"Right on the job," observed James Snyder, Rhinebeck, N. Y., speaking for the violet growers. "Another strike," added Edward Coon, "with the season's returns in and the balance struck."

The Allen Greenhouse Co., Hudson,

N. Y., finds the close of the planting season the climax of a prosperous run. This old-established firm aims to exceed previous records, and it apparently succeeds.

While the planting season is over, in favored spots there is much to be done in the region of Lake George and Lake Champlain, according to Henry HAMMOND ON FLAG DAY.

Flag day was celebrated by Benjamin Hammond, June 14, by his sending to each boy and girl in the schools of Beacon a card bearing the Stars and Stripes in colors, a message from Mr. Hammond on "Flag Day—What Is It For?" and a poem for the occasion by Joseph B. Gilder.

In his Flag day message, Mr. Hammond said, regarding what the day is for: "Not simply to show a flag made of red, white and blue colors, but to impress upon the minds of both young and old the aspiration of Americanism—the best accomplishment possible for human beings to attain. Respect every-day labor, cultivate the virtues, fidelity, patience, industry and fearlessness; protect and help the weak; sympathize with the suffering; whatever your duty is, do it well; keep your promises; pay your debts; and be polite to all. This should be what Flag day teaches. Americanism for every boy and girl in the United States of America."

On the back of the card was a sentence to fathers from Mr. Hammond: "Remember that the training of the child determines the character of the nation."

PANSY VISITS PEONIES.

Out at Libertyville, Ill., an hour's ride north of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Healy make a specialty of peonies for cut flowers at Liberty Villa. Recently Miss Anna Grace Sawyer, whose flower store at 4044 West Madison street, conducted under the name of the Pansy Florist, is familiar to many in the trade, paid a visit to Liberty Villa. The impressions of a retail seller of the peonies grown at Liberty Villa should be as interesting to the trade as they were to a local west side newspaper, the Garfieldian, which devoted half a column, June 9, to the following story by Miss Sawyer:

It will be of great interest to many of us who know Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Healy to know of the progress they are making in peony culture on their peony fields at Libertyville, Ill. It is a pleasure to visit their suburban home, so aptly named Liberty Villa. Not only is the "villa" a delight to those who visit there, but the grounds are charming, radiating with colors and fragrance from numberless varieties of summer flowers.

Interest centers just now in their peony fields, which are producing wonderful flowers. In the deep pink varieties are seen the Souvenir de l'Exposition Universelle and others which they are testing out. In the light colors are Madame Crousse, Victoria and festiva maxima.

One type brings a smile of recollection, the old-fashioned "granny type," and near to it grows the Liberty Villa Special, a very modern type (having its origin here) with lavender petals and cream, rose and red vein centers. Now, that is joy, to create a new type of flower!

Other new varieties are under culture—one a lovely flesh pink as full and round as a chrysanthemum, as yet unnamed; it doubtless will be among the new varieties offered this coming year. There is one lovely red peony out there that interests me most; they are improving this variety. It is expanding in size, growing in fragrance and in the rich luster of its crimson hue; this is to be called the May C. Healy peony.

Many of these interesting varieties and splendid types of peonies may be seen at the Pansy Florist, who has for several years handled the Liberty Villa peonies.

They have been scattering their fragrance and beauty into the different homes of our little city, and had they audible voices or we keener ears, they could have spoken for themselves as to their origin.

People often ask me, "Where do all these flowers grow?" So this is the answer when it comes to peonies.

One word about how to keep your cut peonies longest: After they reach your home, cut each stem off several inches—under water preferably—and try not to let them stand in the draft, as that will wither any flower. To give the peonies fresh cold water and a clip of the stem both night and morning will lengthen their freshness and beauty.

South Dakota's daughters was married to a sun-browned farmer of the Sunshine state.

It was a setting more gorgeous than any prince or millionaire has ever had in which to solemnize his nuptials, and the opinion of the thousands of guests was that the bride was a jewel that fitted well in the setting.

You will be interested in knowing the fortunate couple. The bride is now Mrs. Miller, and the groom is the husband of his wife. If that isn't sufficient, we can add that Mrs. Miller was formerly Miss Wilhelm. Both are residents of Wagner, S. D.

Thousands Attend.

This wedding was an auspicious beginning for Peony week at the field. This paradise of flowers had its guardian angels removed and the gates were open to the public. None went away without a bunch of fragrant beauties. A conservative estimate of the attendance would be around 10,000 folks, aside from the local people. People came from South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota and Montana. Transients almost invariably took in the field as a point of interest not to be overlooked.

On the whole, Peony week was a complete success and gave everyone concerned no little pleasure. A large percentage of this was pleasure obtained by the delight of the "Boys of '61," who were in convention at Yankton. They were sent home loaded with buds that kept warm memories in their hearts.

The Market.

 The wholesale markets last week experienced some good business. The continued hot weather did not help the trade any, but the social activities and the closing of schools made a fairly good week for the retailers; little outside of funeral work is expected from now on.

 Stock of all kinds has been plentiful, but of poor quality. Rose stock plainly shows the effect of the hot days. Columbia has the call over the other varieties.
Ophelia and Butterfly are fairly good.
Milady is exceedingly poor at present.

White Killarney was much in demand all last week.

Carnations are plentiful, but the quality is not so good as it was a few weeks ago. Gladioli are in demand, and from now on will be the leaders in cut flowers. Outdoor stock of all kinds is suffering from the want of a good, soaking rain. Delphiniums were much in demand all last week. Easter lilies are plentiful and sell well.

Valley, too, had a big call all last week. In the daily call for outdoor stock were coreopsis, phlox, cornflowers and daisies.

Among the greens, flat ferns are becoming scarce, but there is plenty of good asparagus and smilax to be had daily.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting June 12, at the Mission Inn, at 8 p. m. The evening was quite hot and the attendance, consequently, was small. After the transaction of all business and a discussion of the season's business, it was decided not to hold any meetings during the summer months. At the first meeting in October a fall campaign will be undertaken to obtain new members and to induce members to attend regularly.

The committee in charge of the program of the big midsummer meeting of the St. Louis district of the National Flower Growers' Association, to be held at Rock Island, Ill., July 17 to 18, says that the program is on the press and will be mailed out sometime next week. Ludwig Stapp, J. R. Tuckis, William Goos, Henry Gaethje and the Tri-City Florists' Club have charge of all arrangements, which, they say, are complete. The meeting should attract many and the largest-attended meeting the St. Louis district has ever had is looked for.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Grossart, who were married July 26, 1894, will celebrate their twenty-eighth anniversary next month in their home, at Belleville, Ill. They have two sons, Arno and Fred. Sons and father are members of the St. Louis Florists' Club.

The Florists' Club's trustees, A. W. Gumz, L. Baumann and Oscar Ruff, are at work on the program for the annual florists' picnic, which will take place at Normandy grove July 27. They say that suggestions as to new features from anyone in the trade will be welcomed.

The Sanders Nursery Co. contemplates adding a considerable amount of glass at its range on Henley road this summer. Walter, Frank and Edgar Sanders are making preparations for the work. Oliver K. Sanders has charge of the retail store, on Clara avenue, St. Louis.

Otto M. Roth, out on Geyer road, at Kirkwood, says he will soon have a large daily cut of gladioli. He has a field of 150,000 of all the leading varieties.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle met at the home of Mrs. H. G. Berning, on McPherson avenue, June 14. The day was a hot one and the ladies decided not to meet next month, but to wait for cooler weather.

greenhouse men, say that they had a most successful planting season and are pretty well cleaned out. The Bourdet Floral Co., Albert Senger and J. Matthis also report a fine plant trade this season.

Secretary J. J. Beneke, of the Florists' Club, reports several new applications for membership filed with him; with these, he reports, the membership will increase to 260; the drive is on for 275 by August 1.

Park Commissioner F. W. Pape and Superintendent E. Strehle have their hands full these hot summer nights; it is their responsibility to see that all attending the municipal opera, in Forest park, are made comfortable.

Florists who pay heavy school taxes should take the matter up with the present school board regarding invitations for commencement. All have lines saying: "Please omit flowers." Years ago school closing week was a heavy one for all florists.

says that many in the trade contemplate

The Market.

The market was flooded with stock last week, while the demand was extremely light and much stock went to waste, especially delphiniums, of which there was an enormous oversupply.
These could hardly be moved at any price. Carnations were plentiful, but the quality now is so poor that, if they are not disposed of the day of arrival, they are of little value the next day and naturally they bring little or nothing. It seems impossible to get a good price for any kind of stock. The only way to dispose of it is to cut the price. Storage peonies are now on the market and the quality in most cases is good, while the demand has been quite heavy. Gladioli are scarce; that is, good stock, and when some does arrive it certainly brings a good price. Outdoor peas are beginning to come in, but so far the quantity has been extremely limited. It has been exceedingly hot here, which made it hard to hold stock of any kind any length of time. Roses are arriving only in short and medium grades, which makes it difficult to fill orders, as there is a good call for long-stemmed stock. There has been an extreme shortage of Easter lilies, prices being rather high for this time of year. Outdoor stock of all kinds is increasing in variety daily.

Various Notes.

C. S. Larson, of the Brown Floral Co., Canton, O., was a week-end visitor. The date for the coming Florists' Club picnic as yet has not been set, but will be announced in the near future.
W. A. R.

WORCESTER, MASS.

Numerous weddings took place in and around this city last week, and commencement exercises along with funeral work have kept the florists fairly busy. Flowers that the flower lovers like the best, perennials and choice annuals, come along slowly, although delphiniums, gaillardias, Canterbury bells, Dianthus barbatus and May pinks are on the market in limited quantities. Owing to the severe hot spell, peonies were at their best several days ago. The entire eastern section of this country was swept by a terrific rain storm June 11, accompanied by hail in some places, damaging much glass both in the homes and the greenhouses of commercial growers.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Elizabeth park "Rose" Sunday has been set for June 25. In setting this date, Superintendent Parker names the best time to see rambler roses. The fame of the beauty of Hartford's rose park has spread far and wide, so park officials find, by inquiries from other parts of New England from those who wish to visit Hartford when the roses are in bloom. The season has been a favorable one for the rose plants and the display will equal any of those in previous years. Daily the numbers of people going to Elizabeth park increase.

weddings have added much in the way of keeping the trade busy in an otherwise dull season.

Much damage was done in this vicinity by the heavy wind storms recently, mostly to outside garden truck and tobacco fields. In many cases plants in the field were completely buried, so exceedingly dry has been the soil.

TORONTO, ONT.

Business has been keeping up well for the season of the year. There are a considerable number of funerals, though small, and a number of graduations. Flowers are sufficient for the demand. Peonies have been in abundance; the warm weather appears to have brought them all on at once. This has also tended to shorten the peony season.

The regular meeting of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club was held in its clubrooms June 12, with President McFadden in the chair. Satisfactory results were reported for the week-end advertising and the holiday advertising. Arrangements were made for the picnic July 5. All florists are invited and invitations are being broadcasted to growers and the various societies in Toronto and Hamilton. Several members stated that they would be at the Montreal convention in August. A considerable number decided to motor to Baltimore. J. J. Higgins was elected marshal of the Baltimore trip. Fred Gaffikin and Harry Harman were elected to membership.

Cards are appearing in the windows of many of the florists' shops announce-ing that stores will be closed either Saturday afternoons or Wednesday afternoons. Generally speaking, the downtown florists close at the end of the week and the uptown florists in mid-week.

Miller Florists have now a daily service between their Concord range and the one on Lauder avenue.

The Market.

Market conditions last week continued about the same as those of the week previous. There was a good supply of all seasonable flowers. Carnations are still on the market, but the flowers are small. The supply of good delphinium is limited. Roses are good and the demand for them is fine.

There is a good supply of outdoor flowers, such as cornflowers, larkspur, coreopsis, feverfew, etc. Sweet peas are poor. Gladioli in all varieties are fine and they are a great help at this time of the year. The supply of valley is limited, as is the supply of orchids.

The chairman of the entertainment committee reported that all entertainment was to be dispensed with until fall. Under the head of new business a motion was made and carried to appoint a committee to consider the advisability of staging an amateur dahlia show in the fall. The question box was then taken up and a number of questions were considered. R. W. J.

The Market.

Business dropped off considerably last week and, with the exception of a fair quantity of funeral work, there was little or nothing doing at the stores. Easter lilies and gladioli have been the main crop. A large quantity of outdoor flowers is being used. Included among these are Shasta daisies, some of which are about as large as have ever been seen here; gypsophila, gaillardias, coreopsis, delphiniums and phlox.

Good roses are scarce and are in demand. What few come into the market are quickly taken up for use in wedding work and last week there was a good demand for them for graduation bouquets. Varieties obtainable and desirable are Columbia, Russell, Ophelia, Butterfly and a few Hadley. The prices ranged from $4 per hundred for the short stock to $25 for the best roses.

Easter lilies are good and can be had in large quantities at $8 per hundred. Gladioli are selling at $6, $8 and $10 per hundred, the most popular varieties being America, Schwaben and Mrs. Francis King.

Lily of the valley has been moving fairly well at from $4 to $8 per hundred. Last week a little stephanotis was offered on the market. This is used largely in fine wedding bouquets and brings from 6 cents to 8 cents per cluster.

Various Notes.

Louis E. and Mrs. Hoover celebrated their nineteenth wedding anniversary by taking a trip to Toronto. En route they stopped off at New York and Buffalo, and visited Niagara Falls. On the return trip they stopped off at Albany and went to New York city by boat.

Business has been quite good, considering the weather conditions.

The Idlewild Greenhouses report having good trade in weddings and funeral work. Business, the firm reports, is far better than in June, 1921.

Nell's Flower Shop reports having had a good trade last week in both wedding and funeral work.

The Berclair Greenhouses continue to cut gladioli in large quantities. There is a shortage of good gladioli at the present time for the cut flower stores in town.

The property of the Memphis Floral Co. was sold at auction Thursday, June 15, in chancery sale. The fixtures, glass, boilers, trade name, delivery truck, lease, claims and accounts were sold for $2,500 to a man by the name of S. Kabakoff, who makes a business of buying whatever is offered for sale in the courts. No information is available as to whether he may have been bidding for someone else. Creditors will get little, if anything, since there was a first mortgage of $2,000 and a second mortgage of $1,500, trustee certificates of over $2,200 and court costs in addition. The last two items are paid out of sales first; so it appears that the holders of the two mortgages, as well as the unsecured creditors, will lose all.

NEWARK, N. J.

There is a fair business, because of funeral work, wedding work and a little graduation work. Transient trade is exceedingly slow. Many spring flowers have disappeared from the market. Prices are reasonable, but they are not yet down to the pre-war level.

COLORS IN PLANT BEDS.

Few departments of the florists' work afford such wide latitude, if one cares to use it, as the composition of plant beds. As the bedding-out season approaches many planters find some difficulty in making up their minds as to the best color combination to use. Of course, where there are set schemes of beds, especially of a formal character, the scheme of planting should have been settled last season, so that stocks of suitable plants could be got ready for planting out in the spring, writes J. Coutts, of Kew, in the Gardeners' Chronicle, of London. But in many instances planters have been handicapped by not knowing what they really could manage in this connection. In such cases some simpler arrangement must be substituted for more elaborate schemes; this is, perhaps, just as well, for the simpler arrangement generally proves the most satisfactory in the end.

All bedding arrangements should be as simple as possible, and color harmonies rather than contrasts should be aimed at, says Mr. Coutts, for unless one has a keen sense of color value contrasts are apt to be dangerous. Not everyone is gifted with a keen sense of color, yet, by some study of color values, many pitfalls may be avoided.

He gives a sequence of colors in harmonizing shades. Blues, dark and light, may be grouped with pale yellow and white. These may be followed by pink and then rose, leading up to crimson and scarlet, orange and bright yellow. Pale yellow and white will then lead up to lilac, lavender and purple. Silvery-leaved plants are invaluable for grouping with lilac, lavender and purple colors, and also with scarlet, or, in fact, with almost any color scheme, as it is a much safer arrangement than a too liberal use of white. From the above grouping of colors anyone should be able to plant out many suitable color combinations, and use the available material to the best effect.

Perhaps the most difficult of all bedding schemes is one where there is a formal set of beds, laid out in more or less geometrical lines; in spite of the contention of the so-called natural school that it does not really matter, the fact remains that such a formal garden should be planted in a more or less formal manner. Indeed, this is essential if proportion and balance are to be maintained. Such a scheme need not, however, look stiff and formal, as a light and elegant appearance may be obtained by the use of suitable foliage plants. Most bedding schemes would be greatly improved by a freer use of suitable foliage plants as foils to the brighter subjects.

Another bone of contention is the use of edging plants, some holding that the grass is the best setting for a mass of color, while others contend that an edging of some suitable plant gives the better finish. It really all depends on the size of the beds and the class of plants used. Large beds are generally improved by the use of a suitable edging plant, but in the case of small beds an edging tends to destroy the broad effect. Again, tall plants that do not carry plenty of foliage right down to the ground demand a suitable edging. Care should always be taken to group plants together that present a harmonious effect.

In all bedding arrangements restraint should be the keynote. Two, or at the most three, varieties or kinds of plants are enough to use in any one bed, and not "anything from a hardy annual to a stove plant," as was usual in the past.

GROWING ON POOR SOIL.

A method of crop culture that will maintain high production on infertile Rhode Island soils without the use of stable manure has been announced by the experiment station of the Rhode Island State Agricultural College, at Kingston. The official results of widely varied experiments extending over six years have just been made public and at this time, when the increasing use of motor power and vehicles is curtailing animal by-products, the announcement is especially interesting.

Cabbages, tomatoes and celery were grown on typical Rhode Island soil under a wide variety of treatments, ranging from heavy applications of stable manure to conditions where stable manure was entirely omitted and the crops grown altogether on green manure and chemical fertilizers. Green manures are crops such as clover or rye, that are sown in the late summer and plowed under in early spring to furnish the humus needed by the soil.

The results show conclusively that garden crops can be grown satisfactorily year after year by using clover crops and chemical fertilizers to replace stable manure.

The highest yields were obtained where an application of sixteen tons of manure per acre was supplemented by one-half ton of high-grade chemical fertilizer, but, with the steadily increasing cost of stable manure, it is a question whether the increased yield is sufficient to repay the cost of the stable manure.

Peat used instead of manure to furnish humus gave fairly good results, except with lettuce. In no case did the heavy application of thirty-two tons of stable manure per acre give as high yields as an application of half that amount supplemented by one-half ton of fertilizer chemicals. W. H. M.

POISONED BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

Arsenious oxide, or the ordinary white arsenic of commerce, is the base from which all arsenical insecticides, such as Paris green and arsenate of lead, are made. It is by far the cheapest and also the most concentrated form in which to buy the element arsenic. Because of its injury to foliage, it has not heretofore been successfully used on it. After a great deal of experimenting it was determined that if Bordeaux mixture containing white arsenic were made in such a way that the major portion of the white arsenic went into combination with the copper, and the ratio of copper and arsenic present were within certain limits, a Bordeaux-white-arsenic mixture could be produced which would be safe on foliage, states Wisconsin Horticulture.

The following is the method employed: The arsenic must be superfine; that is, guaranteed to pass through a screen of 250 meshes to the inch. In order to make ten gallons of copper sulphate stock solution, fill the vessel with ten gallons of water and sift into this a mixture of one pound of white arsenic and one pound of hydrated lime. oroughly agitate the mixture and suspend in this solution a sack containing ten pounds of crystal copper sulphate. It is preferable to stir occasionally while the copper sulphate is dissolving. This solution should be made at least twenty-four hours before it is used, and when made it will keep indefinitely. This stock solution should be stirred thoroughly before it is diluted and then it is used in precisely the same way as the stock solution of copper sulphate in making the ordinary Bordeaux mixture; that is, by adding it to an equal amount of a stock solution of lime, made by slaking it in a little water and then diluting so that each gallon of water contains one pound of lime. To make up fifty gallons of this poisoned Bordeaux mixture ready to spray, it is only necessary to take four gallons of each stock solution and after they have been diluted in separate containers to twenty-five gallons, they should be poured into the spray tank simultaneously. This material has the toxic value, per unit of arsenic, equal to the best form of any other arsenic, and has its usual fungicidal value, it is said.

The low cost is, of course, the great advantage in using this formula. It is possible by using it to spray with both fungicide and insecticide at approximately the same cost as that required to spray with an insecticide, such as Paris green or arsenate of lead, alone.

ousting RED SPIDER.

We should like to obtain information as to how to rid our houses of red spider. During the winter months we noticed a few. We tried different forms of nicotine, but they were not effective. Though some of the pests seemed to be killed, there must have been whole families of them in hiding, because in a few days they were thick again. There were carnations in the house. We pulled those out and put in gladioli, thinking the latter would be too tough for the pests, but as the hot weather comes on there are armies of them.

W. G. B.—O.

Red spider flourishes in a hot, dry atmosphere and therefore becomes more troublesome as summer approaches. The pests have obtained such a foothold in your greenhouses that it will not be an easy matter to get rid of them. You must keep a more moist atmosphere, dampening the dry places below the benches. A force of water well directed from a fine spray nozzle will dislodge the spider from the plants. Spraying with a nicotine solution to which has been added a little soft soap to make it adhesive will be effective if you give several applications.

On carnations the salt spray has been used to control red spider with success. Salt sprayers are made for this purpose, being manufactured by a house which caters to greenhouse trade. To combat a bad attack of red spider, it would be advisable to spray at least twice weekly with salt spray.

A Florida reader recently told of using a lime-sulphur spray for combating red spider. The basis of the effectiveness of the lime-sulphur, he stated, is not as a direct poison, but the solution, in drying, leaves a residue that readily oxidizes and produces sulphurous fumes, which destroy the spider even when secluded in protected places. This method might be used when your greenhouse is empty.

STARTING DELPHINIUMS.

If delphiniums are sown in the greenhouse now and planted in the benches, will they bloom next winter?

P. T.—Mo.

Hardy delphiniums might be sown now. A coldframe would be better than the greenhouse in which to sow the seeds, provided some lath shades are used to cover the seed bed until the seedlings germinate. A little shade in the hottest part of the day while the plants are still small is also advisable. These seedlings should be pricked off and placed in sashes and shaded a little until they are established. Later transfer them to nursery rows or beds outdoors during cloudy, moist weather, keeping the soil frequently stirred. These plants will be of a fair size ere fall, but it would have been better for you to have sown your seed under glass in February or even March; then you would have much finer clumps. Seedlings started now will flower, but not so well as would those from seed sown earlier. The plants should be subjected to a good freezing before forcing, and it is not advisable to start them, in your state, before the middle of January, and only then at a low temperature. If you start them earlier, you are liable to lose many plants by damping off.

Be careful not to plant delphiniums in a soil containing too much manure. It is much better to have the soil a little on the poor side, and later assist the plants with a top-dressing of old manure. Successful forcing of larkspurs may not be achieved in one season. The temperature, watering, ventilation and time of starting are all of prime importance. I would state, however, that 1-year clumps force better and are far less liable to damp off than older and heavier field-grown clumps. C. W.

PROFITABLE SNAPDRAGONS.

First planting of snapdragons in benches in the autumn should be about August 1, the plants being in 4-inch pots from seed sown in May. They will grow well in as little as four inches of good soil. From an August planting a good crop can be had in November and December. Except for one or two varieties, the plants will not do much through the dead of winter, but will begin producing in real earnest in March. They are, however, always at their finest and produce in the greatest profusion from April 1 until the last of May. A crop planted in August will produce profitably until June, if given one or two top-dressings and the right care. From a fall planting, say about October 1, the first crop will come in January. It is always well to allow the plants to run up to flower and then pinch them back fairly hard for the next crop. Do not make the common mistake of pinching back the soft shoots, or most of the breaks will come blind. Spring and not winter is the time when snapdragons net the most money.

I should like to ask your advice about the freesia bulbs I forced last winter.
They are still in the pots. Will they,
after being forced, be all right to use

Freesia bulbs can be flowered a second year. When they are through blooming, they should be run somewhat drier and the foliage allowed to ripen and dry up. Early in summer the soil should be shaken off the bulbs, after which they should be allowed to cure properly and will then be ready to be reotted.

FOR DANDELIONS.

A spray that will destroy dandelions in the lawn is reported as a recent discovery by horticultural investigators at the University of Wisconsin. The basis of the discovery is iron sulphate, commonly known as green vitriol. Full investigation has shown its efficacy, it is said. The spray is made by dissolving

Fernandina, Fla.—Though florists' work is not easy, it has given health to many men who found another trade onerous. One of these is G. Gerbing, who came to Florida about twenty-five years ago suffering from nervous prostration caused by long years of overwork as superintendent of an orphan asylum. Although he has never regained his original robust health, he feels well if he can be in the open working among his plants. Though his health is not such that he can attend local trade conventions, he has built up a trade in his specialty, which is fancy-leaved caladiums, concerning which his knowledge is comprehensive.

The Review is able to announce that it NOW is in position to make immediate shipment of

BAILEY'S STANDARD

Cyclopedia of Horticulture

at a new low price. The last printing was sold out at $48.00 the set of 6 volumes—a very reasonable price considering war-time costs of printing. Now a new printing has been made and the publishers authorize The Review to give its readers the benefit of the saving made in present competitive conditions in the book-making trades in the East. This means a new price of $40.00 per set for the CYCLOPEDIA—a saving of $8.00 per set.

Send Your Orders Now—Delivery by First Express, Prepaid

REMEMBER—BAILEY'S STANDARD CYCLOPEDIA OF HORTICULTURE is in 6 large volumes, over 3,000 pages. It is authority in all matters of plant names and spellings. Besides the purely botanical matter one would expect to find in such a work, there are many hundreds of cultural articles, chapters on insects, diseases, remedies, etc.—a veritable horticultural library, all carefully and completely indexed.

B. E. and J. T. COKELY,

201 N. 7th Ave., SCRANTON, PA.

Manufacturers and Importers of Florists' Supplies

pected to make the trip also, A. B. Mathiesen having arranged to take three in his car and S. A. Dunlap another of the team. David L. Jones was installed as secretary of the association, and started his term of office by making a good collection of dues from the members. The matter of street peddlers and competition from drivers of vegetable wagons is to be taken up by a committee, headed by Carl Melby, which is instructed to take up this matter at once with the proper city authorities. The regular growers presented their side of the problem created by the large number of back-yard growers who always start in delivering flowers at this season of the year, and urged that the trade show more solidarity in backing up the year-round grower at this season. J. Bourn, of Bourn & Sons, Yakima, was a trade visitor, and reports ideal growing conditions in the Yakima valley.

The Orpheum Floral Co. notes a continued good demand for the brighter-colored bedding plants, and has been making effective sidewalk displays of these flowers.

The Hollywood Gardens used a stone garden bench last week and some of the fine roses coming in from the greenhouses at this time to produce a seasonal window. This shop has handled a number of recent wedding decorations, using summer flowers and roses generally.

The City Flower Shop has handled several out-of-town weddings lately.

The Burdett Co. has been busy with the window box and store decorations, following the civic campaign, and has completed the work for several of the larger department stores and hotels. The preparation of the flower boxes on each lamp post along Second avenue was divided between this firm and R. E. Chapman.

As the result of a new agreement with the owners of the building, whereby a fine icebox is to be installed in the rear of its present quarters, the B. E. Hammond Co. has given up its option on the property on Western avenue and will remain at 1010 Post street. Changes in the office arrangements are also planned at this time.

NEWS OF THE SEED TRADE

SEED growers will be interested in the power cultivators described in the leading article in this issue.

SEE "Business Embarrassments," on a forward page, regarding the Continental Seed Co. receivership.

WITH Paper Whites as scarce as reports make them, there should be a good market for freesias next winter. But freesia bulbs are a short crop, too.

THE following committee on seeds for the ensuing year has been appointed by the New York Produce Exchange: William Jacot, Marshall H. Duryea, Ernst Wehneke, Charles Wimmer and O. W. F. Randolph.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Sluis & Groot, of Enkhuizen, Holland, that Herbst Bros., New York, will cease to be its agents in this country when the agreement between the two firms expires, July 1. After that date orders and correspondence should be sent direct to Enkhuizen. Sluis & Groot report that, in consequence of the severe winter, biennial garden and flower seed crops are poor. Cabbage, beet and turnip are practically lost.

THE Tacoma Seed Co. has been organized at 815 Pacific avenue, Tacoma, Wash., by Fred A. Rowe, who was for a number of years connected with McCoy's in Seattle and has more recently been in charge of the Tacoma store of the Randall-McLoughlin Co. A general seed store stock will be carried, and bedding stock will also be offered in season. The proprietor's long experience in the florists' and seed business insures an up-to-date service for the Tacoma trade.

CONNECTICUT SEED NOTES.

Comstock, Ferre & Co., of Wethersfield, report the season as late. Plantings of sweet corn and other seeds are progressing rapidly, however, and with some good, warm weather, a good stand is expected.

Cadwell & Jones, of Hartford, have experienced a busy season. The demand for sudan grass and millet is far above the average, due to the light hay crop in this section. Perennial flower seeds are in good demand.

VEGETABLE SEED CROPS.

The condition of vegetable seed crops, as reported to the Department of Agriculture during the week ending June 3, is generally good. Many instances of increased acreage are noted, and replantings are negligible, although the crops were planted somewhat later than usual.

Dwarf snap beans are being planted under favorable conditions. The acreage is expected to exceed that of last year, although not equal to normal. Insufficient moisture is reported in some growing areas in the western states.

The planting of garden peas was finished about a month ago. Conditions have been favorable for the rapid development of the plants, which has offset partly the unusually late planting date. The acreage has been increased appreciably.

The planting of sweet corn for seed is practically complete in all growing areas. An increased acreage over last year is reported in Connecticut. The crop in Ohio is about two weeks late. There is some replanting because of wet weather and cutworms. Present growing conditions, however, are favorable for the increased acreage. In Iowa and Nebraska, sweet corn was planted early and has made satisfactory progress to date.

The growing condition of cucumber and muskmelon seed crops in Colorado and other western states is good. No replantings have been reported to date. An improved demand is indicated by a few growers who hold many more contract orders than at this time last year. This has resulted in an increased acreage in some instances.

Watermelon seed growers in Florida report that weather conditions have been favorable for this crop. The fields have been well cultivated, there is a good stand of plants, and no replantings have been reported. There is some fear that the unusually heavy rains during the week ending June 3 may lower the condition of some fields. The acreage is slightly larger than last year.

The growing condition of onion sets in the Chicago district is somewhat better than at this time last year and about eighty to eighty-five per cent of normal. Heavy and continued rains delayed planting two or three weeks and prevented the soil from being put in good condition. The stands are spotted in many fields. Growers attribute this to the fact that considerable old seed of weak vitality and low germination was planted, as well as to the unfavorable weather and soil conditions. Some of the fields are weedy and a little smut has appeared. Little replanting has been necessary, and the total acreage is about the same as last year.

The cabbage seed crop on Long Island has made satisfactory progress and is now in full bloom. A much larger acreage than last year is reported.

GRASS SEED DEALERS ELECT.

At Chicago Meeting.

In convention June 20 at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association elected the following officers: President, William G. Scarlett, of William G. Scarlett & Co., Baltimore, Md., reelected; vice-president, W. W. Kellogg, Kellogg Seed Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; secretary and treasurer, Clarence K. Jones, Baltimore, Md.

The board of directors was reelected, as follows: John A. Smith, Toledo; Marshall H. Duryea, New York, and E. F. Stanford, Buffalo, N. Y.

Those elected to membership on the board of arbitration were: Fred Kellogg, of the Kellogg Seed Co., Milwaukee; M. H. Duryea, of the Nungesser-Dickinson Seed Co., New York, N. Y.; E. F. Stanford, of the Stanford Seed Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; C. C. Massie, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, and Charles Green, of the Illinois Seed Co., Chicago. By motion it was decided that the board of arbitration elect its own chairman.

W. H. Moorehouse & Co., the Churchill Grass Seed Co. and M. W. Jacot resigned from the association, and E. F. Spears & Son, Paris, Ky., was elected to membership.

Those Present.

SEEDSMEN IN CONVENTION.

Triple Attraction at Chicago.

Chicago contains more seedsmen this week than have gathered together in any one city for many a day. The attractions form a 3-ring affair. The Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers opened their annual convention at the Hotel La Salle, Monday, June 19, continuing the following day. Wednesday, June 21, the fortieth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association opened at the Hotel Sherman, while the Association of Official Seed Analysts convened in another room of the same hostelry. Out of the entire membership of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association, three only were not represented at the convention of that organization. Since The Review goes to press on the day that the other two conventions open, it is too early to give a close account of the number in attendance, but it may be said that it is exceedingly large.

Chicago favored the visiting seedsmen with cool weather, in contrast to the torrid weather which has greeted them in the Garden city at some previous conventions. Such climatic conditions were welcome, because the seedsmen had much to discuss and were interested to learn what others had to say. The last two years have been among the hardest that seedsmen have experienced in a decade or more. Though the present viewpoint is tinged with optimism, the concern which has burdened the members of the trade in the last two seasons still is present. The necessity for close watchfulness in seed production and selling just now makes the present week's gathering welcomed as an opportunity by members of the trade to get a rather accurate account of what others are doing and planning to do. The groups which discuss matters not mentioned on the convention program are more in evidence than ever and their discussion is more interesting and interested than usual.

The visit of some of the officers of the American Seed Trade Association to the last annual meeting of the Association of Official Seed Analysts was considered of such value to both organizations that provision was made to hold the convention of the latter organization at the same time as the meeting of the seedsmen this week. A joint session of members of both bodies was arranged for Thursday afternoon, June 22, when matters of interest to analysts and seedsmen were on the program.

Opening Session.

The seedsmen held their opening session at the Hotel Sherman, Wednesday morning, June 21, when A. C. Babbize, editor of Investment News, Chicago, gave the address of welcome, to which J. C. Robinson replied.

This was followed by the president's address.

President's Address.

In his address as president, L. L. Olds, after touching on the responsibilities of his office, greeting the seed analysts and recalling the loss of six members during the past year, thanked the chairmen of some of the important committees, naming particularly Charles D. Boyles and Kirby B. White, chairman and vice-chairman of the legislative committee, and Leonard Vaughan, chairman of the garden bureau committee, as well as Curtis Nye Smith, counsel, and James H. Burdett, director of the garden bureau. He expressed the trade's rejoicing at the ten per cent reduction in freight rates and hoped ere long the free seed distribution by Congress would be eliminated. His remarks concerning the garden bureau led him to talk of truth in advertising and business integrity, regarding which he said:

"Along in last April one of our Illinois members called my attention to an advertisement of a certain Kansas firm, which he said had been running in many of the leading farm papers, particularly in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and the south. The advertisement was headed, 'Red Clover, $11 Bushel,' and went on to quote ridiculously low prices on a number of staple field seed items. It was of the same stripe as the advertisements that have been put out by certain Iowa and Illinois seed firms of rather unsavory reputation during the last few years, and I am sorry to say these advertisements have been accepted by some of the best agricultural journals. These people try to make the farmers think that they can buy first-class seed at prices which are below the market, and many of the farmers either believe it or else seem to be perfectly willing to be fooled once.

Truth Essential.

"Along this same line a leading seed analyst has written me as follows: 'During the past season of seed analysts' work, I have found instances where seed advertised for sale in farm papers, and also weekly papers, have been very largely misleading and, on account of the low prices quoted, no doubt many were induced to buy. I found some of the seed which was offered in connection with these advertisements to be of very poor quality. I believe that truth in advertising is very essential in the seed business, and I further believe that something should be done to bring this matter to the attention of the Seed Trade Association in such a way that action will result and that the evils now existing can be corrected. I think you will agree with me when I say your firm and other firms in the wholesale business are obliged to meet the competition of the advertising referred to above, and consequently are placed at a very great disadvantage.'

"My suggestion in connection with this subject is that a resolution be adopted by this convention to the effect that agricultural papers be asked to use the utmost caution in accepting seed advertisements from unknown firms or from firms not in good standing as members of this association, and that before using an advertisement from a firm not holding a membership with us they insist that such firm be vouched for by the chief seed analyst of the state where it is located Business Integrity.

"January 1 I sent cards to all our members as a New Year's greeting, bearing a quotation from article II of the constitution. These cards read as follows:

"Our Purpose: To improve and perfect a standard of business integrity, which shall include purity of stocks, honesty of representation, carefulness of obligations and promptness in execution."

"The phrase 'business integrity' might have been needed years ago when our constitution was first written, but at this time it seems to me it is much more needed. As a result of the war we all know there was a letting down of moral standards. Business men generally have realized this during the last year or so and have been taking steps to improve the situation. Considerable has been accomplished, but much remains to be done, and we of the seed trade, because of the nature of our business and because of our peculiar temptations, need to give the matter special consideration.

"Let us realize what it means to hold a membership in the American Seed Trade Association, an organization which stands for the highest honor and for absolute fair dealing in every transaction. I know we have had much to contend with during the last two seasons. With the business depression and the lack of orders on the one hand, and unfair competition both from the

Snapdragons have moved into first place with all wide-awake florists and are earning growers more money than any flower in cultivation. This is especially true among growers with a retail outlet. Splendid blooms may be had any month in the year, with a bumper crop over the three great flower days, Easter, Mothers' Day, and Memorial, extending throughout June graduations.

Snapdragons are easy to grow and good seed may be had at such small cost that there is no excuse for having inferior stock. Producing snapdragon seed is our one business and the ever increasing orders show how well we attend to it. Years of experience and our reputation are back of every packet of seed. See complete list below. First comes government and from unscrupulous seed firms on the other hand, it has surely been discouraging. Most of us know what it is to have financial troubles.

Many have been dangerously near actual failure, while some have had to give up entirely.

"But let us be encouraged. Conditions have improved and are still improving. Ours is a great vocation. Seeds are fundamental. Much depends on the sort of seeds we furnish and the way we furnish them. We have had some great men in our association. Their lives should inspire us. Let us resolve that we will give real service and that we will be true to the ideals set forth in our constitution.

Recommendations.

"Considerable attention has been given by Rotary Clubs throughout the country the past year to the importance of having a written code of ethics or business methods in every organization such as ours. I think this is a good idea and recommend that a special committee be appointed by the incoming president to prepare a code of ethics and submit it for our consideration at our next annual convention. We could not, of course, expect to cover every matter of difference likely to come up as between growers and wholesalers, or between wholesalers and retailers, by a hard and fast set of rules or to say just exactly what our conduct should be at all times in our dealings with the public, but broad principles could be laid down that would help much. Article II of the constitution furnishes a beginning for the work of this committee, but I think the whole question should be further developed.

"To sum up, my recommendations are:

"First, that Curtis Nye Smith be retained as our counsel for the coming year.

"Second, that the secretary be instructed to procure a copy of the new supplement to the seed laws.

"Third, that united field seed advertising be taken up for the coming year, as well as united garden seed advertising.

"Fourth, that a resolution be adopted asking the agricultural papers of the country to exclude from their columns all seed advertising of firms not members of the American Seed Trade Association, unless endorsed by the seed analysts of their respective states.

"Fifth, that a special committee be appointed to prepare a code of ethics."

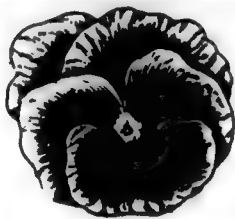

Secretary-Treasurer's Report.

C. E. Kendel, as secretary and treasurer, reported that there were nine additions to the membership roll, which at the last meeting totaled 247 active members and two honorary. Losses in membership during the year were six by failure, five dropped from the rolls, two sold out, seven resigned and one died, a total of twenty-one, leaving the total membership at the opening of this convention 237, all active except one honorary member.

He stated that to the balance in the bank last year had been added, in receipts from all sources, $8,342.74. Total expenditures were $8,247.15, leaving the balance in the bank at present $424.71, a gain of about $95 during the year.

The remainder of the morning was occupied by the reports of various committees.

Reporting on the tariff, J. C. Vaughan quoted the various rates, present and proposed, which have been published in these columns, but had no information as to the probable final action by Congress.

In presenting the report of the committee on postal laws, G. F. Bradley, of Cleveland, warned any seedsmen who are now shipping insecticides by mail that they are violating the postal laws and incurring serious penalties. He said the Post Office department requests that the name and address of sender be at the top of an address blank pasted on packages, though there is no regulation requiring it.

Necrology.

For the committee on necrology, Charles P. Guelph, as chairman, reported that the association had lost during the last year five members and one honorary member, Dr. W. W. Tracy. Of the five, one, J. M. Lupton, was a past-president. The committee offered sympathy to the families and friends of the departed members, presenting these brief records:

HIRAM WHEELER BUCKBEE.

Hiram Wheeler Buckbee was born at Rockford, Ill., November 6, 1860, and died at his summer home at Lake Geneva, Wis., July 16, 1921.

As a school boy of 11, Mr. Buckbee displayed an interest in the business which later became his life's work, his first venture being the growing and selling of cabbage plants. The business gradually expanded until the present corporation of H. W. Buckbee & Co. was formed, at the time of his death recognized as one of the leading mail order seed concerns of this country, with a catalogue circulation of upwards of 700,000. Mr. Buckbee was highly regarded in his native city, where he was devotedly interested in every project for its betterment, giving largely of his moral and financial support.

JOHN MATHER LUPTON.

Past-president J. M. Lupton, familiarly and affectionately known to his many friends in the trade as "Mat," was born in the little Long Island city of Mattituck, October 6, 1856, and died there August 1, 1921.

In the passing of Mr. Lupton, the association has lost an ex-president and an active and valued worker for the good of the organization.

Mr. Lupton, of J. M. Lupton & Son, was one of the pioneer cabbage seed growers of Long Island and was prominently identified with all agricultural interests on the island. He was active in civic matters of his community and, beginning in 1906, served five terms in the state legislature. Mr. Lupton was honored with the presidency of our association at the San Francisco convention, in 1915.

HARRIE B. McCULLOUGH.

Harrie B. McCullough, president of J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati, O., died suddenly at his home in that city January 3, 1922, in his forty-ninth year.

Mr. McCullough had been in declining health for the last two or three years, but continued active in business until a few days prior to his death. He was a grandson of the founder of the business, which was established in 1838, and succeeded his father, the late Albert McCullough, as head of the firm, in 1916.

Mr. McCullough was a constant attendant at our conventions and was prominent in the business and social life of his home city.

WALTER D. ROSS.

Walter D. Ross, president of the seed firm of Ross Bros., Worcester, Mass., died at his home in that city January 9, 1922, in his sixty-seventh year.

Mr. Ross was born at West Boylston, Mass., and at an early age entered the employ of Wm. H. Earle, grain dealer of Worcester, whose business he took over in 1888 with his brother, incorporating under its present name.

Some twenty odd years ago this firm secured a contract from the Japanese government for all of the seeds and agricultural implements used at its new agricultural college at Sapporo, Japan. Mr. Ross was prominently identified with all local matters pertaining to agriculture, being a member of several organizations and president of the Worcester County Agricultural Society. He was a cousin of Luther Burbank, of California.

DR. WILLIAM WARNER TRACY.

Dr. William Warner Tracy, honorary member of this association since 1918, died at the home of his son, John E. W. Tracy, Washington, D. C., March 1, 1922, in his seventy-seventh year.

Mr. Tracy was a native of Ohio, although moving to Vermont at an early age. Following his services to his country in the Civil war, he entered the Michigan Agricultural College and soon distinguished himself in botanical and horticultural lines, and in later years was given the honorary degree of doctor of science by this institution in recognition of his work in horticultural research. Soon after leaving college he became connected with D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, and the services he rendered this company in developing their trial grounds and in plant breeding and selection soon won for him a world-wide reputation as an expert in vegetable varieties. In 1903 he entered the service of the United States Department of Agriculture, devoting the most of his time to the study of vegetable varieties and the conducting of the extensive government trial grounds at Arlington. Because of failing health, he retired from his connection with the department April 22, 1921, after eighteen years of active service. He was the author of many books and bulletins on the subjects in which he specialized and these are now recognized as authorities.

In the passing of Dr. Tracy the seed trade has lost one of its best friends and counselors and a man who has done as much as, or more than, any other to preach and practice the production of better seeds. Dr. Tracy's life work, with its high standard of ideals, will be an inspiration to the future generations of seedsmen and, if practiced, will do much toward raising the standard of the seed business in America.

MELVIN S. GRIFFITH.

Melvin S. Griffith, president of the Griffith & Turner Co., Baltimore, Md., died suddenly at his home, in a suburb of that city, January 11, 1922.

Mr. Griffith was born in Baltimore county, Maryland, his father, the late John M. Griffith, being the founder of the seed and implement house of Griffith & Turner Co. The son early associated himself with the firm and was its active head for many years, and was well and favorably known to the trade and to the farming community which they serve.

Garden Seed Session.

The Wednesday afternoon session was called the garden seed session, because at this time Leonard H. Vaughan, chairman of the committee on the garden bureau, presented his report, and James H. Burdett, the director, told of the bureau's work. The latter stated that, at the close of the third year of the national bureau's activities, it could be safely said that newspapers are devoting as much or more space to home gardens than they did even during the period of war gardens; that the response from the public is in proportion and the garden seed business correspondingly benefited, and that more than half of all home garden publicity published in American newspapers is supplied by the national garden bureau. This work has necessarily progressed slowly, since the funds of the bureau are limited and its operations from Chicago are solely by mail. The service is supplied to any daily newspaper which makes application, and any seedsmen can secure the service for his home-town paper if he will make application to the bureau.

Mr. Burdett said there are 1,924 daily newspapers in the United States, of which the bureau has received written orders for its service from 716. The bureau, however, furnishes its service to only one newspaper in any city, with few exceptions. The 1,924 daily newspapers are published in 1,269 cities, and of these cities 601 are being supplied with the bureau's material.

The bureau is being asked to furnish additional publicity material in the form of pamphlets, lectures, stereopticon slides and motion picture films. Lack of funds has prevented the supplying of such things so far, but should conditions prove favorable, they will be added to the bureau's service early in the future.

After discussion of the garden bureau's work and various committee reports, an address on "The Growing of Vegetable Seed in California" was presented by Lester L. Morse, of San Francisco. An address on "Seed Borne Diseases" was delivered by C. R. Orton, secretary of the Crop Prevention Institute and professor of plant pathology at Pennsylvania State College.

Thursday morning was set aside for an executive session, at which new members were elected and the reports of the association's counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, and of Charles D. Boyle, chairman of the legislative committee, were presented.

SEED ANALYSTS AND SEEDSMEN.

Report of C. C. Massie, of Minneapolis, at the convention of the American Seed Trade Association, in Chicago, as chairman of the committee on seed testing and publicity.

The unique position of the members of the Association of Official Seed Analysts of North America renders the deliberations of that association of considerable interest to the American Seed Trade Associations and, indeed, to all those interested in the distribution of agricultural, garden and flower seeds. It has been thought by the officers of the seed trade associations that the opportunity to have representatives of our

SEED ANALYSTS AND SEEDSMEN.

Report of C. C. Massie, of Minneapolis, at the convention of the American Seed Trade Association, in Chicago, as chairman of the committee on seed testing and publicity.

The unique position of the members of the Association of Official Seed Analysts of North America renders the deliberations of that association of considerable interest to the American Seed Trade Associations and, indeed, to all those interested in the distribution of agricultural, garden and flower seeds. It has been thought by the officers of the seed trade associations that the opportunity to have representatives of our

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

REPORT of the annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society will be found on a forward page of this issue.

NURSERYMEN who have not found a power cultivator suited to their needs will find valuable the leading article in this issue, describing several that are now used in nurseries successfully.

THE building boom augurs an excellent business for nurserymen in the autumn and next spring. The permits issued in Chicago in the first fifteen days of June indicated that the month's total would surpass that of May, which passed all previous records.

C. H. PERKINS, of Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., was a recent visitor in Portland, Ore., with other members of the order of the Mystic Shrine. He visited a few of the leading rose establishments and continued his trip to the San Francisco convention of Shriners.

THE BEST RESULTS.

Everything in this world is comparative, so it is not to be taken as decrying the efforts of the other fellow when an advertiser reports like this:

Will say that we had the best results from The Review and you will hear from us in the fall for next season's advertising.—Tipton Nursery Co., Little Rock, Ark., May 27, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CALIFORNIA NURSERYMEN MEET.

At Sacramento.

There was an attendance of about fifty at the twelfth annual convention of the California Association of Nurserymen, held at the Travelers' hotel, Sacramento, Cal., June 1 to 3. Visitors from other states included Charles H. Perkins, of Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., and J. S. Wiggins, of the Washington Nursery Co., Toppenish, Wash.

Sacramento's welcome was spoken by Mayor Albert Elkus. Henry W. Kruckeberg, of Los Angeles, delivered the association's response. J. W. Barnicott, the retiring president, gave an interesting annual address, and a satisfactory annual report was made by Secretary Chancellor K. Grady.

Papers, followed by discussions, were read at the various sessions. They were: "Problems of the Seedsman," by Harry S. Hallawell, San Francisco; "Functions of the Agricultural Legislative Committee," by R. N. Wilson, secretary, Sacramento; "Production of Bulbs in California," by R. C. Lincoln, Santa Cruz; "Caliper Grading for Fruit Trees," by J. E. Bergholdt, Newcastle; "Credits and Credit Principles," by George J. Kern, of the Crocker National Bank, San Francisco; "Federal Plant Quarantine 37," by Dr. C. L. Marlatt, Washington; "Developments in the Production of Plants Formerly Imported," by Roy F. Wilcox, Montebello; "Landscaping and Its Relation to the Nursery Business," by Ralph T. Stevens, Santa Barbara; "Subtropical Fruits," by John A. Armstrong, Ontario; "Bud Selection," by C. B. Weeks, California Bud Selection Association, Brentwood; "Root Stocks," by Prof. Warren P. Tufts, University of California, Berkeley. The most lively discussion of the whole convention was precipitated by Dr. Marlatt's talk on quarantine 37. The California nurserymen are generally in favor of the quarantine as at present.

Will Adopt Credit Rules.

The association decided on the adoption of credit rules governing the industry in California and the following committee was appointed to draft the principles of these credit rules: Roy F. Wilcox, H. A. Hyde and W. D. Curlis. It was also resolved to draft uniform rules for dealing with landscape engineers and architects and the following committee was appointed to draft the rules: T. A. Sands, P. H. Rust and Daniel MacRorie. These committees will report later. It was also resolved to maintain offices in San Francisco, with a permanent secretary. This had previously been decided on, but the convention put the final stamp of approval on the plan. Chancellor K. Grady is the resident secretary-treasurer.

There were several social features of the convention, including a ladies' night, with dancing. The officers elected for the coming year were: President, Donald McLaren, San Francisco; vice-presidents, Edward H. Rust, Pasadena; Thomas Maxwell, Napa; J. D. Meriwether, Ontario; M. R. Jackson, Fresno; H. S. Hallawell, San Francisco. The members of the executive committee for the coming year are: Fred H. Howard, Los Angeles; Max J. Crow, Gilroy; Hans Plath, San Francisco; J. W. Barnicott, Newcastle; H. A. Hyde, Watsonville, and Walter Armacost, Sawtelle. The secretary-treasurer, Chancellor K. Grady, San Francisco, was reelected. M. M.

Though he had begun to collect and grow peonies years before, Henry S. Cooper, a wealthy manufacturer of Kenosha, Wis., became known to the trade a few years ago as the "peony fan." From an enthusiastic collector of peony varieties Mr. Cooper became engaged in growing them professionally and now conducts the Dunmovin Peony Gardens, offering a limited number of high-grade varieties to those who appreciate the finest in peonies. Mr. Cooper's small books, which he does not call catalogues, are among the most interesting commercial literature on the peony. Their titles indicate his attitude toward them; one is called "Tips and Pointers" and the other "Unvarnished Facts."

But Mr. Cooper's latest effort in behalf of the peony outshines his previous ones. June 9 the Madison street terminal of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, in Chicago, was decorated with 6,000 peony blooms. So great was the impression made by the event that the following description occupied nearly a newspaper column:

The Northwestern railway between Chicago and Milwaukee was being converted into a "peony way" today and Kenosha was furnishing the peonies. When Kenosha people went into the terminal of the Northwestern in Chicago this morning, they had a "breath of home," the distinctive odor of the spring peony which lingers about the Cooper road just about this time of the year and gets away from the Cooper road into hundreds of homes of Kenosha. A million people are going to have a chance to see the peonies of Henry Cooper, peony fan, this year.

With the coöperation of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, of Chicago, Mr. Cooper today converted the great terminal of the Northwestern, one of the greatest railway terminals in the world, into a great flower garden. Thousands upon thousands of peonies were shipped from Kenosha last night and today they grace the nooks and corners and the main corridors of the big terminal. It took 6,000 of the fragrant, multicolored peonies from the Cooper gardens to convert this great terminal into a great flower show room. It took the labor of a score of expert lovers of peonies to arrange the blooms in the most attractive manner.

More than 100,000 people pass through the big terminal every day and they are going to carry to work with them and back home with them in the evening the odor of Kenosha-grown peonies.

The terminal was not the only Chicago building which offered a breath of Cooper road today. State street came under the spell and thousands of the flowers from the Cooper farm were placed in the stores of Capper & Capper and the Hub. It was the first time that so many peonies had ever been used as a decoration for big Chicago business buildings.

Mr. Cooper is not stopping with decorating the Chicago terminal of the Northwestern, but at the invitation and with the full coöperation of the officials of the company, he is placing the blooms from Kenosha in every station along the road from Milwaukee to Chicago. Two thousand of the blooms are to be placed in the station at Milwaukee and a smaller number in stations at Evanston, Highland Park, Glencoe, Waukegan, Lake Forest, and, of course, Kenosha. More than 10,000 of the earliest of the blooms of the Cooper farm are being used in developing the eighty miles of peonies along a great railway system between the two great cities.

Kenosha is not to lose out on account of the lavish decorations which Mr. Cooper arranged today, as the thirteen acres of peonies out on the Cooper road are just coming into bloom and there will be a wonderful sight for Mr. Cooper's neighbors in Kenosha within the next few days. The scores of varieties will soon be in full bloom and it is expected that thousands of people will be attracted to Kenosha to view the unusual sight.

It might be said in passing that peonies retailed at $1.50 a dozen today and that Mr. Cooper's contribution to put the breath of the peonies into the rather monotonous life of travelers represented an expenditure of something like $10,000.

associations accept the courteous invitation of the analysts' association to attend its meetings would be exceedingly valuable to the members of the seed trade. Consequently this association was represented at the meeting of the seed analysts at Toronto in December last by its counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, and several members of our association.

It is, of course, impractical to review the many novel and valuable suggestions in seed testing and kindred subjects brought forth by the numerous papers read at the convention. The chairman, therefore, can only suggest to the members that they would find it of great profit to themselves to obtain copies of the reports of the addresses given on these technical subjects, which, it is understood, can be obtained from the secretary of the analysts' association by the payment of a small cost fee.

Prospective Legislation.

The subject of the most vital interest to our associations, as it apparently is to the analysts' association itself, appears to be prospective seed legislation. The report of the chairman of the legislative committee of the analysts gave at great length the past year's work and included recommendations for further legislation, which should be

PRIMULAS As Cut Flowers

By using our December-sown stock, you can have the Primula Obconica commence blooming in September, and in full bloom by November, which the later sown stock will not do, as they are not old enough. A half dozen more flowers per plant used as cut flowers, just adds that much more profit and still leaves a salable plant and they are a cut flower that lasts.

CHARLES H. TOTTY COMPANY, MADISON, NEW JERSEY

stated rather fully, as the seed trade associations should be well advised of the attitude of mind of such an important committee as the legislative committee of the analysts' association. These recommendations were as follows:

(a) A federal bill to authorize the purchase of samples of vegetable seeds in open market and, if found of improper quality, to publish the names and addresses of the vendors.

(b) A uniform state vegetable seed bill, authorizing the state officer to test samples of vegetable seeds and publish the results if found to be of improper quality, together with the names and addresses of the vendors.

(c) To modify the uniform state seed bill regulating agricultural seeds to include a new section authorizing the administrative officer to secure an injunction against a seedsman from selling seeds which are contrary to the provisions of the seed law. This section is identical in words with a similar provision in the Pennsylvania seed law enacted in the year 1921.

It will be observed that the above recommendations are almost identically the policies of the seed trade associations, as developed by the votes of the conventions and by the resolutions of the executive officers of the association. The second suggestion has not been formally acted upon by convention of the American Seed Trade Association, although the matter has been discussed rather fully by counsel in the annual reports for the last two or three years, and the legislative committee of the association has carefully considered the matter. As a result of a conference between the officers of our associations, the chairman of the legislative committee of the seed analysts' association, and the botanist of the United States Department of Agriculture, November 10, 1921, a long step was taken toward the elimination of the numerous objectionable features of state vegetable seed legislation, the agreement of these conferees being practically the same as stated in paragraph b above. Inasmuch as the association at its annual convention in 1920 voted that authority be given to the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States to purchase samples of vegetable seeds and publish the names of the sellers of seeds of poor quality, it is felt that the results of the Washington conference of November 10 may well be approved by this convention, and such action will undoubtedly be suggested by the legislative committee of your association at this meeting.

Seizure of Seeds.

There has been a long and serious conflict between the analysts' association, or some members of that association, and the legislative committees of the seed trade associations on the question of the right of a state law to authorize the seizure of seeds, as to which it is claimed there has been a violation of the seed law. A well started attempt has been made in behalf of this radical punitive provision of the seed law, but the action of the seed analysts' association, especially after the seedsmen's side had been presented by the representative of our association, apparently has disposed of this difficult question in so far as the associations are officially concerned. The chairman takes pleasure in reporting that the analysts' convention at Toronto approached this, as well as other difficult question on which there were some serious conflicts, in a broad-minded and fair manner.

The analysts' convention was much disposed to approve of the action taken at the Copenhagen convention, which was an international conference of official seed analysts in July, 1921. Our representative, however, saw a serious conflict between the methods of testing and reporting tests adopted by the Copenhagen convention and the methods demanded by the various state seed laws of this country. Because of such variation, the resolution adopted in the Copenhagen rules was defeated. It is impossible to give all the technical details of this matter, but it will suffice to say that if they had been adopted and the analysts in the various states had attempted to enforce them by official regulations, the seedsmen of this country would have been completely reversed in all their former practices in the testing of seeds and the new methods would have had to be initiated at considerable expense and loss of time.

Testing Seeds.

Another most important discussion by this analysts' convention had to do with the modification of the rules and regulations for testing seeds. It is well reporting of such tests. The members will also remember that the uniform state seed law, which has been adopted in many of our states, provides that the rules for testing seeds adopted by the analysts' convention shall be those under which said state seed laws shall be administered. The importance, however, of any change in these rules and regulations of testing adopted by the analysts' association is most apparent.

The important question of hard seeds was discussed. The almost universal conclusion of those analysts giving papers at the convention on this subject was to report these hard seeds as non-germinating, thereby obviously heavily decreasing the percentage of germination stated on the label. The representative of this association, however, was invited to express a legal opinion on this attitude, it being shown that any attempt to report hard seeds as worthless in respect to germination would be clearly illegal, because these hard seeds have a germinating quality which cannot, under the laws of the various states, be denied. The analysts' convention, therefore, adopted a resolution that all hard seeds should be included in the total percentage of germination, but that a separate statement should be made of the percentage of hard seeds. For illustration, if the report on grass seed indicates that there is eighty-five per cent sprouts, with ten per cent hard seeds, the label attached to the goods will say: "Percentage of germination, 95%; 10% hard seeds."

The analysts' association conducts one of the most interesting and vital bits of work of any association interested in seeds; namely, the testing of the accuracy of the methods of analysts in testing seeds. As the violation of the various state seed laws depends primarily on the accuracy of the tests of seeds, the importance of having scientific and accurate reports is apparent. The analysts' association has for several years been conducting these reviews of the ability of analysts to test seeds, and the last convention of the association developed such an unfortunate report of the inaccuracies of these a resolution calling upon the official laboratories and analysts of the various states to make a fundamental change in their methods and equipment and stating that in the year 1924 a sur-

The Market.

When conditions have reached their worst, they are always bound to improve. A week ago terrific and unseasonable heat cast a pall over the market. Last week temperatures were much lower, with considerable rain and cloudiness. In consequence, while cut flower arrivals were still heavy, there was less of a glut as compared with a week earlier. Too many flowers still arrive, but every June we have these selfsame conditions to encounter and there is no reason for discouragement.

stock and are busy replanting. American Beauties are of good quality for summer. Scott Key is good, Columbia holds up well, and there are some nice Ward, but the Killarneys, Ophelia and Butterfly are not at all up to the mark. There are some nice Crusader, Hadley and Premier, but good quality flowers are now scarce. Outdoor roses cut but little figure in the wholesale market, but at present they are of splendid quality and such hybrid perpetuals as Brunner, Laing, Druschki, Magna Charta, Jacqueminot and Luizet quite outclass any indoor roses coming in. The outdoor hybrid teas also, like Lady Ashtown, Caroline Testout, Duchess of Wellington, Los Angeles, J. B. Clark and Radiance, are fine.

Carnations are being pulled up on all hands, and while large numbers still come in, they realize low prices. Last week one sale of 10,000 realized $21 for the grower. Good flowers bring $2, but a great many, if sold at all, make exceedingly low prices. Quality is now down to a low ebb. There are as yet only limited supplies of outdoor sweet peas, and the recent heat wave spoiled the indoor crop in great measure. Most of the flowers seen are poor. For white and yellow marguerites there is no great demand. Bachelor's buttons of good quality sell well, as does also delphinium, now available in quantity from outdoors. Peonies continue to straggle in, but they are practically over; the season for them has been unusually short.

Callas are still coming in, but are not much wanted. There is a fine supply of Liliun longiflorum, and to this is to be added Liliun regale, which is seen in considerable numbers for the first time. The flowers now seen are grown under glass, but the outdoor crop will appear in a few days. There are small lots of snapdragons, feverfew, stocks, candy-tuft, digitalis, gaillardia, gypsophila, aquilegia and other miscellaneous flowers.

With the numerous weddings, there has been a good call for valley, and the small supplies of white bouvardia are readily absorbed. Several varieties of cattleya, such as gigas, Harrisonia, Mendelia and Mossia, are still obtainable. Gladioli are rather overdone and are not selling especially well.

Flowering plants are now rather scarce and are mainly hydrangeas, gloxinias and begonias. There are still some sales of bedding plants, of which stocks are largely exhausted. Salmon pink geraniums are about the only sorts now obtainable.

Peony Exhibition.

Some years there are no peonies in flower here June 17, although that date usually fits well as a show date for Boston and vicinity. The recent heat wave entirely upset calculations and reduced exhibits at Horticultural hall materially; in fact, but for T. C. Thurlow's Sons, Inc., there would have been hardly any show at all, and most of that firm's flowers had been cut June 9 and kept in cold storage. As it was, the peonies more than half filled the main exhibition hall and were of extremely fine quality. Although there were no classes for any flowers but peonies, seasonable displays of sweet williams, roses, herbaceous perennials and shrubs added interest to the show and gave pleasure to the large numbers of visitors each day. In connection

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

ENLARGING SYSTEM.

I have mailed you a sketch of my greenhouse, which is 21x50 feet. There are three feet of cement and thirty inches of glass in the side walls. Arrangement of the beds is shown on the sketch. I am going to build a boiler house. Can you give me some idea as to how large the hot water boiler will be required to be in order to heat the above house and an additional house, 21x50 feet? The temperature desired is about 55 to 60 degrees. What arrangement should be used for the pipes?

J. L.—Mich.

For heating the two houses described above, it would be advisable to use a boiler rated at 2,000 to 2,200 square feet of radiation. This will require a smoke flue ten inches in diameter and a chimney with an inside diameter of twelve inches.

It would be preferable to use in each of the houses three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns. Carry one flow on each side wall plate and the other under the ridge. Four of the returns may be on each wall and the others in the walks between the beds.

If the flows run downhill, and the highest point in the main flow pipe is connected with the expansion tank, there will be no occasion for using air valves. There should be a gate valve on each of the flow pipes, in order to control the heat.

TWO BOILERS VS. ONE.

Will you kindly state the capacity of a boiler that is required to heat the following to 50 degrees, when outside it is 10 degrees below zero: Four greenhouses, 28x160, and two, 20x160, with three and one-half feet of glass in the south wall and twenty inches in the north wall?

The houses run east and west and the boiler room is located at the north-west corner of the range. At present we have a 40-horsepower boiler for one house, 128x160, and another, 20x160. Would it be advisable to buy another 40-horsepower boiler, or would it be preferable to buy one new boiler to heat the entire place? Will you explain what the best plan would be, mentioning sizes of returns, flow pipes, etc.?

A. C.—Ill.

Each of the wide houses will require about 650 square feet of radiation and the narrow houses should have 400 square feet for 50 degrees, with 100 additional feet in the house with three and one-half feet of glass in one side wall, and fifty extra feet for the house with twenty inches of glass.

While it would be possible to heat the six houses economically with a 60-

FURNACE LINING

That's the material to use to make all parts of the boiler settings air and gas tight. Applied when plastic, when properly vitrified PLIBRICO forms boiler settings that are hard as rock while resistant to heat up to 3100° F., that permit the utmost production of steam at the least fuel expense, and that outlast laid-up fire brick many times.

Send for our book, D-72, on "Modern Furnace Building," and learn all about PLIBRICO. Our nearest representative will serve you FREE.

horsepower boiler, since a 40-horsepower boiler has already been installed, it would be well to put in a second boiler of the same capacity. Either of the boilers will be sufficiently large to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in average winter weather and the two boilers will handle them easily even when it is 10 or 15 degrees below zero.

Having two boilers will be found helpful in case repairs are required for one of the boilers, since, by careful attention to the firing, one of the boilers should be able to give nearly, if not quite, 50 degrees in zero weather. It is understood that it is proposed to use 2½-inch main flow pipes for the wide houses and 2-inch flows for the 20-foot houses. While these would answer—especially if up to five pounds, pressure is carried in severe weather—it would be preferable to use either a flow pipe one size larger or install two 2-inch pipes in the houses having exposed glass in the side walls.

While a 5-inch pipe would answer as the flow pipe for the entire system, it would be preferable to use a 6-inch main flow when the radiation is more than 3,600 square feet, or two 4-inch flows may be used.

In addition to the flow pipes, it would be advisable to use eight 1¼-inch pipes in the wide houses and six returns in the narrow houses, with an additional return in the houses with an exposed wall.

FOR HOUSE AND RESIDENCE.

A section of my greenhouse, 38x50, has its heating plant located as the diagram I have sent you indicates. I desire to move the boiler from its present location and place it under my residence, making one system do for both. I want to know if I can get good results by running the flow and return pipes from the residence boiler to the greenhouse? Could I thus maintain the present heat of 50 degrees in the coldest weather? G. W. C.—Kan.

The sketch shows that the boiler is connected near the northeast corner of the greenhouse, while the residence, in the cellar of which it is proposed to locate the boiler, is fifteen feet west from the west end of the range.

If the main flow and return pipes are carefully insulated, there is no reason why the pipes cannot be carried as proposed, even though the main flow pipe is carried above ground between the boiler house and the west end of the greenhouse.

PIPE and FLUES

ALL SIZES of second-hand pipe, with new threads and couplings, in random lengths or cut lengths. Also make a specialty of handling boiler flues for retubing boilers or for greenhouse piping. All flues are trimmed and thoroughly cleaned by machine.

Saved His Gladioli And Asters

That's exactly what J. W. Ross of Centuria, Illinois, says. Here is an extract from his letter, written August fifth, last year.

Mr. Ross says: "The Skinner Irrigation System in use has saved the crops, both this season and last. If it had not been for the irrigation system we would not have had half the crop of Gladioli, and no Asters.

As it is, the weather has been so hot and dry we have had to water twice a week. We have thousands of Gladiolus bulblets, planted the last of April, that are in bloom now (Aug. 5), in fact some of these were in bloom as early as July 15, so that we practically grow bulblets as large in one year as we could in two years without the irrigation system. We are planning to double our irrigation ground another season."

with the show David C. Stranger, of T. C. Thurlow's Sons, Inc., lectured each afternoon on peonies and their culture before large audiences.

For twenty varieties of double peonies T. C. Thurlow's Sons won, with quite fresh flowers of Baroness Schroeder, Mme. Emile Galle, Primevere, Mrs. C. S. Minot, Karl Rosenwald, Mme. D'Hour, Albert Crousse, Elie Chevalier, Avalanche, Marquis de Lagergreen, Eugene Verdier, L'Indispensable, Jules Calot, Mme. Manchet, Soulange, Milton Hill, Modele de Perfection, Constant Devred and Marie. For ten varieties the same exhibitors were first with Enchantress, Felix Crousse, Pierre du Chartre, Eugene Verdier, Marquis de Lagergreen, Walter Faxon, La France, Couronne d'Or, H. A. Hagen and Marie Lemoine.

For six varieties rose pink, T. C. Thurlow's Sons won with Coquelin, M. Boucharlatine, Sir Charles Dilke, Mrs. Gessler, Jules Calot and Modele de Perfection.

For six varieties salmon pink, Thurlow's showed beautiful flowers of Eugene Verdier, Walter Faxon, Mme. Jules Dessert, Albert Crousse, Sarah Bernhardt and Milton Hill.

For six varieties white, the same exhibitor had Couronne d'Or, Baroness Schroeder, Enchantress, Marie Lemoine, Avalanche and Soulange.

For six varieties red, Thurlow's were again to the fore with Comte de Gormer, Felix Crousse, Eugene Bigot, Karl Rosenwald, Constant Devred and Grover Cleveland.

T. C. Thurlow's Sons received the silver medal for the finest general display. Their arrangement of flowers, in large vases on the floor of the hall, with branches of red cedar stuck among the vases so as practically to obscure them, and with cedar trees banked along the walls to give a good background, made the display a most pleasing one and the best this firm has yet staged here. All the flowers were of splendid size and color, and were arranged so that each flower showed its individuality. The large printed cards were a commendable feature.

A large circular group of the charming pink Mme. Emile Galle was delightful, and among the many other fine varieties in this extensive display, which

For twelve varieties, double, Thurlow's showed splendid M. Boucharlataine, Primevere, M. Lemoine, Pierre Duchartre, Jules Calot, Baroness Schroeder, Mrs. C. S. Minot, Milton Hill, Constant Devred, Mme. Geissler and Mme. Emile Galle.

For twelve singles, T. C. Thurlow's Sons had nice flowers of Jesse, King of England, White Lady, Mikado, Dog Rose, Sophia Hunter, Purity, Dragon and several seedlings under number.

Some remarkably fine flowers were shown in the amateur classes by John Morris, gardener for Robert C. Morse, and Wilton B. Fay. Henry Stewart had a large display of hardy roses and sweet williams; the Walter Hunnewell estate, of which F. A. Hatfield is superintendent, a large display of roses; A. L. Stephen, excellent hardy roses, and Hillerest Gardens, a general display of flowers, strawberries, cherries and vegetables.

Various Notes.

The annual show and convention of the American Sweet Pea Society will be held at Horticultural hall, Boston, June 24 and 25, in connection with the rose and strawberry show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The season has been a most erratic one, and it is feared the week of tropical heat, hail storms and later cold and unfavorable weather will reduce the number of exhibits. However, an interesting show is looked for. In connection with the show, Dr. Robert Huey, of Philadelphia, will lecture each day on hardy roses, and William Gray, of Newport, on sweet peas.

The Swedish Glee Club, the Philharmonic Trio and several splendid soloists and instrumentalists will furnish entertainment. Much of the program for the annual picnic at Cunningham park, East Milton, July 20, has already been prepared.

College commencements and the opening of seashore and mountain resorts have brought great numbers of visitors to Boston from all parts of the United States and Canada, and automobile plates with states outside New England are seen in every garage.

On the evening of June 17, while looking over the peony show, the writer met visitors from parts as distant as Atlanta, Ga.; Terre Haute, Ind.; Tampa, Fla., and Tulsa, Okla., and all marveled at the quality of peonies produced here.

Slug Shot for Sow Bugs

It is with great pleasure each week I read your valued paper, and I like to give a helping hand when I can. I do not wish to say anything against the use of Paris green and sugar, or bran, or any other material, for I know these are all good to kill bugs, such as wood lice (sow bugs), etc. But I would like to state, as I have done formerly, for the benefit of anyone bothered with sow bugs that I have thoroughly cleared my greenhouses of this pest by dusting freely with HAMMOND'S SLUG SHOT, spreading it well in the walks, under the benches, along the side walls and between the plants, using about 20 lbs. to a 20 ft. x 100 ft. house. This Slug Shot will not injure Carnation plants. I hope that this recital of my experience will be of help to others in trouble and especially recommend its use as it is not dangerous to human life as is Paris green.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Weddings, teas, graduations and dinners left their imprint on the business of the local florists last week, and the next ten days will be equally susceptible. They have combined to keep things active notwithstanding the great supply of outdoor blooms. Although there have been no large social functions, yet the number of smaller affairs has been so large that their influence was materially felt. Funeral work has also been quite active.

Timothy L. O'Connor has been drawn for duty as a grand juror in the Superior court.

The new Providence-Biltmore Flower Shop, of which Reuben Popkin is proprietor, was opened Saturday, June 17. It is one of the "swellest" flower stores in town. Mr. Popkin will continue his other store, farther up Washington street.

The Colonial Flower Shoppe had the decorations and cut flowers for "The Block-Aid" luncheon at the Biltmore Friday, June 16.

Shaw's Greenhouses, Woonsocket, is handling an unusually fine lot of aster plants, several thousand already having been sold.

Samuel Resnick, of W. A. Bowers & Co., was in Boston last week on business for the firm.

Ed. Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., was in Boston and vicinity last week on business.

Alfred Coward has commenced an addition to his greenhouses, at 153 Roger Williams avenue.

S. Kinder & Son had the decorations for the sixty-eighth wedding anniversary of Captain and Mrs. J. N. West, at Bristol last week. American Beauty roses were used.

F. King, of Bay View avenue, Bristol, has thousands of pansy plants ready for market.

Fred Davis is making a thorough overhauling of his greenhouses, at Riverside cemetery.

M. J. Leach & Son, Pawtucket, have recently added a new automobile to their shipping department.

Chipman's Greenhouses, Woonsocket, have an unusually large and fine stock of hydrangeas.

John J. Dunn was reelected secretary of the Rhode Island state board of agriculture at the annual meeting, held last week. Isaac L. Sherman, Thomas G. Mathewson and Philip A. Money were named as the executive committee. Prof. E. A. Stene was elected state entomologist.

Charles Smith was a business visitor in central Massachusetts last week, in the interests of the Eastern Wreath Co., of this city. W. H. M.

Look Back to See Ahead

Looking back is often the best way to see ahead.

Most of us find upon looking back that our biggest mistakes have been made through lack of faith in the future.

We all have been inclined to feel at times that the ultimate had been reached—that it was impossible for more flowers to be sold—or for more greenhouses to pay.

But looking back we see that regardless of what we thought or felt, this great country has gone right on forward, more and more flowers have been sold every year, and big, new greenhouses have paid and paid well.

Right now we urge every florist to have faith in his business and give heed to the advantage of building for the future while building prices are lower than they are apt to be again.

Let us advise with you on your greenhouse problems. We have everything for the greenhouse complete.

THE PATENTED

Bolens Power Hoe

and Lawn Mower Tractor ($180.00 less tools)

Cultivating between rows of strawflowers

It does close weeding and cultivating in straight or crooked rows.

It is the only garden tractor that will straddle plants 14 to 20 inches high without damage.

It has a differential drive and turns easily at the ends of rows.

It travels at any desired speed from one to three miles per hour.

It starts without a jerk and may be stopped instantly without stopping the motor.

It seeds or cultivates one, two or three ROWS.

Myers Floral Company, Bluffton, Indiana, writes as follows: —

"To say I am pleased with the BOLENS Power Hoe is putting it mildly. We find it everything you claim for it. In fact, it has all the other garden tractors I have ever seen skinned a mile. We had absolutely no trouble in getting the tractor started and to working. Must say again am delighted with it."

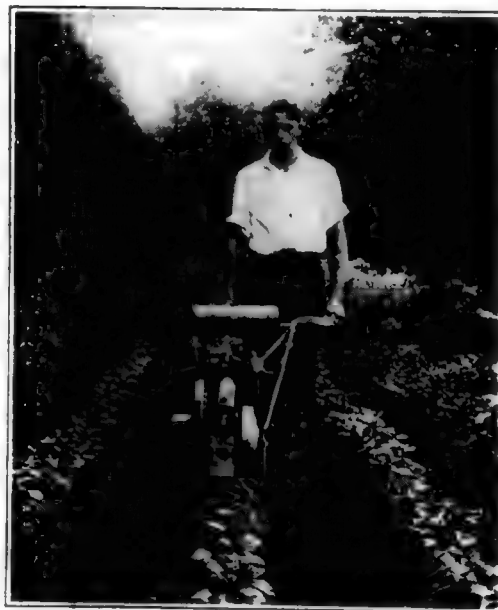

The BOLENS can go from cultivating to lawn mowing in ten seconds and will handle any lawn mower up to 30 inches.

All attachments on the BOLENS have snap hitches, making them instantly interchangeable.

One man with the BOLENS does the work of four to six men using hand or push implements and about one gallon of gasoline usually does a day's work in one row cultivation.

The BOLENS is guaranteed and we stand back of every BOLENS Tractor.

We have developed many new special tools found on no other tractor.

Cultivating asters astride the row

CYCLAMEN

CYCLAMEN SEED.

New crop for July and later delivery.
A No. 1 seed from the best German specialist.
One who grows for quality instead of quantity.

This is A No. 1, or largest size seed, not mixed sizes as it comes from the plant, therefore gives practically 100 per cent germination, also gives quicker and stronger seedlings and plants.

THE KIND I BUY TO GROW MYSELF.
Dark blood red, bright red, bright rose (Marienthal), $12.00 per 1000. Light and dark salmon and Show Queen, at $15.00 per 1000.

Let's have your order now for next season's requirements.

WINFIELD S. KIRCHER,
Cyclamen Specialist, Defiance, O.

READY NOW.

We can emphatically recommend them as a superior grade of plants, inasmuch as we have specialized On CYCLAMEN for years and have constantly improved our strain and methods of growing.

Through the use of a specially prepared compost, we have produced wonderful root action and a fine foliage, in fact we have never produced a finer lot of plants of the very best known varieties.

We have broken all records this year in the sale of plants and seedlings and have even shipped in full carload lots to eastern points.

Our plants positively have no trace or sign of the mite or any other diseases CYCLAMEN are subject to.

Orders booked in rotation.

EIGHT OF THE MOST POPULAR shades of Cyclamen in about equal proportion, just a nice mixture, all in separate colors; 600 of these will come out of 3-in. pots and about 1200 from flats, nice strong plants.

As we wish to discontinue growing Cyclamen at our present locality, we offer this entire lot at a bargain price, $75.00 for the lot, or $5.00 per 100. Some of these bulbs are ½-in. in diameter.

Chute & Butler Co., Peru, Ind.

Wood labels, for nurserymen and florists.

Benjamin Chase Co., Derry Village, N. H.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.The Market.June business has been as good as last season's at this time. The demand has been principally for wedding flowers; so roses, sweet peas and valley have been mostly in demand. There has been a good supply of roses in the market in all varieties, and these have cleaned up pretty well right along.In sweet peas the better grades have found a ready sale. There is an abundance of outdoor stock coming in now, which is moving fairly well. Larkspur and gypsophila are popular and stock of good quality is readily disposed of.
There is a good supply of lilies, snapdragons and carnations. The demand for carnations has fallen off considerably. Prices have been rather low; quality, likewise, is beginning to show the effects of the warm weather.The crop of peonies has been good, but the season on them has been extremely short.There is a considerable quantity of geraniums left over. The supply of these this season has been heavier than usual, and there is a considerable quantity of stock in bloom that still can be had.Various Notes.Considerable publicity is given to push flowers for graduation exercises and, no doubt, this will bring some good results.W. A. Kennedy, who has been on the sick list for the last two weeks, is up and around again.Charles Dettmann, who "gives the earth with every plant," is sporting a new, bright red Buick.The next Florists' Club meeting, in which the ladies are included, will be held on the beautiful grounds adjoining the H. Locker & Sons residence. A good attendance is expected at this meeting.
It will be held Thursday, July 6. P.The Semler-Leidiger Co. reports that business since the first of the year has held its own. Prices on most stock, the firm reports, are lower than in previous years."My new sport model Buick," says Charles Dettmann, "tells the tale—business to date has been fine." Mr.
Dettmann says that the fine grounds about his place of business make exceedingly good advertising.

King GREENHOUSES

60-ft. steel frame flat rafter Rose house. King patented "L" eave carries drip to wall. "L" eave is adaptable to any size house.

Loose Joints = Small Profits

Loose joints are the profit eaters in the greenhouse. There's one way to increase the profits and that is to conserve the heat. See that all the loose joints and cracks are eliminated, make sure that all joints are tight

King Houses Hold Heat

Why not get a few King patented spring arms to replace the worn sash arms you now have? They'll wear a lifetime and will give you an opportunity to prove their superiority over the ordinary type.

The King patented "L" eave eliminates joints through which heat can escape. It consists of a galvanized curved iron strip set in between, and fastened to, the sash bars by galvanized malleable caps. These hold the sash bars securely in place and prevent the glass from slipping. There's no drip with "L" eave. The condensation follows down the drip groove to the sill. Snow and ice cannot accumulate on the eave.

Do the sash in your house close tight? With the King patented spring arm (special equipment) you can draw every sash ventilator down tight. An obstruction on the bottom rail or top header of one usually prevents the tight closing of all the sash. Not so with the King patented special spring arm. The spring allows for the unequal closing of the sash. Every sash comes down tight without pulling out the sash screws or breaking the glass.

There are other points of superiority—let us tell you about them.

When you think of good greenhouses, think of KING.

AGMCO Galvanized Steel Gutter

What is the Difference?

Between any gutter and an AGMCO GALVANIZED STEEL GUTTER (Patented Construction).

There's all the difference in the world.

- FIRST: It is drip-proof from condensation. It will not leak.
- SECOND: It carries more water than any other gutter.
- THIRD: The shadow of the gutter is less than any other.
- FOURTH: By a novel invention the water from gutter and drip is carried in the same down spout. The drip catches all condensation.

These are a few reasons why the AGMCO gutter makes our connected greenhouses far superior to any other type.

When you build that range, it will pay you to take advantage of our patented galvanized steel gutter.

Get our designs plus an AGMCO estimate and see for yourself. Our experts are waiting to help you.

IT TAKES

Experience as well as a lot of knowledge to design a greenhouse properly and AFTER THAT it takes a well equipped factory to turn out the material to build the greenhouse. There are a thousand and one little schemes and wrinkles which are used in manufacturing a greenhouse. The average greenhouse man does not know about these and is apt to be misled.

When you buy from us you get the result of years of experience added to some real brains.

More About the New Range of The St. Louis Rose Company

You, of course, saw the article about it in last week's Review, which covered the whole thing with exceeding thoroughness.

There was one important phase, however, that the writer of it did not cover.

We appreciate fully that if he had, it would have hardly been fair to the other greenhouse concerns. But it's perfectly all right to tell it in this little talk together.

The facts are, that the heads of this big company, which is inter-related with the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Company, are all, what you would call, pretty hard-headed buyers.

They go into a thing from top to bottom; and then start in again, going from the bottom to the top.

Before placing the order with us, competitive estimates on the greenhouses, were received.

It was evident that the competing greenhouse firms appreciated what a feather in their caps this job would be.

The only reason those men placed their order with us, was on account of the superior construction. No amount of talking on our part, however, could have convinced them of this fact.

It was our houses themselves that did the convincing.

They are their own best convincers.

On the other hand, should you read over the specifications for those two big separate houses, each 60 feet by 400 feet, and see, item for item, what they are getting for the money, you would say it was a mighty low figure.

Based on it, and the other things you have recently heard about our low prices, it's plain to be seen that we are figuring these days, with a decidedly sharp pencil.

The best possible way to prove that it is so, is to let us figure on a house for you.

You say when and where and we'll be there.

PANSY SEED

A. B. C. "PRIVATE STOCK" MIXTURE

Realizing the importance of the Pansy to many growers both as cut flowers and for bedding plant sales, and the fact that FANCY PANSIES are half sold when offered to the public, we have combined a mixture which we believe will create a sensation because of the many new and odd shades it contains, many of which have originated with various growers who are in charge of large private estates throughout the country, particularly the so-called "Henna" types. In short, an experience of over thirty years both as seedsman and grower, is back of our "PRIVATE STOCK"

Express Rates are Lower July 1. Craig Quality is High!

Never before have we offered to our customers such a complete line of stock and of such high quality, including both Flowering and Foliage Plants. We are booking heavily on Spring orders and suggest to our many customers to either call at Norwood and make their selections, or mail order at once so that reservations can be made, to avoid disappointment. Prosperity is here and you should protect your best interests for bigger and better sales with Craig Quality Stock.

We cordially invite you to our new home at Norwood Station, Delaware County, Pa., easily reached by the Pennsylvania R. R. to Norwood Station, and Baltimore & Ohio R. R. to Holmes Station, or by trolley.

CROTONS

The Croton, with its highly colored foliage, is indispensable during fall and winter. We have the largest and most complete collection of Crotons in the world, carrying at the present time for spring sales over 50,000, all of the very highest quality and brilliantly colored. Immediate delivery.

4-inch pots, strong plants, $12 per dozen, $75 per 100.

5-inch pots, strong plants, $15 and $18 per dozen.

6-inch pots, strong plants, $24 and $30 per dozen.

8-inch pots, strong plants, $4, $5 and $6 each.

10-inch pots, strong plants, $7.50 and $10 each.

12 and 14-inch pots, specimen plants, $15, $20 and $25 each.

CROTONS (NARROW LEAF TYPE)

Delicatissima, Golden Thread and Florence.

These varieties are indispensable for table decoration and we predict a great future for them, as nothing surpasses them for use in artistic arrangement.

2½-inch pots, $35 per 100.

4-inch pots, $12 per dozen, $75 per 100.

5-inch pots, $18 per dozen.

6-inch pots, $24 and $30 per dozen.

CROTON PUNCTATA

One of the most satisfactory and finest varieties for basket work and centers of ferneries.

2½-inch pots, $30 per 100, $175 per 1,000.

3-inch pots, $35 per 100.

4-inch pots, $50 per 100.

Every retail store and grower should feature Crotons this spring. We know our stock will please you and your customer.

CROTON LEAVES AND SPRAYS

Cut Croton Leaves and Sprays have been supplied by us in the past few years to some of the leading florists, who have featured them in mantel, table and funeral work. Cut Crotons will last in a cool place from three to four weeks. We can supply them every day in the year.

Very highly colored sprays at 50c each; cut leaves, $5 per 100.

DRACAENAS

There is no other variety of foliage plant so attractive as the highly colored Dracaena. The small and medium sizes can be used to great advantage in making up the popular spring baskets, while the large specimens have always been in great demand for decorative purposes. We are now growing more Dracaenas, in greater variety, than any firm in the country.

DRACAENA GODSEFFIANA

Green and white leaf, very hardy, fine for baskets.

A dwarf, compact form of Nephrolepis elegantissima, each plant making an ideal shape.

2½-inch pots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1,000.

4-inch pots, $5 per dozen, $40 per 100.

6-inch pots, $12 per dozen.

NEPHROLEPIS TEDDY JUNIOR

A grand dwarf Fern. Fine, young plants.

4-inch pots, $35 per 100.

6-inch pots, heavy, $12 and $15 per dozen.

8-inch pots, $24 and $30 per dozen.

11-inch tubs, $6 and $7.50 each.

NEPHROLEPIS HARRISII OR ROOSEVELT

2½-inch pots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1,000.

4-inch pots, $35 per 100.

11-inch tubs, $7.50 and $10 each.

NEPHROLEPIS VERONA

Makes a good plant in all sizes. Much finer frond than any created sort outside of N. Smithii. The fronds are carried on a heavy, wiry stem. We consider it one of the best of the newer introductions.

4-inch pots, $35 per 100.

6-inch pots, $12 per dozen, $90 per 100.

NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII

4-inch pots, $35 per 100.

6-inch pots, $12 per dozen.

FELARGONIUM MASTER GREETING

One of the best flowering plants.

OTAHUTE ORANGES

Stock that is free of all disease. Strong plants.

2½-inch pots, $15 per 100, $125 per 1,000.

4-inch pots, in flower, $75 per 100.

PANDANUS VEITCHII

Well colored plants.

6-inch pots, $18 and $24 per dozen.

7-inch pots, $4 each.

8-inch pots, $5 and $6 each.

10-inch pots, specimens, $10 each.

VICUS REPENS

Fine for small boxes.

2½-inch pots, $20 per 100.

ENGLISH IVIES

We have a large stock of the small leaf variety.

2½-inch pots, 2 and 3 runners to pot, $10 per 100, $90 per 1,000.

CYCLAMEN

We are growing 100,000 plants this year and our stock was never in finer condition at this time of the year. Grown from the very best German strain of seed obtainable. Suggest placing orders early to insure prompt delivery.

2½-inch pots, equal to 3-inch stock, $15 per 100, $160 per 1,000.

4-inch pots, heavy plants, July 1st delivery, $50 per 100, $450 per 1,000.

POINSETTIAS

Bright red variety.

We are now booking orders for young stock, June delivery and later.

2½-inch pots, $12 per 100, $100 per 1,000.

SWEET PEA FIELDS OF CALIFORNIA

These are the impressions of the Glen Ellyn sweet pea grower on his first trip to the Pacific coast. Because of his viewpoint, fresh and unfamiliar with that favored section, they will doubtless be of the greater interest to the many florists who have yet to make the trip.

ONE week is a limited time in which to look over the seed farms of the great state of California, even if one more or less restricts his inspection to sweet peas. A few outstanding observations from the point of view of a cut flower grower may, however, be of interest.

Practically all growing operations in California are based on irrigation, and the cost of this in some cases is enormous. Where the large sources of supply are not available, wells are driven, or water is conducted long distances, in some cases from a river or a lake. Any reasonable cost is paid for water, it is said; in most cases this is, of course, necessarily true.

Cultivation Assists Irrigation.

In orchards a furrow is opened on each side of a row of trees, and the water is turned in. Sometimes iron pipe is used to feed these furrows, but more generally large open ditches convey the water long distances. For crops in rows two or three feet apart, a single ditch is opened between the rows, where the level of the ground permits and the area is limited. Sometimes the entire bed is covered with water, the edges being ridged up to hold it. Heavy applications are usually made two or three times during the season. The response is such as we enjoy during a wet season, the kind of luxurious growth that is easily admired.

An important feature of irrigating in California is the thorough cultivation following it. The benefit of the latter is appreciated probably no more than it is with us on this side of the Rockies; but it is practiced most intensively. The greater need—or shall we say the greater cost?—of moisture prompts California growers to give so much attention to this important detail. I shall never forget the impression made by vast fields of prunes and other fruit in the Santa Clara valley, with the soil as clean and fine as we should prepare it for a seed bed. Several times I was reminded of the impression our unusually dry summers, with no attempt at irrigation, made on these western growers. While we usually grow a good outdoor crop under normal conditions, it has occurred to me that in the case of our valuable stocks on limited areas more attention should be paid to irrigating them when moisture is needed. There is no reason for allowing carnations to become stunted and full of spider, or asters to dry up with disease, because lack of moisture does not give them vitality enough to fight it off. We all know the limiting factor in plant growth to be moisture, and while we sometimes have enough of it, more frequently we do not.

Big Seed Farms.

Another sight I shall not soon forget is the vast acreage of lettuce and other vegetables for seed on the 3,000-acre farm of C. C. Morse & Co., all as weedless and thoroughly cultivated as it is possible to be. I had always associated the work of roguing with sweet peas, not realizing that all our common garden vegetables underwent the same scientific process. It is probably safe to say that the average grower has no conception of the expense the responsible seed grower is under in this matter of roguing, or how much the value of his crop depends on it, or how surely the value would depreciate were it not for these high standards constantly kept in mind by the seed grower. Because of the intensive crossing and the consequent improvement, the sweet pea is an example of this. At the Morse ranch this work is under the keen eye of Frank Cuthbertson. An extensive acreage has been tried out this season, at a location closely bordering on the ocean, with most encouraging results so far as growth and freedom from aphids are concerned. fifteen to eighteen inches long in the open, as they do there, requires exact conditions, and to look over extensive acreages of such stock gives a sweet pea enthusiast an eyeful. Mr. Cuthbertson has practically fixed a selection of duplex in cream and white, late flowering. This breaks into the new class we have been looking for. The stock is limited, but it is there and requires only time to work it up.

At Guadalupe.

Down at Guadalupe, also within a few miles of the coast, is another favorably located sweet pea ranch, of 300 acres, owned by the L. D. Waller Seed Co. There is a large acreage of many other flower seeds, specialties—in fact, everything in this line is tried out and produced extensively if the growing conditions are exact. The vagaries of climatic conditions along the coast, caused by the influence of air movements from the ocean through various mountain passes, makes necessary a careful study of these conditions, as they affect different crops. A line that will not do well at the home ranch may find its perfect developing conditions a few miles away. Mr. Waller points with pride to a block of the new early-flowering sweet pea, Grenadier, a large, rich crimson, on phenomenal stems.

The American Legion poppy, of the Shirley type, is a flaming scarlet; the writer believes it should be carefully tried out by cut flower growers. A bunch of these, cut close and sent home by parcel post, arrived in fair condition four days later. Of course, the petals dropped in a short time after the flowers were unpacked.

Probably the largest collection of Cupid sweet peas in the world is to be found on this ranch. This class is grown principally for the European trade, where the cut flower is not so important a factor as is the bedding plant business.

To Lompoc Valley.

I was given to understand by these California boosters that the only bad stretch of road in the state connects this section with the Lompoc valley, across the mountain. Their highways are so favorably known that, out of consideration for our generous hosts, I will not record my impressions of this particular one.

The mountain scenery makes this a short trip, indeed, to the great seed-growing ranch of the W. Atlee Burpee Co. Here we were taken in hand by W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., who was there for the sweet pea roguing season, and Harry F. Buckman, under whose able management this ranch has become a center of interest to the sweet pea world. To the writer the outstanding point of interest was a lot of seedlings of the Hawlmärk Pink type in the early-flowering class, unfixed as yet. It is a prize worth working for, and I believe perseverance, so necessary in all original sweet pea work, is alone needed to give us an entirely new shade in sweet peas. Chevalier is a new rose-colored variety, easily twice the size of Fordhook Rose. Burpee's Orange, from a cut flower grower's point of view, gives us what we need, a real orange, wings and all. In Robin Hood we shall have a vivid scarlet with a slight maroon cast and great size. A 2-acre block of Columbia, the new pink and white of the Blanche Ferry type, was, for strong growth, hardly to be distinguished from the late-flowering variety of this color. Among the late-flowering kinds as seen among all the growers, Pink Pearl is outstanding. It is a large, deep rose, a real cut flower color. Hebe, in the same color class, is large, really enormous, but has a blue tinge when compared closely with Pink Pearl.

Fighting the Aphis.

The arch enemy of all sweet pea growers, under glass as well as in the field, is the aphis. A few days of unusually warm weather in the California fields give this pest a dangerous hold on the vines. The normal temperature of 50 to 60 degrees keeps it in check so that it can be fought successfully. For this purpose is used a white powder known as Nico-Dust, for which, by the way, I believe the manufacturers could find a market among cut flower growers, in place of a liquid spray, for use out-

A GROUP OF SWEET PEA MEN.

On the preceding page is to be seen a group of men whose aggregate knowledge of sweet peas, if it could be in any manner combined as a whole, would be amazingly extensive. If you don't recognize them, we'll point them out, beginning, in usual fashion, at the left. Dr. Franklin, of the L. D. Waller Seed Co., is taking notes. Harry F. Buckman, manager of the W. Atlee Burpee Co. sweet pea ranch, is smiling. L. D. Waller, himself, has his hands behind his back. Frank Cuthbertson, of C. C. Morse & Co., with a cigar, quizzically regards the photographer above his notes. George J. Ball, of Glen Ellyn, Ill., is looking over some peas from the Burpee fields. Edgar Bowen, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, sees humor in the distance. W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., is the photographer, and therefore unseen.

GOLDEN STATE'S SEED CROPS

GROWING SEED IN CALIFORNIA.

Distinct Districts.

As a California industry, seed growing suffers by comparison in cultural volume with other horticultural lines, such as citrous fruits, almonds, walnuts, raisins, prunes and apricots, the general fruit canning business, and even vegetable shipping. As compared with other seed growing districts, here and in Europe, it is, however, of large proportions.

California is a long state and one of a great variety of climates, elevations and soils. The oldest seed growing district is the Santa Clara valley, in and about the town of Santa Clara, a town of some 5,000 inhabitants, fifty miles south of San Francisco. None of the old locations is now used for seed growing, but there are some seed farms in the Santa Clara valley. Most of the growers have gone about thirty-five to fifty miles south of Santa Clara to Gilroy, San Juan, San Felipe and Hollister. Here is grown most of the lettuce, radish, parsley and salsify and about fifty per cent of the onion seed. This district is what we designate as part of the coast valleys, since the district lies to the west of the coast range of mountains. Farther over and nearer the ocean are now grown sweet peas and and culinary peas. Still farther south and still along the coast are the large flower and seed farms at Arroyo Grande, Guadalupe and Lompoc. Here are also grown large areas of sweet peas. Still farther south and along the coast is the

One of the most informative and interesting of the papers presented at the convention of the American Seed Trade Association, at Chicago last week, this description of "Vegetable Seed Growing in California," as it was entitled, is by Lester L. Morse, of San Francisco, Cal., whose broad knowledge and keen insight have won him an outstanding position in the seed trade.

lima and pole bean district, at Carpinteria and Ventura. Farthest south, near Los Angeles, are other large flower seed growing districts and tomato seed farms.

"Up River."

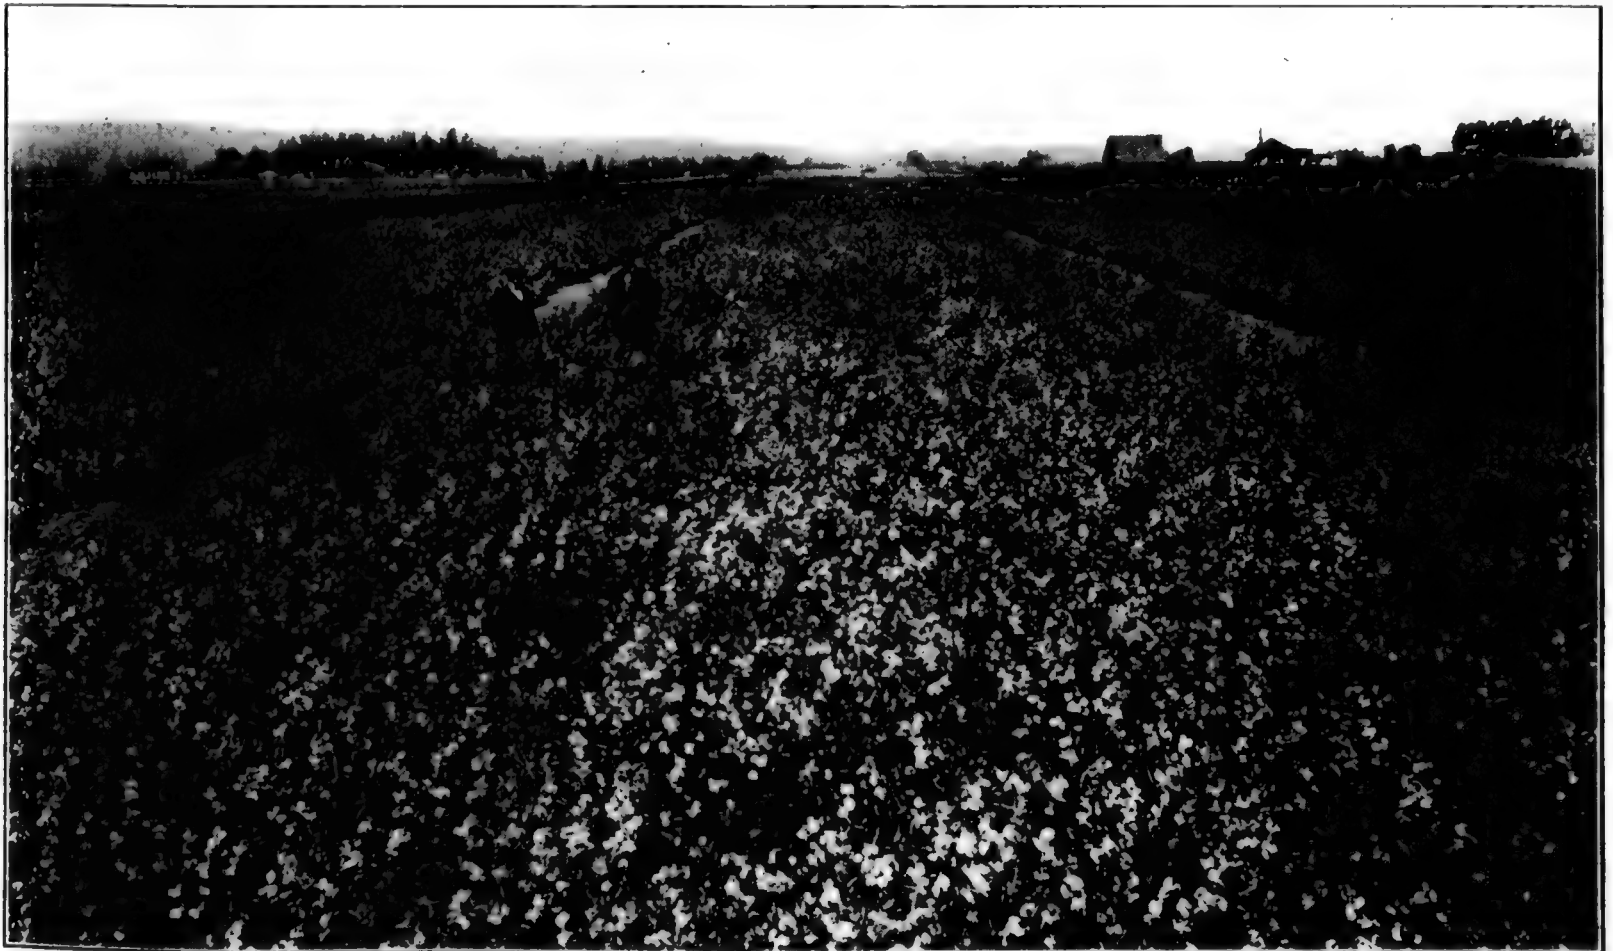

An entirely different district, both in climate and soil, is what we call the river district, locally referred to as "up river." This is a territory near Sacramento, a city of about 50,000 people, the capital of the state, and Stockton, a city of about 40,000 inhabitants. Flowing up to Stockton from the south is the great San Joaquin river and flowing down from the north to Sacramento is the great Sacramento river. These two rivers turn west to a pass through the coast range to San Francisco bay and thence to the ocean. Where the rivers meet are large tracts of tule islands, which have practically all been reclaimed with high levees and fine drainage systems. While the soil varies from almost pure muck or peat to heavier loam or silt, it is all rich, moist soil and is nearly all under a high state of cultivation. The moisture is easily controlled by huge drainage systems, which pump out the water when there is too much and pump it in from the rivers and their tributaries (called sloughs) when the soil is too dry.

East of the Mountains.

Lying east of the mountains, the delta section, as it is coming to be called by the newer river settlers, does not get the cool summer winds that blow from the ocean along the coast country and is much hotter and drier in the summer, and crops ripen earlier.

Occasionally there is an unusually hot, dry wind in June, when seed crops are in bloom, and we experience a bad burn on the seed head, whether carrot, leek or onion, and sometimes the crop is seriously damaged. In the delta there is practically no fog in summer and the morning dews are usually evaporated before 8 o'clock, so that when crops are ripe they are best harvested early, and cure or dry on the sheets within a few days and can then be threshed by being rolled with a roller drawn by horses. Practically all the seed crops are threshed in this simple manner, and the method is preferable to threshing with a machine, since there is no cleaning of a machine necessary when it is moved from one variety to another, and in the case of carrot, the beards or spines are nicely rubbed off by the roller. Such seeds as carrot, celery, beet, parsnip, etc., are run through a fanning mill and given a rough cleaning, and then shipped to the seed grower, who cleans the seed to a merchantable sample. Onion and leek are rolled and fanned, then washed or sunk in water, then dried and milled once, after which they are sent to the grower, who finishes the work of cleaning.

These river crops are usually grown on small areas by gardeners or farmers who work at fixed prices for certain work. For instance, in the case of growing onion seed, the grower supplies the onion bulbs, and in the case of roots, the farmers may or may not grow these for the grower, but the price is determined by the work he performs. All sheets, sacks, etc., are supplied or loaned by the grower, and he is usually called upon to supply money for crop advances. The growers must do all the superintending of the work and must have their representatives on the job the year around.

Seed Grower's Place.

The California seed grower used to be one who either owned or leased his own farm, owned all his stock and equipment, and operated his farm with day labor. Much of this has now been changed, and while he still owns or leases a large part of his land and works it himself, he places more or less of his acreage with various farmers who grow for him. This is now done both along the coast and in the delta district. Many acres of peas, beans and vine seeds are now grown, but none of these crops, so far as I know, is grown by the grower himself. There is a demand now for two distinctive titles, one the seed grower, who gets the seed for the seedsman or dealer, and the other the farmer, grower or producer, who plants a small acreage for the seed grower. To my mind, we should designate them hereafter as seed grower and farmer grower.

One unfamiliar with the work of producing seed crops might think it an easy matter to get direct to the farmer grower and eliminate the margin that seems to exist between him and the seed grower. It would only be because he was unfamiliar, however, with the organization and system required to breed stock seeds, to secure intelligent farmer growers, to arrange biennial crops and to get the crops properly planted, and he would doubtless underestimate the cost of equipment that must be loaned the farmer and the cash advances that so frequently must be made.

Crops of Small Seeds.

Such crops as lettuce, radish, parsley, onion, sweet peas, culinary peas and seed beans are grown in the coast valleys. The first-mentioned small seeds are produced by the seed growers, who to a large extent are farmers themselves and operate their own seed farms and on rather a large scale.

As the weather is cooler and fogs and heavy dews are frequent, harvesting is conducted on a somewhat different plan than in the river or delta district. Such crops as lettuce, onion and sweet peas are dried on sheets on account of their shelling so easily, but radish, parsley and other crops are laid in windrows in the field and hauled to the threshing machines in cloth-lined wagons. Onion, radish and sweet peas require specially constructed threshers, but lettuce is best threshed by simply rolling with a big roller drawn by horses. River crops, which include carrot, celery, parsnip, beet, spinach and onion, are all rolled out; it does not pay to thresh these crops in that section with machines, since the farmer growers usually plant only small acreages for the seed growers and to move machines from one island to another on steamers or barges requires much time, trouble and expense.

Retaining Strains.

It is hardly necessary to explain to an assembly of seedsmen that seed growing is a highly intensive form of horticulture.

The selection of stock seeds and the development of fine strains is carried on to a great degree in California. This development work is a great study and many things have been learned by long and patient experience.

The California climate, whether coastal or valley, has a tendency to change the character of some plants, especially biennials, and it is necessary for the seed grower to renew his stocks by getting stock seeds from crops grown in the east or northern Europe, where there are definite seasons. Such items as carrot, beet, onion and radish change fast, and it is one of the seed grower's problems and also his secret as to how he can maintain his quality with these crops. Simply ordering a few pounds from an eastern or European grower is no security, since even a grower of the highest reputation may have strains that "break" or have often crossed in his fields. The best method is to have several sources and try out stocks in his trial grounds before using them.

The tendency of onion grown too long in California is to lose its keeping quality, and the tendency of carrots and radishes is to run too large and coarse, with long leaves, while beet not only wants to run away with size and leaf, but becomes light-colored and light-zoned. All these tendencies or defects can be controlled, however, by the intelligent seed grower.

On the other hand, California is the home of lettuce, and we all prefer to handle our own strains and carry on our own development work with it.

California Specialties.

The list of items named are what we call California specialties, including carrot, celery, endive, leek, lettuce, garden mustard, onion, parsnip, parsley, radish and salsify. Such crops as beets and spinach are usually grown in more moderate quantities. All of these, you will observe, are what some call small seeds.

Flower seed growing is quite another industry, except that most of the vegetable seed growers grow sweet peas.

Culinary, or garden peas are grown successfully in California, and in 1920 there was about 30,000 acres put in. The quality of these varies considerably with the location.

California has pretty much a monopoly of the seed production of pole beans and lima beans. The former can spread naturally on the ground and our dry summers give the pods a fine chance to ripen without discoloration.

Many other kinds of seeds can be grown successfully, and my own firm grows more or less of its own sweet corn, melon, squash and cucumber, but these usually for our own coast markets.

The cost of these crops is usually considerably more than the prices charged by the regular middle west growers, and this branch of seed growing is not likely to develop to any great proportions, although one middle west grower is reported to have 500 or 600 acres of watermelon out this year in the San Joaquin valley.

There is practically no cabbage, broccoli or cauliflower seed grown in California and little mangel or sugar beet.

Estimate of Acreage.

On account of the unusual conditions developed by the war and the great surplus produced by unusually heavy crops and unwarranted acreage, it is difficult to estimate the extent of California seed growing. My own estimate, however, which is little better than a guess, is that 10,000 acres cover all the small seeds in a normal year, but, of course, the last three years it has been much under this figure. A normal year for garden, or culinary peas is about 6,000 acres, and for pole, dwarf and lima beans about 10,000 acres; for tomatoes for seed, about 600 to 700 acres, and for other miscellaneous vegetable seed crops, about 1,500 to 2,000 acres. Flower seeds, without sweet peas, probably total 1,000 acres, and sweet peas alone, about 1,200 acres.

Of the small garden seeds I would estimate as normal about 3,000 acres in onion, about 2,000 in lettuce, about 2,000 in radish, about 2,000 in carrot, and 1,000 for parsnip, parsley, salsify, beet and miscellaneous vegetable seed crops.

The total acreage is not large when compared with other crops, and when I spoke of the seed industry as suffering a little in comparison with other industries I had in mind just such illustrations as appear from two statements which appeared in The Review recently. In the Seed Trade Department of this paper for May 18 it was stated that last year's crop of cantaloupes grown commercially was about 35,800 carloads, with a value of $17,000,000, and that Sweet Peas Grown under Contract by John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Cal., for American Bulb Co.

160,000 pounds of seed were probably used to produce the crop. In my own opinion the seed growers got just about $40,000 for the seed. In the same column it was also stated that there were produced about 19,000 carloads of lettuce, valued at about $12,500,000, and that about 90,000 pounds of seed were planted. The outside figure the seed growers got for this seed would be about $50,000.

Our California Development Association, in its bureau of statistics, states that in 1921 California ranked first in the production of lettuce and shipped 9,538 carloads. This indicates that practically half of the eating lettuce produced in this country was grown in California last year, and practically all the lettuce seed used in America is grown in central California.

What the future of seed growing will be depends quite as much on labor as on climate and soil, and California so far has enjoyed a good supply of efficient and intelligent oriental labor, which is adaptable and dependable. The growers farther south use Mexican peons with good success, but there are few of them used in central California. Most of the seed growers in California are now optimistic, and as surplus stocks begin to disappear, we are confidently looking for good business, which means more acreage, and in time we hope for fair profits to return.

FLORADALE FARMS.

The illustration on page 17 shows part of the 150 acres occupied by sweet peas at the Floradale Farms of W. Atlee Burpee Co., in Santa Barbara county, Cal. In the picture appears W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., and the resident farm manager, Harry Buckman, on their daily round of all the fields, supervising the roguing and carefully watching the ripening of the crops. This illustration shows the early-flowering sweet peas as they looked about six weeks ago. By this time they have set pods and promise to give a good crop of well ripened and plump seeds.

Burpee's growing list this year includes the three outstanding novelties for 1923, Burpee's Orange, Cheerful and Sunburst Improved, which are this season offered to florists for the first time. Each of these varieties has been awarded certificates of merit. Mrs. Warren G. Harding, the firm's outstanding novelty last year, also promises to give a good crop. If this promise is fulfilled, the firm hopes to be able to supply the demand for seed of this variety; last year a large number of orders were turned down on account of the shortage of seed.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The early part of last week produced little business in the wholesale cut flower market, but Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week brought an improvement and a good business was done. The change was largely due to weather conditions and a good demand for flowers for social functions, which made an ordinary supply look rather small. Storms in the last few days have cut down arrivals of outdoor-grown stock considerably, and the market opens this week with a supply not more than adequate for requirements, with a demand somewhat increased, owing to the many collegiate and institutional exercises scheduled for the close of the educational season. In consequence, prices generally show an advance over those of last week.

The rose supply is rather scanty. Dark weather has curtailed the supply and a better demand has brought these flowers to the point of scarcity. American Beauty, however, in spite of a short supply, does not command more than $50 per hundred for specials. Hybrid teas are in rather small supply, but the demand for them is such as to boost prices to a range of $3 to $15 per hundred. Consignees are wondering what returns may be for next week, when the real summer demand comes in after the July 4 holiday.

Carnations have stiffened, but the quality is still on the poor side. Monday, June 26, the range was $2 to $6 per hundred, and clearances were easy.

Cattleyas are abundant, but move fairly well at $50 to $150 per hundred.

White lilies are scarce and are likely to remain so for a while; so there is no change from quotations of last week. Lily of the valley is in better demand, and the price range has gone from $2 to $8 per hundred sprays.

There is an abundance of herbaceous material. A few asters have been seen in the market, but one is wondering Arrivals include a quantity of Delphinium Belladonna, which moves at 50 cents to $1 per bunch; a few sweet peas, which move at figures hardly quotable, and much other outside stock, the demand for which is spasmodic, and prices are hard to quote. Availabilities are candytuft, pansies, delphiniums, sweet peas, calendulas, stocks, rubrum lilies, marigolds, coreopsis, pyrethrums, Lilium regale, daisies and alyssum.

Various Notes.

The dates for the next spring flower show have been set for March 12 to 17. There will be no Sunday opening for the next show. The joint flower show committee at its meeting last week elected an executive committee to take care of details, and to relieve the general committee from meeting monthly; this committee is composed of T. A. Havemeyer, Frederick R. Newbold, John Young, F. W. Payne, Arthur Herrington and C. H. Totty. The schedule committee has already been in session, and the preliminary schedule has been prepared for the press. There are few changes from previous schedules to be reported, except, perhaps in the class for the large groups, for which $7,500 has been reserved. The committee is congratulating itself upon the fact that five group exhibits have already been assured. Some change has also been made in the class covering 500-foot groups, so as to make it more open.

TEXAS CONVENTION PROGRAM.

As noted in The Review of June 22, the Texas State Florists' Association is preparing for a gathering at Dallas, July 5 to 7, even larger than its former conventions. Members of the trade throughout the entire state of Texas and other southern states are expecting to attend the convention. A most interesting program for the 3-day session has been prepared and speakers from Illinois, Kansas City, Oklahoma and California, as well as many from the Lone Star state, have been secured, and a rousing welcome is assured all those who attend.

The procedure as set forth in the program is as follows:

JULY 5, 2:30 P. M.

Meeting called to order by Vice-president Henry Greve, of Dallas.
Invocation, by Dr. William M. Anderson, Jr.
Address of welcome, by Mayor Sawnie Aldredge.
Response, by James Begbie, of Shreveport.
President's address, by Verner J. Davis, Fort Worth.
Introduction of guests.
Annual report of Secretary-Treasurer Louis J. Tackett, Fort Worth.
Appointment of committees.
Announcements.

JULY 5, 8 P. M.

Reception and ball on roof garden of the Jefferson hotel.

JULY 6, 9:30 A. M.

Reports of standing committees.
"How May a Florist Establish Better Credit as a Borrower?" by Roscoe Smith, manager Fort Worth Clearing House.
"The F. T. D." by Otto Lang, Dallas, district representative of the F. T. D.

Address, by Walter Armacost, Los Angeles, Cal.

JULY 6, 2:30 P. M.

"Carnations and Carnation Diseases," by John Furrow, Oklahoma City.

Address by J. C. Vaughan, Chicago.

"How I Rolled Up Eighty Members for the S. A. F. in Oklahoma," by A. S. Gray, president Oklahoma State Florists' Association.

JULY 6, 8 P. M.

The convention will be entertained at the Jefferson hotel by the representatives of the allied tradesmen.

JULY 7, 9:30 A. M.

"What Is Texas' Duty Toward the S. A. F. and Its Allied Societies?" by Robert C. Kerr, Houston.

Address, by J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.

"My Observations of Growing under Lath and Cheesecloth in California and to What Extent Texas Can Use This Method," by Charles Heacock, Austin.

JULY 7, 2:30 P. M.

"The S. A. F. Convention," by T. J. Noll, president Kansas City Florists' Club.

Reading of communications.

Unfinished business.

Selection of place for 1923 convention.

Election of officers.

JULY 7, 7:30 P. M.

Banquet at Jefferson hotel.

FLORIDA CLUB COUNTS.

While the Florida State Florists' Association is still young in years and will not celebrate its first birthday till next November, at least one important benefit has already been realized from the organization, and one which will save the growers of cut asparagus sprays for florists' use many thousand dollars each year.

In a recent communication from N. A. Reasoner, Oneco, Fla., the secretary-treasurer of the association, he states that pursuant to the instructions given him at the Lakeland convention he has taken up the matter of the express rate on asparagus shipments with the express officials and with the state railroad commission and, while he has not yet succeeded in obtaining a reclassification of this subject in the second-class rating, as he hopes to be able to do, he has at least succeeded in obtaining a concession from the express company with regard to a proper allowance when ice is used for refrigeration. The following letter from the traffic manager of the American Railway Express Co. will be of interest:

We have given this phase of the matter further consideration, and while we cannot see our way clear at this time to restore the second-class rating, we are arranging in our new classification, which will be effective July 15, to make an allowance of twenty-five per cent from gross weight on these shipments where ice is necessarily used for preservation. The weight charged for under this rule must not, of course, be less than the weight of the shipment without ice.

Too much credit can not be given to S. S. Pennock, president of the S. A. F., and W. H. Schulz, Jr., second vice-president, representing the asparagus growers in the Florida association, for their valiant assistance in furnishing information and coöperation in correspondence with the express officials.

While this allowance will be a great boon to the industry, it is felt by all the growers that the old second-class rating should be restored as it was formerly, and there seem to be many reasons to support their claim.

THESE GROWERS ARE BUILDING.

As an indication of the present tendency of the trade toward expansion, the report of M. C. Wright, managing director of Lord & Burnham Co., Chicago, that the volume of business received by the firm from the first of the year has exceeded that of any corresponding period in the company's history, is especially interesting. At this time, too, a large number of inquiries are still being received daily, and the factory has been working overtime to enable the company to maintain prompt deliveries despite the large number of orders. As indicative of the situation in various localities, the following list of L. & B. greenhouses ordered of the western company is presented, through the courtesy of Mr. Wright:

SWEET PEA SOCIETY MEETS

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

Weather Opposes Show.

Two or three weeks ago everything promised well for a splendid sweet pea exhibition in Boston June 24 and 25. Man proposes, however, and the weather man, through Jupiter Pluvius, disposes of some of our summer shows, which are and must ever be largely dependent on kindly climatic conditions. A week of scorching heat was followed by cold, dark weather, which, in turn, culminated in a series of disastrous thunder storms, with torrential rains and hail thrown in for good measure, which simply battered the life out of sweet peas and, in fact, all other open-air flowers. Along the north shore, at Newport and Bar Harbor, where the finest sweet peas in New England are found, a week of fog caused practically all buds to drop and, with such unkindly conditions, it was surprising that any sweet peas appeared at all. It was undoubtedly the smallest sweet pea show the American Sweet Pea Society has yet held, but the enthusiastic spirits who keep the society going, while disappointed, are not discouraged and will give Boston another chance in 1923 to make good.

Will Sweet Peas Hold Stage?

Sweet peas are not now grown in such numbers outdoors in the region of Boston as was the case ten years ago. The Spencer varieties, which now rule supreme, are not as good doers and bloomers as the old grandifloras, and many amateurs have grown discouraged and have dropped sweet pea culture. Even on private estates the number grown thereabouts is not one-fourth that of a decade ago. Lack of labor to care for them is mainly blamed and the added fact that when they flower, employers have moved away to mountain or ocean resorts. Probably this condition is but a temporary one and sweet peas will come back more strongly than ever, as there is no other annual possessing their fragrance, persistent blooming qualities and great range of colors. It is always hard to hit an exact date for a sweet pea show, for what will suit one set of growers may be too late for others 100 miles north or south, and this applies more or less to all our early summer flowers.

Exhibitors were not numerous, but quality for such a season was excellent. The Hitchings memorial cup offered for twelve varieties, twenty-five sprays of each, was won for this year by Edwin Jenkins, superintendent to Girard Foster, Lenox, Mass., with excellent flowers, mainly four on a stem, of Daisy K. Elliott, Floradale Purple, Ravessening, a fine dark maroon variety; Cecily, R. F. Felton, Hebe, Felton's Cream, Constance Hinton, Alexander Malcolm, Mrs. Tom Jones, Rose Elliott and Mascott's Ingman. This exhibit won also the Burpee trophy cup and $10 in cash.

Prizes Won.

For six vases, Allen J. Jenkins, Iris-thorpe, Shrewsbury, was first, with Hebe, Felton's Cream, Constance Hinton, Mascott's Ingman, Floradale Purple and Alexander Malcolm.

Allen J. Jenkins captured the silver trophy offered to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society by the Chestnut Hill Garden Society, for the most artistic display of sweet peas. In his collection were excellent vases of Faith, Dobbie's Cream, King Manuel, Floradale Purple, Jack Cornwall, Mrs. Tom Jones, Felton's Cream, R. F. Felton, Constance Hinton, Daisy K. Elliott and Royal Purple.

For twenty maroon and fifty mixed Spencer, William Gray, superintendent to Princess Anastasia of Greece, Newport, R. I., was first.

For twenty-five lavender, A. J. Jenkins won the Farquhar prize.

In the amateur classes for white, W. J. Taylor, Newport, R. I., was first and Mrs. P. J. Forbes, Worcester, second, each showing Constance Hinton. The same exhibitors won for lavender in the same order, with R. F. Felton. For pink they also won, as well as any other color, Mr. Taylor showing Floradale Purple and Mrs. Forbes, Barbara.

For three vases, W. J. Taylor won with Giant White, Mrs. C. P. Tomlin and Mascott's Ingman; second, Mrs. P. J. Forbes.

For vase of a novelty, Mr. Taylor won with Mrs. David Lloyd George, a variegated variety.

For six varieties, Mrs. Forbes won with nice, fresh flowers of Elfrida Pearson, R. F. Felton, Dobbie's Cream, William Barnes, Constance Hinton and Wedgwood.

Hybrid Display Small.

The display of both hybrid tea and hybrid perpetual roses was the smallest ever seen at a June show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Hybrid perpetuals still seem to keep ahead of hybrid teas in popular favor, however. The vase of the hybrid tea Pharisaer from William Gray was exceptionally good. There were good general displays of roses from the Walter Hunnewell estate, Hillcrest Gardens and Henry Stewart.

A. J. Fish, of New Bedford, made the largest and most truly representative display of rambler and pillar roses ever seen here. He makes a specialty of this type of roses and does them remarkably well. First prize for the finest rose display went to this collection. Of splendid quality were Silver Moon, Dr. Van

W. A. Sperling.

(Re-elected President of the American Sweet Pea Society.)

Fleet, Christine Wright and American Pillar, all Dr. Van Fleet varieties. Among the numerous other sorts shown were Dr. Huey, Baroness Van Ittersum, Climbing Orleans, Bessie Lovett, Aunt Harriet, a fine semi-double scarlet; Philadelphia Rambler, Graff Zeppelin, Sander's White, Edwin Lonsdale, Graf Von Freundorff, awarded honorable mention; Le Mexique, Wartburg, Climbing American Beauty, May Queen, Mme. Glys, Tausendschoen, White Tausendschoen, Francois Guillot, a fine new white; Mme. C. Testout, Petite Jeanne, Ruby Queen, Jean Gerin, a pretty delicate flesh novelty; Climbing Lady Ashtown, Gerbe Rose, May Queen, Oreole, Gardenia, Alberic Barbier, Source d'Or, Prof. C. S. Sargent and Electra. The last half dozen are all yellows, Gardenia being deepest while in the bud. All when open are pale sulphur in color.

Late Peonies.

T. C. Thurlow's Sons, Inc., had another of their charming displays of late peonies, arranged again in large vases with a pretty setting of native cedars. Among the best varieties shown were: Mme. Emile Galle, Mme. Boulanger, grandiflora; Etta, Milton Hill, Marie Lemoine, M. Boucharlataine, Mme. Bollet, Jeanne Gaudichau, Soulange, August Vaillaume, Pierre Duchartre, Alfred de Musset, Claire Du Bois, E. J. Shaylor, Venus, R. P. Whitefield, Livingston, Jules Calot, Eugene Verdier, Winnikenni, Comte de Gomer, Enchantress, Edward VII, Rubra Superba and a charming deep salmon pink seedling under number. This display received a bronze medal.

Eric H. Wetterlow, Manchester, Mass., had a nice display of tuberous-rooted begonias of the drooping Alice Manning type. Golden Chain, Alice Manning, Bickey and Eunice were some of the best and there were some fine seedlings. These begonias come in a fine range of colors and are well adapted for basket culture or would be desirable for the front of porch or window boxes in partial shade. Seedling No. 7 received a first-class certificate; also the Walter Hunnewell estate for Clematis recta mandshurica and Astilbe koreana.

C. F. Duryea & Son had a display of poppies and there were several large collections of native flowers. Robert Seares and David Tyndall had the best roses in the amateur classes.

Dr. Robert Huey, of Philadelphia, lectured on hardy roses and their culture each day of the show to capacity audiences, showing the keen interest taken by amateurs in the queen of flowers.

A meeting of the American Sweet Pea Society was held on the afternoon of June 24. Among those present were W. A. Sperling, William Sim, William Gray, W. C. and Mrs. Noonan, Gustave Thommen, A. J. Jenkins, J. H. Stalford and George W. Kerr. W. A. Sperling presided. After the president's address, the secretary and treasurer presented their report. The financial statement showed a balance of $446.34 in the treasury. The same board of officers was unanimously reelected and Boston was favored for the 1923 convention after a short general discussion of the society and its officers.

CLEVELAND FOR PUBLICITY.

James A. McLaughlin, president of the Cleveland Florists' Club, through his able publicity committee, is making a determined effort to reestablish the one per cent plan of raising the money to finance a sustained publicity campaign. A statement sent out by this committee says: "The results of this constructive work will be to bring the Fifth City again to the fore in an up-to-date florists' advertising. The old spirit of enterprise, for many months absent, is returning to the Cleveland Florists' Club, and let us hope its return will be abiding.

"Growers' and retailers' contracts are now being distributed, and it is the plan of the committee to initiate the collecting through the wholesale houses just as soon as a majority of the retailers and growers in the Cleveland district sign up. The application of the one per cent will be general, as it is agreed that this figure is equitable to all parties concerned."

"The retailers' form covers the purchase of flowers in the 'Cleveland and other wholesale markets,' which insures the inclusion of stock purchased in out-of-town markets in the local fund. All growers consigning stock to the Cleveland market are being presented with contracts, and it is to be hoped that all will consider it a duty to become contributory to the fund.

"The perfecting of this plan will raise from $15,000 to $20,000 annually to be employed in first-class publicity methods for increasing the sale of the wares of the florists in this district. Every person connected with the business will be benefited by this great co-operative work. Publicity has helped in the past, and its intelligent use will increase business again; every florist therefore should be zealously for it, and should eagerly place his or her name upon the dotted line in its favor. Come on, everybody!"

Newark, O.—Charles A. Duerr, of this city and Greenville, has sold both places to the Ankele Floral Co., also of Newark, and the new owners will take possession July 1. Mr. Duerr is on the lookout for a favorable opportunity to reëngage in the business.

GUDE ON TARIFF

GUDE TALKS ABOUT TARIFF.

William F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F., has been making inquiries in an effort to determine what action the Senate will take in the matter of tariff rates on bulbs, etc., in the McCumber-Fordney tariff bill. There has been a rumor in the trade that a change would be made and an ad valorem rate or rates substituted for the present proposed specific rates of duty. Mr. Gude has taken the matter up with members of the Senate finance committee and has issued the following statement:

"There is little likelihood of any change being made in the provisions of the pending McCumber-Fordney tariff bill covering florists' supplies, as far as I can learn. There has been a rumor that a change that would not be of advantage to the horticultural trades, was being sought, but members of the finance committee have informed me within the last few days that the paragraphs as written in the bill were promulgated on the basis of recommendations from the trade and, such being the case, the members are disinclined to recommend any changes to the Senate.

"Paragraph 751 of the bill reads as follows:

Tulip, lily and narcissus bulbs, and lily of the valley pips, $2 per thousand; hyacinth bulbs, $4 per thousand; crocus bulbs, $1 per thousand; all other bulbs and roots, root stocks, clumps, corms, tubers, and herbaceous perennials, imported for horticultural purposes, thirty per centum ad valorem; cut flowers, fresh or preserved, forty per centum ad valorem.

"I have found that there are many persons interested in this matter who do not quite understand what the tariff provisions really mean. The ad valorem rates in the bill as now before the Senate are to be assessed on the basis of the value of the merchandise abroad. The ad valorem rates above quoted covering florists' stocks are ten and fifteen per cent, respectively, higher than the rates provided in the same paragraph in the House bill, but the latter were to be applied to the merchandise on the basis of the cost of the same or similar stock produced in the United States. That is called the American valuation plan.

"To conform to the wishes of the trade, and to do away as much as possible with probable litigation in the customs courts, the Senate finance committee made a number of changes in the bill as it came from the House of Representatives. How the bill was changed can be seen from a comparison of the paragraph above and the following paragraph adopted by the House:

Par. 751: Tulip, narcissus and hyacinth bulbs, and lily of the valley pips, $4 per thousand; crocus bulbs, $1 per thousand; all other bulbs and roots, root stocks, corms, tubers and herbaceous perennials, imported for horticultural purposes, twenty per centum ad valorem; cut flowers, fresh or preserved, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

"The specific rates approved by the Senate finance committee are declared to be acceptable to the bulk of those interested. It is not possible, the members of the committee declare, to eliminate the ad valorem rates entirely, for they are applied in what is called the 'basket clause,' designed to catch all commodities that will not fall in the classifications to which the specifics are applied.

"I am informed that the Senate will probably act on this paragraph early next month. It will probably be another month before final action on the entire bill is taken. Then it will go to conference of members of the Senate and the House to iron out the differences of opinion that have arisen growing out of the changes made by the Senate in acting on the bill as it was passed by the House.

"There will probably be a big fight between the two branches of Congress over the valuation plan, with the result, no doubt, of the present system being retained. Members of the trade can readily see that there would be interminable confusion with respect to imports if the House scheme prevailed."

NEWS FROM WISCONSIN

WISCONSIN SUMMER MEETING.

Elaborate preparations are under way to make the summer meeting of the Wisconsin State Florists' Association at Oshkosh this year a huge success. The meeting will take place July 25 and 26. Indications point to a record attendance; hotel reservations should be sent in early to James E. Taylor, 76 Frankford street, Oshkosh, Wis.

Henry R. Welke, Sec'y.

OSHKOSH, WIS.

The company known as the Ward B. Davis Co. has been recently incorporated, with a capitalization of $50,000. Ward B. Davis is president of the new firm, Elmer Ferson, of Neenah, Wis., is vice-president and Alan H. Davis is secretary and treasurer. The Ward B. Davis Co. owns greenhouses at both Oshkosh and Neenah. Downtown stores are operated in both cities. An addition of several new houses to the Oshkosh range is planned for this summer.

The florists of Oshkosh will welcome other florists from all over the state at the summer meeting of the Wisconsin Florists' Society, to be held at Oshkosh July 25.

MANITOWOC, WIS.

The Manitowoc Floral Co. says that its spring business was about thirty per cent ahead of last year's in volume and that prices were much lower. This firm has planted 50,000 aster plants and 100,000 gladiolus bulbs. The firm will ship to the Chicago market.

The entire florists' business of the M. G. Madsen Seed Co. has been purchased by the Manitowoc Floral Co., and the firm has been incorporated, with a capitalization of $50,000. Victor Jansen is president and W. V. Hamilton is secretary and treasurer.

Outdoor crops in this vicinity look exceptionally fine. There has been little hot weather and plenty of rain.

RACINE, WIS.

Although stock has been quite plentiful throughout the spring and the beginning of the summer, business has continued splendid. The outlook for the future is fine. Most local manufacturing industries are getting back to their normal output and this helps the florists' business as well as others.

Miss Mae Cartmill, of the Flower Shop, entertained the members and employees of her firm and the Racine Floral Co. at her cottage on the lake June 9. All had a fine time.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Miller are making good progress in their new venture of making paste soap, which they expect to put on the market in a short time.

Earl Pierce has just returned from La Fayette, Ind., where he attended Purdue University. He is glad to spend his vacation at home.

A new quartet, formed by Rudolph Gulbransen, is making one of the biggest hits at the florists' gatherings. The quartet knows sixty-three songs, all the latest.

Joseph Rehl has been making some wonderful catches of pickerel, at Pine Lake, Wis. He contemplates taking the northern lakes trip soon and he assures us that he will bring home that 60-pound muskellunge of little arbor-vitæ before the summer is over.

H. J. B.

P. N. Obertin reports that business at the greenhouses for the spring was exceedingly good. He sold entirely out of stock, except for a few geraniums. This firm is remodeling its front range of houses. In the Kenosha store, bedding

Every Week

There is a rush in the office of The Review on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday like that in a florist's shop the day before Easter. The rush would be lessened and more time could be given to individual wants of readers and advertisers if they would, as far as they can, mail their communications, whether directed to the editorial or advertising departments, so as to reach this office Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Thank You

business was fifteen per cent better than that of last year. Cemetery wreaths cleaned up finely.

KENOSHA, WIS.

For once in their history, according to L. Turner Sons, they were able to supply the demand for bedding plants; stock was in fine, healthy condition, and there were plenty of blooms. Usually, the firm runs short. The demand for bedding plants did not seem so great as in other years, which may be accounted for by the fact that Kenosha industries have been but recently working full time. For Memorial day this firm featured wreaths more than ever, with good results.

There is a general feeling that people are trying to catch up on their old debts and avoiding adding new debts just now. However, business is in a healthy condition and is steady. H. Meyer Sons, W. E. Turner and L. Turner Sons report increases over last year for the month of May.

Magnolia wreaths, decorated wreaths and bouquets sold exceptionally well for Memorial day. This class of business is on the increase. People are continually asking for something that lasts, and the decorated wreath fills a real want, especially for Memorial day.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Edlefsen Floral Co., which has just opened a store at 183 Eleventh street, carries the name of a family well known in florists' circles here. Margaret Edlefsen Kroseberg, daughter of the late William Edlefsen, is the head. At one time she was in business as the Maggie Edlefsen Co., at 628 Grand avenue; the firm's title was changed to Herman C. Kroseberg, who combined the trades of florist and furrier, upon her marriage. The A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, outfitted the new store at 183 Eleventh street. Greenhouses are at Twentieth and Atkinson avenue.

H. Locker & Sons will entertain the Florists' Club at the grounds adjoining their residence, Thursday, July 6. A large attendance is looked for at this meeting. The ladies are invited.

Dodgeville, Wis.—Ole Larson is planning to build a greenhouse this fall.

New London, Wis.—The New London Floral Co. says that this season's business has compared favorably with that of a year ago. The firm will take down its present service building this year and will replace it with a concrete block building, 30x100, and two stories high.

Prairie du Chien, Wis.—A considerable amount of remodeling is being done at the Dial Garden Greenhouses. The houses are being painted and the glass in the range reputtied. The coal shed is being enlarged. A new office building, 12x18 feet, is also being added to the range.

Marshfield, Wis.—T. D. Hefko believes business is just as good this year as it was last year, but it is much harder to collect the money. He has completed a new propagating house and a bulb cellar, and is ready to install a new boiler. It has 75,000 feet of radiation and will be adequate to heat the entire place. He contemplates opening a flower store downtown next autumn.

Stevens Point, Wis.—The firm that in the past operated under the style of W. E. Macklin is now known as the Macklin-Wilson Floral Co. E. A. Wilson, of the Flambeau Paper Co., Park Falls, Wis., became a member of the firm last August. A contract has been let by the firm for a pipe-frame greenhouse, to be erected on the company's range site. The firm experienced a marked increase in business this spring, as compared with that of last spring.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Why Not Respond?

It is pleasing to record that a considerable number of subscribers to the campaign fund have in the last week or so responded with checks covering the memoranda of subscription indebtedness recently sent out from the secretary's office. Still, many have not yet responded to the appeal for immediate payment of pledges. It should not be necessary further to remind delinquents that the publicity committee needs the money pledged for the carrying on of the campaign. Progress is made only in proportion to the funds available and, unless sufficient money is in hand to cover advertising contracts at the time they should be made, the committee is sadly handicapped, and much of its work goes for nothing.

Among the subscriptions recorded at this time, it is pleasing to note one of $500 from Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago, who have the success of the campaign much at heart; another of $200 from J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, Ia.; still others of $100 each from A. Washburn & Sons, Bloomington, Ill., and Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y.

KANSAS CITY CONVENTION.

Convention Hall.

Arrangements for the 1922 convention of the S. A. F., to be held at Kansas City August 15 to 17, are rapidly approaching completion, and a most successful gathering is looked for. The convention is to be housed in one of the finest buildings in the country adapted for such purposes, Convention hall, located at the corner of Thirteenth street and Central avenue. The building is replete with conveniences, and will provide for meetings and trade exhibition.

Railroad Arrangements.

As previously announced, all members will be able to travel to Kansas City with the advantage of a rate of one fare and a half for the round trip on the certificate plan. To add still further to conveniences in this direction, the secretary has arranged with the trunk line associations for the privilege of sending certificates in advance to every member of the society, so that personal applications for them need not be made. These certificates are all numbered and recorded, so as to render them traceable in the event that they are used by others than members of the society, the reduced fares applying only to bona fide members of the society.

The Trade Exhibition.

Already about fifty-five exhibitors have made reservations of space in the trade exhibition, and many prospective exhibitors are in correspondence with the secretary's office in regard to space. It looks as though every foot of available space will be taken up.

The Kansas City brethren are well organized and have about eighteen committees working on local details of arrangements, and the resulting plans for the comfort and convenience of visitors will shortly be announced. Without doubt, the attendance will be of record character.

Membership Dues.

Recently, from the secretary's office, bills were mailed to all members in arrears for dues, and these members are urged to make prompt remittances. The society is in need of these funds, as they are applied wholly to the expenses of the society, which, necessarily, are quite large. Immediately on receipt of checks for dues, membership cards are issued to those sending them; these must be presented by all in attendance at the convention. John Young, Sec'y.

The Hardy Garden

PERENNIALS FOR CUTTING.

Further Suggestions.

Continuing the notes which have appeared in the recent issues of The Review in this department, further suggestions are given here in regard to herbaceous perennials which are useful to florists for cut flowers. Two weeks ago were given instructions as to methods of planting and care, which are supplemented by the remarks under each flower. The florist who has land adjoining his greenhouses will find such perennials a highly profitable addition to his supply of stock in the summer time. In addition, he will have a colorful garden, something which might be called the florists' outdoor display window, of value in attracting customers both for cut flowers and for plants to beautify the home grounds.

Stokesias.

One of the finest and most persistent-flowering of hardy perennials is Stokesia cyanea, with large sky-blue flowers, as large as an aster, which are produced during the entire summer. This is fine for cutting and of great value in floral designs. There are pure white and pink varieties of this valuable, native hardy perennial. All come true from seed and are of comparatively easy culture. No florist will go far amiss in growing a good batch of them.

Galegas.

One of the most effective perennial plants at present is Galega officinalis alba. The habit, foliage and flowers resemble those of the popular Swainsona galegifolia alba. These galegas are useful for cutting and their spikes of small, pure white, pea-shaped flowers are almost as effective as lily of the valley in design work. Galega bicolor Hartlandii, a new species, carries blue and white flowers and G. purpurea is blue. All are desirable border plants, apart from their value for cutting. They come with the greatest ease from seeds and bloom the first season, when sown early.

Anchusas.

Usually classed as perennials, the anchusas are in reality biennials and self-seeders. (Continued on page 61.)

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

FOREWORD.

Each year a considerable number of men and women enter the field of commercial floriculture. While some of them are experienced growers, the majority of such newcomers are not, and it is to assist the latter that The Review will give in this department each week timely reminders and seasonable instructions. An effort will be made to treat as many as possible of the plants likely to be grown by the average florist.

It is, of course, impossible to give cultural directions suitable to all sections of this great country. The dates given should suit growers in the approximate latitude of Chicago and New York, and allowance must be made by growers in colder and warmer sections.

Not only will greenhouse plants be treated, but at the proper season space will be devoted to the increasingly important hardy herbaceous perennials, hardy roses, hardy climbers, trees and shrubs, both deciduous and evergreen, and everything which would seem to come within the province of the small grower. These suggestions may not interest the experienced grower, but it is hoped that they may benefit some of those who are not so well versed floriculturally.

ANTIRRHINUMS.

There are periods each spring when antirrhinums, or snapdragons, arrive in somewhat unwieldy numbers in the large wholesale cut flower markets, but the small grower handling a moderate number of plants need not worry over these conditions. Snapdragons are splendid for cutting, have excellent keeping qualities, are most useful in design work and flower for a longer period than any other plants, with the possible exception of roses and carnations. They are among our most useful Memorial day flowers, and one wonders, harking back twenty-five or more years in memory, how we managed so long without them. They have their troubles, like all other plants. Rust and leaf blight are often troublesome, but these diseases are brought on by improper treatment, especially by careless watering. Personally, I have had no rust or leaf diseases among my stock for years and, if more growers would grow plants from seed rather than from cuttings, the amount of stock ruined by plant diseases would be greatly reduced. Seedlings are much more vigorous than rooted cuttings and can resist diseases more readily.

Now is a good time to make a sowing of seeds for an early planting. A cold-frame is suitable for a seed bed. Cover the seed quite lightly and shade it until the seedlings germinate. Either pot them off singly when they are of sufficient size, or transplant them in the same frame. In August, when they will be ready to plant indoors, dig them up carefully with a trowel, so as to retain a ball of earth, spray them for a few days, and you will hardly lose a plant, while if you pot them off, there is danger of the plants becoming potbound and hard, as well as being underwatered.

Pink shades are most in demand, bright pink especially so. You can buy the seeds in named varieties or under separate colors. Only a small proportion of rogues will come in good seed, and it always pays to buy the best. There is a smaller call for white, yellow, bronze and the darker shades; so you will not go far amiss in planting ninety per cent of pink. The intermediate type is far better than the dwarf, or tall strains.

From this sowing you can begin to cut nice snapdragons indoors in early October, and the same plants, properly treated, will flower profitably until the following June.

HYDRANGEAS.

Hydrangeas flower over a long season. This year we had some French varieties well flowered in late February, and it will be October before the late otaksas have passed. With the practical passing of azaleas, the demand for hydrangeas increases yearly. Left-over plants should always be headed back well and then planted outdoors in good soil, especially where the hose can reach them in times of drought. Of course, they can also be pot-grown, the pots being plunged to their brims in frames and kept well watered and sprayed. These pot plants can be forced early, but planting out is the method entailing the least labor and giving the finest plants ere fall. If you have plants containing blind shoots and need to increase your stock, take cuttings now; they will root in two or three weeks, after which they should be potted off. When they have made a few extra leaves, pinch out the top. Set these young plants out where you can water them abundantly, and you will have nice stock to lift about the end of September.

LATE GLADIOLI.

If you want some late gladioli, remember there is yet time to plant them. Even if you have kept the corms cool, they will probably be sprouted somewhat. Never mind; that will not hurt them. Dig furrows about six inches deep and drop the corms, four or five inches apart, into the furrows. If the soil is dry at planting time, give the furrows a soaking of water and the corms will start to grow much more quickly. Be sure to cover the corms fairly deep; then the roots will go down in search of moisture, and they will not suffer from summer droughts. Furthermore, when the corms are planted at the suggested depth, there is not much likelihood of the plants' blowing over. Gladioli are most useful flowers for small florists and a stock of the desirable varieties can be readily increased by saving all of the small-bulblets at lifting time and sowing them in drills as you would peas. The following spring many of these bulblets will flower, and all will produce corms or bulbs of sufficient size to flower a year later.

PRIMULA MALACOIDES.

The time to sow such primulas as sinensis, obconica and kewensis is in early spring, but P. malacoides, which makes the most charming pot plant of the whole family, is so rapid a grower that seed should not be sown before the first week in July. There are now several beautiful pink named forms of this graceful primrose, and a double form is also offered. While P. malacoides is offered for Christmas sales each year, it is not seen at its best so early, but from the middle of January until the end of March it is one of our finest pot plants. It needs cool treatment always and in winter a minimum of 45 degrees should not be exceeded. Cover the seeds lightly and use a compost consisting mainly of leaf-mold and sand, keeping the frames well shaded until the seeds germinate, when they should be given stronger, but not too bright a light.

STEVIAS.

It is a pretty safe bet that few florists are ever overstocked with that most useful winter-flowering plant, Stevia serrata. In bouquet work or in designs it is equally good and, as it may be had in flower from the middle of November until March, if the plants are grown cold, its flowering season is quite a long one. It is not too late, even now, to root cuttings or buy young stock.

The general practice is to plant young stock out in the field. This insures large, bushy plants, but the wind breaks these, and at lifting time, unless extreme care is exercised, many are lost. Pot culture through the summer is far the best. Plunge the pots, if necessary, and be sure to keep them well watered. Also pinch the plants back regularly until the end of August, at which time they can be allowed to run up. The dwarf stevia makes a neat pot plant, but the tall variety is far the best for cutting. One prominent stevia grower handles 10,000 plants annually in 9-inch and 10-inch pots and stakes the entire crop. His flowers are so much ahead of those from plants dug out of the field that they are simply not in the same class. Pots can be moved about at will. Bench plants are all right, if you can spare bench room for them and give them a low temperature. Stevia needs a low temperature in winter.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT of an order on receipt is now the rule with the best firms in the trade. If you do not make it a practice, use the first opportunity to devise a system for doing so.

NEGLECT is a poor reason for the non-payment of bills when they are due, though it is the one most frequently given. Neglect does not grow good roses, nor does it produce good credit.

It appears that the quantity of giant-teum bulbs in cold storage is decidedly limited and that a few hundred thousand blooms will have to satisfy the public until the 1922 crop of bulbs arrives and can be flowered.

THE Fourth of July holiday makes it necessary to advance the printer's schedule on next week's issue of The Review. Copy should, therefore, be mailed a day earlier than usual to reach this office in proper time.

WHY quit? It isn't necessary to stop doing business in the summer. Winter volume may not be possible, but retain stores that maintain their sales effort will find it easy to keep the business ball rolling even in July and August.

HERE and there one finds a surplus of bedding stock, mostly geraniums, but it was due to an error in calculating local demand, as all stock ready in time was taken if offered to readers of The Review, many of whom are still buying.

IN the readjustment of business the trade is getting down to the point where credits and collections take on their old-time importance. Continued success demands that every florist arrange to look after collections with the same regularity and thoroughness that he takes care of the stock in his greenhouses or store—and that outgo be firmly held within cash income.

THE general report from all parts of the United States, including eastern manufacturing centers as well as middle-western agricultural districts, is that florists have had a good spring season; rather better than most of them expected. No special degree of activity in the next two months is anticipated, but there is a widespread belief that the season of 1922-23 is to be a profitable one for all whose methods are such as to merit success.

HOLLANDERS engaged in the production of rhododendrons and azaleas in this country speak encouragingly of the prospects of success, though a supply large enough to be of commercial importance is still far distant.

THE florist who declines further credit dealings with those who do not pay promptly may not rapidly increase his business, but he will have something substantial back of him and will be as free from worry as any business man can be.

THIS trade was among the last to feel the effects of the restricted buying consequent on post-war deflation. Scarcely has this trade been affected ere other lines show a change for the better. If we are alert, our curtailment of business should be brief.

If you do spring planting why not do fall planting, too? The autumn planting season usually is longer than the one in spring. If you don't grow the hardy stock needed for fall, it is easy to ship and handle. Now is the time to begin booking orders for shrubs to be planted when the leaves have fallen.

It is specially important to pay promptly petty out-of-town accounts. Most of these probably arise from telegraph orders sent to small places where no monthly account has been established. The man who fills such an order is entitled to his money "right off the bat." He has filled the order, most likely, on faith, with no actual knowledge of the sender's financial standing or business habits. Frequently such orders are for small amounts and filling them has caused a long delivery trip. Bills should be rendered promptly and should be paid on receipt, if for no other reason than to encourage painstaking attention to the next order that comes in a similar way.

SOME DIFFERENCE.

Probably many concerns in the trade recently have received circular letters from addressing concerns, offering them so-called new lists of florists, etc. This is the result of the recent publication of a new edition of the trade directory. The concerns which make a business of selling lists of names buy the trade directory and copy out of it lists of names divided according to their own notions. Most of them take the directory lists and divide them into half a dozen different groupings, because the more groupings the more likely they are to meet the notion of the man who, without a knowledge of the trade, is buying names.

One such circular which has reached The Review offers the names of 12,000 florists supplied in typewriting for $50. If any florist is interested, The Review will supply the trade directory, post-paid, on receipt of $5.

By way of comparison, after having paid from $5 to $50 for the names, it will take 12,000 1-cent stamps, 12,000 envelopes and 12,000 pieces of printed matter, not to mention time, to make the names of value. To send even the cheapest kind of a circular to 12,000 names will cost not less than $250. Yearly advertisers in The Review pay $37.50 per page each insertion. The $250 that it would cost to put once the cheapest kind of circular in the hands of 12,000 florists would put a page advertisement in the hands of 13,000 readers of The Review once a month for seven months.

Every purchasable list of names contains some dead wood; there is an escapable waste of printed matter and postage. Every subscriber of the 13,000 on The Review's list has paid $2 in advance for 1922; no waste there.

THE SAME TO YOU, LADY!

Eleanor Franklin Egan has this to say, among many other things, in last week's Saturday Evening Post:

I enjoy looking at beautiful things and I am always thankful that there are rich people who produce them for my benefit. The rich people have all the responsibility for them, while I have at least a part of the enjoyment. One of my pet loves is a love for florists. I cannot afford bowers of orchids and roses and feathery ferns and a show for myself of all the beauties of the world of flowers as these beauties unfold through the seasons, but the florists, in their sordid pursuit of gain, make me a present of this show in their beautiful windows and, passing by in simple and unhampered happiness, I thank them.

Would it be too much for us to say here that we cannot afford to gad about, as Mrs. Egan does, to the ends of the earth, but that the fact gives us no sorrow? Instead, we get much simple pleasure in beholding through Mrs. Egan's eyes, experience and facile pen, the sights in lands we may not visit. Lady, we thank you!

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Kansas City, Mo.—Recently an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the Pinehurst Floral Co. Joseph M. Jones, of Kansas City, receiver in bankruptcy, states that in all probability the property will have to be sold later on. Last December it was reported that creditors had received letters explaining the financial condition of the company. At that time, upon the resignation of P. A. Manson as general manager of the company and the succession of R. L. Isherwood to his place, the latter found it necessary to place a labor lien against the company for about $7,000. Since there were at that time $53,000 in bonds outstanding, secured by first-mortgage deed of trust, $6,000 of which were due November 1, 1921, it was problematical, the secretary of the company at that time stated, whether creditors would receive anything unless a plan of refinancing the company were worked out to enable it to continue.

"THE TESTIMONY OF USERS."

Under the heading, "The Testimony of Users Is Gilt-Edged," the Hinde & Dauch Paper Co., manufacturers of florists' shipping boxes, has this to say: "As a basis for determining your own future satisfaction with the use of a product, it is the very next thing to having actually lived through the experience yourself. The words of a user, unbiased, and based on the knowledge of having seen and lived the facts and figures you want to know, are 100 per cent proof."

Which leads to this quotation:

Vincas all sold on first insertion of my ad in The Review and am now returning checks.—Geo. A. Halladay, Bellows Falls, Vt., June 17, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

J. J. U., Mich.—The white perennial is Valeriana officinalis, commonly called the garden heliotrope. The geraniums and other plants were so badly faded as to be unrecognizable.

OBITUARY

John M. Butz.

John M. Butz, of New Castle, Pa., one of the most successful and well known orchid growers in the country, died June 20, in his sixty-seventh year. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Butz, being born at New Castle, Pa., March 1, 1855.

Mr. Butz since early in his life was associated with the firm of Paul Butz & Son, and after the organization of the firm of Butz Bros., in 1896, he was the orchid specialist of the concern. Mr. Butz had been most successful in the last twenty years in growing the fine orchids for which Butz Bros. have become noted in western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio.

Mr. Butz was married March 22, 1887, to Annie Loy Morris, who survives him, as do also three brothers and six sisters.

Hugh Dickson.

Following a serious operation, Hugh Dickson, of Hugh Dickson, Inc., Belfast, Ireland, passed away May 30, at Leeds, England.

Hugh Dickson was well known in the horticultural world as one of the greatest of European rose growers and raisers. His firm was time and again granted awards by the National Rose Society of Great Britain.

A few of the varieties that emanated from the firm were Blushing Bride, Ethel Dickson, Nellie Parker, Prince Charming, Golden Spray, H. D. M. Barton, H. K. Pinkerton, Lilian Moore, Lady Craig, W. E. Wallace, Leslie Pidgeon, Earl Haig, E. Godfrey Brown and Hugh Dickson, a famous crimson scarlet.

Mrs. H. B. Pantler.

The sympathy of the trade goes out to Dr. H. B. Pantler, president of the St. Louis Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo., and his family in the loss of the wife and mother, who passed away June 22, at 8:30 p. m., in her home at Waterloo, Ill., where the family had resided for many years. Death came after a few weeks' illness.

The funeral took place from the home at Waterloo June 24. All the members of the St. Louis Seed Co. were in attendance. Besides her husband, she leaves seven sons and one daughter to mourn her loss. Two sons, Sylvester I. Pantler and Ray W. Pantler, are members of the St. Louis Seed Co.

Simeon Peter Cossairt.

Simeon Peter Cossairt, a well known resident of Shelbyville, Ind., died at his home just north of that city, on the Boggstown road, June 8, at the age of 75 years. Death was due to complications and senility. Mr. Cossairt was born in Missouri, August 14, 1846. He was united in marriage to Elizabeth Deppe, October 9, 1870, and had been in the florists' trade in Shelbyville for twenty-five years. The deceased is survived by four children and four grandchildren. Mr. Cossairt's children are Mrs. Mary Newton, Miss Margaret Cossairt, Fred and Will Cossairt.

John F. Marsden.

John F. Marsden, well known florist of Far Rockaway, N. Y., passed away June 21, at his Long Island home.

Mr. Marsden was for many years a member of the New York Florists' Club. He was generally credited as the introducer of the "green" carnation, obtaining press notices in almost every newspaper in the land about fifteen years ago.

Funeral services for the deceased were held Saturday, June 24. At this time the New York Florists' Club sent a large wreath of flowers. Besides, there were many other floral offerings.

KENTUCKIANS AND HOOSIERS.

Hold Joint Meeting.

A joint meeting of Kentucky and Indiana florists was held June 21 and 22, at New Albany, Ind. A great number were present the first day and, through the kindness of A. Rasmussen, the business meeting was held at his beautiful new home, at Silver Hills.

The meeting was called to order at 3:15 p. m. by President Hitz, of Madison. Everyone then told who he or she was and, in this way, all were introduced. The minutes were read and approved. Five new members were then elected. These were: L. G. Pleiss, New Albany; John Schluesman, Indianapolis; Charles Lockwood, Indianapolis; C. G. Anderson, Terre Haute, and William Coon, Kokomo.

The big floral parade was then discussed and it was decided that it will be held at Indianapolis October 9. The July and August meetings were suspended and nothing was said of the picnic, which was to be held in August.

Vice-president Pleiss, of the Kentucky State Florists' Association, then extended an invitation to the Indiana society to a banquet at Fountain Ferry park that night.

Refreshments were then served, thanks to Mr. Rasmussen, which were enjoyed by all.

Eighty were present at the banquet that night and were served with an old-style chicken dinner for which Kentucky is famous. M. A. Reimers was toastmaster; after a few words of welcome, he introduced President Hitz. Mr. Hitz responded, and gave a short talk. A. Rasmussen was then introduced. He also said a few words and, inasmuch as he was active host of the two days' meeting, he arranged for a trip the following day to the Wyandotte cave.

The meeting was then adjourned and the members were at liberty to amuse themselves around the park as they saw fit. At 10 p. m. they departed for New Albany, via automobile.

At 9 o'clock the following morning everyone was at the Tavern hotel ready for the trip to the cave. There were seventy-five and, with Mr. and Mrs. Rasmussen taking the lead, the cars started up the long, winding hill on their way. The scenery was beautiful and the road was in fine shape most of the way.

With seventy-five people, the largest number that ever visited the cave at one time, four guides led the way into the hole.

The cave was wonderful. Although at times it was a little hard to walk, everyone enjoyed it.

Due to the untiring efforts of our good friend, Anders Rasmussen, the meeting was a great success and he certainly deserves a vote of thanks.

TORONTO, ONT.

With the hot weather, the florists' business has eased up considerably, though there is a steady run of small work. The peony season is about over, but other flowers are taking their place and the supply is ample to fill the demand.

Arrangements are being made for the convention of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association. A big attendance is expected from south of the border and the ever-popular William Hall is preparing to entertain the largest convention in the history of the association. Keep the dates in mind—August 8 to 11. For those who wish to motor there are good roads into Montreal, while the boat trip from Toronto to Montreal is a delightful one, including "running" the Lachine rapids. Those from the west will find this trip well worth while taking.

Holidays are the order of the day and at all the stores schedules have been or are being made out.

There have been several flower shows recently. One of the largest and most important was the rose show held at Toronto by the Rose Society of Ontario. There were classes for the professional, the semi-amateur and the amateur. In all these classes there was keen competition. In the professional classes R. S. McLaughlin, of Oshawa, took the prize for roses on table, and R. J. Christie took the prize for twelve blooms of not more than two varieties. J. J. H.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The penultimate week in June proved to be all that anyone had hoped, except, perhaps, that prices rose more slowly than some of the growers would have liked. Starting from a practically clean position June 17, the market again was practically clean at closing time June 24 and in the interim a fine week's business had been done. The quantity of stock handled was, of course, much less than in the preceding week, but average quality was better and practically nothing of usable quality failed to find a purchaser at a fair price. Indeed, the market improved each day as the week progressed, the best business and the best prices being had on Saturday.

The present week opened with still further reduction in supply, but with reduced demand, as the schools have closed and the special call for graduation flowers has subsided. The prospect, however, is for a good, steady demand and most of those whose duty it is to sense the trend of the market say they have the hunch that the summer business will be a bit better than ever before.

Roses are in much lighter supply; growers are drying off, having finished replanting in most cases. Indeed, the first cuts from early planted Premier already are coming in.

Carnations are in small supply; the heat in May and early June so debilitated the plants that most of the stock was not worth shipping and the growers are busy cleaning out the houses preparatory to replanting. The carnations still coming in are of average summer size.

Peonies are running low; heavy sales last week so reduced the quantity in storage that the market is in firm control. Probably the freezer will be clean by June 30, except for the one lot which is to be strung out through July.

Gladioli are arriving from nearby points and the local crop is not far away; it has been damaged to some extent by the heat and drought in June. Most of the indoor gladioli have been marketed. Garden flowers of all kinds are abundant and good. Shasta daisies, coreopsis, gaillardias, larkspur, cornflower, candytuft, etc., sell steadily. There continues to be a good call for valley, but orchids are in light request, the supply being too uncertain. Giganteum lilies again are in increasing supply.

The greens market is quiet.

A. B. C. Picnics Again.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Miller and Baby Suzanne acted as hosts to the employees of the A. B. C. at the farm at Hazel Crest, about thirty miles southwest of Chicago. After a tour of the fields, where, among general florists' stock, several hundred thousand gladioli are planted, an old-fashioned chicken dinner was served, after which dancing and games were indulged in. A small accident marred the pleasures of the day. Vincent Neil, bulb expert of the firm, failed to negotiate a barbed wire fence when chased by a fiery bull. However, after a slight operation performed by Dr. Momblatt, well-known traveling representative of the A. B. C., proceedings were continued to the "end of a perfect day."

Mr. Miller now spends his spare time at the farm and enjoys putting into practice some of the technical knowledge obtained some years ago while attending the National Farm School, in Pennsylvania, and later while employed at the famous establishment of Burpee, Philadelphia.

Various Notes.

The market has been much interested in the announcement by H. C. Wendland that he has sold out his stock interests in the Premier Rose Gardens and in the E. C. Amling Co. The purchaser of the shares was Paul E. Weiss, who represented associates in the companies, of both of which he is secretary.

J. J. Budlong likes to do things differently, as has been observed before, but frequently follows eastern methods not generally used here. As western growers almost universally use raised benches for roses, Mr. Budlong tried solid beds at Budlong Gardens. At present he is having much success, the roses cut from them being, for quality, second to none in the market and, for quantity, in heavy crop at a time when good roses are in request.

George Weiland has just placed an order with the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. for a pipe-frame house 36x400, to be added to his range at Niles Center. The new house will have seven benches 4x200 and five ground beds 4x200.

Fritz Bahr has done some fine bedding work at Ravinia park again this year, where the season of summer opera opened June 24. The big circular bed of Pink Beauty petunias is especially admired and no doubt will do more than a little to increase the already large use of petunias for beds and boxes on the north shore.

E. C. Amling has planned to return to California June 29. He is making rapid progress in developing his new horticultural establishment in the Sawtelle section of Los Angeles. He has built a neat store on one of his corners on Santa Monica boulevard and while here made application for membership in the F. T. D.

nearly half a day at the Bassett & Washburn palm growing establishment at Sierre Madre. Mr. Washburn obtained the idea that the board will do all it can to assist in the development of domestic production of plants heretofore imported, and that modifications in the quarantine will not be made until the board is convinced some excluded article can not be produced in this country; then, and then only, admission will be permitted under strict regulations.

From all indications, Chicago will be strongly represented in the trade display at the S. A. F. convention at Kansas City in August. Pretty nearly everybody here figures that there will be a large attendance and that most of those present will be buyers in the Chicago market, so that order taking should be brisk. Some elaborate exhibits are being prepared.

Wendland & Keimel Co., at Elmhurst, have finished the season's replanting with young stock and are drying off some of the plants to be carried over, but will run a good part of the place straight through the summer.

Being the owner of some German marks which do not rise in value as it was hoped they would, Paul E. Weiss has exchanged part of them for an importation of pruning shears, giving him for a while the side line he needs for amusement.

Mr. William Jacobs, perhaps better known as Bill, leaves June 29 for Kansas City, Oklahoma City and Dallas, at which place he will meet E. F. Fletcher, Texas representative of the A. L. Randall Co., and stage a big exhibit at the meeting of the Texas State Florists' Association next week.

The E. Wienhoeber Co., on Elm street, has two weddings at Lake Forest this week, for the Farwells, the brides being cousins. One decoration was put up Tuesday, the other to be done Saturday.

August Jurgens, who is growing bulbs at Ridgeland, Miss., says that when he was located at Newport, R. I., they had, in 1885, jonquils every day in June and lilac all summer. Later, in Chicago in 1893, the world's fair year, he had jonquils every day in June, but found no sale for them.

P. J. Foley and Mrs. Foley celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of their wedding June 29.

William Spandikow, at his own place at Maywood, is repeating former successes with Milady rose.

F. Krell, 3021 Southport avenue, one of the old established stands, is putting in a new Randall refrigerator and otherwise sprucing up to hold his own with the new places that are springing up around him.

Next Tuesday Charles Erne will take a day off to celebrate the Fourth—and his birthday. He was born July 4, 1876.

John Reinberg, son of George Reinberg, now is running the establishment on Balmoral avenue, where a number of the older houses are being taken down.

Raymond Ziska, of Joseph Ziska & Sons, will be 25 years of age July 5.

Joseph Schouten, a well known member of the artist staff of the E. Wienhoeber Co., was married June 28. His bride was Miss Pearl Nick. They are at Mr. Schouten's family home in Ohio for their honeymoon.

this season for the Ayres farm at Independence, Mo., famous for its celosias, its double gypsophila, its gladioli, etc., some of which are now ready for market.

Louis Turner, Jr., of L. Turner Sons, Kenosha, Wis., was in the market June 26. Among the purchases made was a new 12-foot Randall refrigerator, so they can carry more stock next season.

Thomas Joy, of Nashville, Tenn., has been here this week.

While Robert Drumm, of the Drumm Seed & Floral Co., Fort Worth, Tex., was here last week he placed a contract with the A. L. Randall Co. for a complete outfit of up-to-date fixtures for the new store his company is opening, taking the place of the outfit recently destroyed by fire.

George B. Franks, of Thomas Franks & Son, Champaign, Ill., was in the market June 26.

W. H. Vogt, of Flint, Mich., was a business visitor. The motor factories have been running full time again for several months and business again is good at Flint.

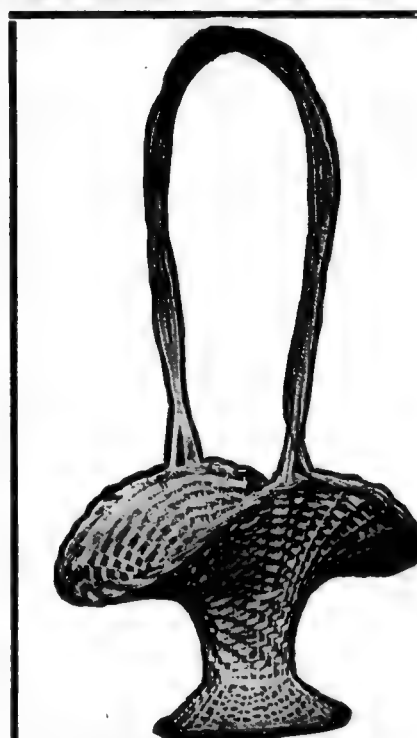

Charles Grakelow, of Philadelphia, passed through Chicago last week on his way home from the Shriners' conclave on the Pacific coast.

Charles Henry Fox was another Philadelphian who paid Chicago a visit last week. He came here, he said, expressly for the purpose of spending a day with George Wienhoeber, whose work he greatly admires.

Make your home at our store during the S. A. F. & O. H. Convention, Aug. 15, 16, 17, 1922

Mr. Rock announced that each committee will hold a meeting once a week and that the various chairmen will meet with him once a week from now until the day of the convention. L. C. Bunch, of Fredonia, Kan., invited the club members to attend the annual meeting of the Kansas State Florists' Association, to be held at Fredonia the first week in August.

The club voted unanimously to give the prize won in the recent floral parade to Glenn K. Parker, secretary of the club, in appreciation of his work on the float. Mr. Parker designed and decorated his own car and it won first prize in class B in the parade. The prize is a complete touring camp outfit. As Mr. Parker is an outdoor enthusiast, he was delighted with the gift.

J. A. Lambert, of the Ove Gnatt Co., Laporte, Ind., who is a member of the club, attended the meeting. He predicted an attendance of about 2,000 at the S. A. F. convention.

A letter from Frank Robinson, convention chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, was read, in which Mr. Robinson thanked the club for flowers sent to him while in a hospital at St. Louis, suffering from the effects of a motor car collision.

A letter of thanks from Mercy hospital was read. This acknowledged the work done by the club at the recent birthday celebration of Mercy hospital, an institution for crippled children. T. J. Noll, R. L. Morse and Glenn K. Parker decorated a large panel of flowers for the occasion. The meeting ended with a dance and the serving of ice cream and cake.

The Market.

The market has lightened wonderfully; more than seemed possible so late in the season. The curtailing of the winter crops inside from previous heat and the summer crops outside from excessive rain has so cut down the supply that it is not equal to the demand. There are not enough flowers to go around. The shops that cater to the classes want more fancy stock, of which there is little. The shops that cater to the masses want more flowers; almost anything pretty will do. There is a good deal more of this kind of stock, but there is not enough, especially as the week-end approaches. Altogether the market is in a healthy condition, with prices quite firm, much firmer than they were one month ago; yet it must be clearly understood that there is nothing like the amount of business now that there was then; simply the supply is smaller.

The fancy flowers, Beauties, orchids and valley, have been eagerly sought with poor results. The first two are almost out of the market for the time being, while valley has been entirely unequal to the demand. This was especially noticeable at the end of the week. Gladioli have been much more satisfactory. The new outdoor crop has come. Some fine flowers have been offered in new varieties and brought excellent prices. The difference between well-grown stock in good varieties and poorly grown stock or poor varieties, or both, is marked; the former often bring twice as much as the latter, provided they reach the market in good condition. Peonies are entirely over, which gives Easter lilies a better market. Sweet peas are in active demand at pretty fair prices. The stock is mainly outdoor now and the receipts are greatly reduced and impaired by rain. Thanks to weddings, commencements and entertaining, the market is above the summer average.

we give your orders the same attention as any other time of the year. Our growers are bringing in a fine lot of outdoor flowers, and stock of that kind is much more plentiful.

GLADIOLI

will be one of the best items from now on. We can now furnish you a better selection of varieties.

EASTER LILIES

Regardless of weather conditions, Lilies always show good quality. Our supply is so well regulated that we will have plenty of them every day during the summer.

In Roses, Russell and Columbia show the best quality.

In White, we have a good cut of Double White Killarney.

In Valley and Cattleyas, the supply is ample to take care of the demand.

Regardless of the season of the year, you will find this is a good place for you to send your business.

usual interest in florists' circles is that of Joseph Goetter, the well known grower of Lansdowne, Pa. Mr. Goetter has purchased twenty-seven acres of ground at Willow Grove, where, Monday, June 12, he commenced the erection of three greenhouses, 35x300 feet each. The contract is being carried out by the Metropolitan Material Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Goetter, who will move from Lansdowne to his new property at Willow Grove about July 15, will grow carnations this season and roses one year hence.

It is understood that Emil F. Leiker, whose place Mr. Goetter has leased for the last three years, will come back into the florists' business next month, and resume the growing of plants on his own place.

The Market.

A marked change came over the cut flower trade last week, due to the great number of college commencements, class days, graduation exercises and weddings, and the dark, damp and dismal weather which prevailed until the end of the week. Cut flowers arrived in much reduced numbers and stalls were cleaned up daily about 10 a. m., after which time few flowers were obtainable. Conditions Monday, June 19, were excellent, but when the various school and college activities cease, a reaction is bound to take place.

Roses have not been overabundant, owing to the dark weather, and have sold at from $6 per hundred upwards, whites selling fully as well as colored varieties. Few roses with 18-inch stems are now seen. A fair supply of American Beauty roses comes from outside New England; they have sold well. Carnations are now so poor in size and quality that it needs a courageous man to purchase them. Many are fit only for the rubbish heap. Prices have averaged better, good flowers realizing $3 per hundred and a few fancies more; in fact, odd lots of Laddie have made $6 per hundred.

Sweet peas are far less in evidence. Indoor crops are about over and, owing to the series of thunder storms and torrential cloudbursts, outdoor ones are of inferior quality. The supply of gladioli is not excessive and both the gandavensis and primulinus varieties have sold unusually well. Small lots are now arriving from out doors. Recent heavy rains have much improved the appearance of open-air gladioli. Considerable delphinium has been coming in, but the bulk goes direct from the growers to the retailers' hands.

Among miscellaneous flowers are some nice snapdragons from late planting, which have been selling well of late. There are few callas, and longiflorum lilies are outclassed temporarily by L. regale, which has met with a good sale of late. Gypsophila is not at all plentiful now and the price is higher. There are fewer yellow and white marguerites, and what bachelor's buttons arrive sell well. A considerable supply of hardy roses, mainly ramblers, has come in of late and there has also been a good call for these for decorations. Lily of the valley has enjoyed a fair measure of popularity. There are still white bouvardia and enough cattleyas and other orchids to go around. Asparagus has been in extra good demand, as well as hardy ferns.

Only a limited number of flowering plants can now be had. Bedding plant sales are nearly over and little stock is left. Boston ferns, which many believed were being overgrown last winter, are now scarce. With the increasing number of departures for the mountain, lake and ocean resorts, considerable activity is now to be seen in the shipping trade from the wholesale houses.

Club Ladies' Night.

The club has had some notable entertainments on ladies' nights in former years, but June 20 the concert given easily eclipsed all previous efforts and it will live long in the memories of the nearly 400 privileged to enjoy it. Business of the regular club meeting was hurried through in a few minutes. The records were not read and three new members were voted in. The death of Patrick Welch, a charter member, was announced. Mr. Welch had been a club member since 1857 and had served one year as president. The committee on resolutions appointed by President Judd consisted of Henry Penn, Thomas Roland and William R. Nicholson. Mr. Rogers drew the attention of members to the annual picnic, to take place at Cunningham park, East Milton, July 29, and the executive committee was empowered to make all necessary preparations for the occasion.

The lecture hall was handsomely decorated with numerous large palms furnished by H. A. Ryan & Co. and the W. W. Edgar Co. and with seasonable flowers. There were many peonies, roses, larkspurs, lilies and other seasonable flowers furnished by club members. With much improved acoustic properties, listening to the selections was a pleasure. Practically all selections were enthusiastically encoered. There was a chorus of twenty-five male voices in the Swedish Glee Club and the Philharmonic Trio did splendid work. Everyone enthused over Clarence Knudson's violin selection. Although only eighteen years of age, he has been a member of the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra for two years and leaves soon for three years of study in Germany. Mr. Redden has a voice of great compass and carrying power, and his selections literally brought down the house. Miss Marjorie Messer, as "Penn's Fairy Rosebud," made the hit of the evening. She rose from a large basket of roses like a fairy flower, sang sweetly and danced most gracefully.

Especial credit is due to J. C. Harris, of Penn's, who procured the whole of the high-grade talent absolutely without cost to the club, and he worthily merited the rising vote of thanks accorded him, and the enthusiastic praise of many of the audience. Members

New Wholesale Commission House.

Edward J. Welch, for some years with Welch Bros. Co., and a son of the late Patrick Welch, will open a wholesale commission house at 288 Devonshire street, Boston, July 1. Mr. Welch traveled for some years in the interests of Welch Bros. Co. in New England, New York and Canada. In 1912 he went to Lakeview Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y., to learn commercial rose growing under the late Lawrence Cotter. In 1915 he went to San Francisco to learn the nursery business, working with the MacRorie-McLaren Co., at San Mateo. He is a member of a number of clubs, horticultural and floricultural, in the United States and Canada, and, being well and favorably known to so many in the trade, should succeed in his new venture, just as did his esteemed father.

New England Florists' Alliance.

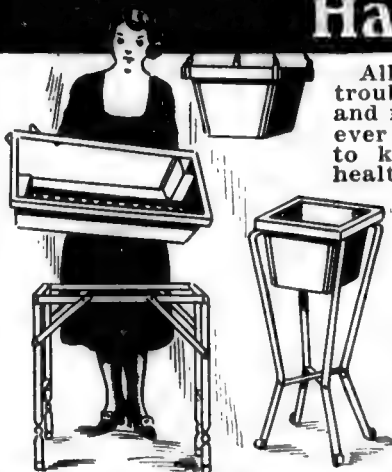

Two weeks ago, in The Review, it was announced that Eugene M. Naukam, having completed his few months' contract spent in organizing and strengthening the New England Florists' Alliance, had returned to Buffalo, and that Major George C. Moyse, representative in the state legislature from Waltham, had been elected to the vacancy. Mr. Naukam did splendid work here, and general regret is expressed at his leaving. His successor is full of energy and is well known locally on account of his former connection with the New England Flower Growers' Association. The Alliance is fortunate to have been able to secure the services of two such bright and brainy men to direct its energies. Results to date have been most pleasing, and constant progress is being made, as shown by the number of new members and the constantly increasing receipts. That the organization was badly needed here, everyone connected in any way with the trade must admit, and that it is bound to become a formidable factor in the flower trade, is agreed.

Plans for an energetic fall campaign are being considered, and the enthusiasm being displayed is unlike any heretofore shown in conservative New England. It behooves growers and retailers who have not yet become affiliated with the alliance to do so at once. They need the help of the alliance and the alliance needs them. The success of the alliance is assured, but the management wants to make New England preëminent and desires as complete a membership as possible.

Various Notes.

Since June 17 Boston and vicinity have had weather sufficient to discourage all caused serious washouts, raised rivers to spring flood levels and caused great damage to growing crops. Outdoor flowers, such as sweet peas and most hardy perennials, were almost completely spoiled. Cherries just ripe practically all cracked and rotted and the strawberry crop was largely spoiled. The hail visitations are much more serious than in former years and more is heard in favor of hail insurance than ever.

It seems good to see William Sim around again, looking as well and fit as ever after his accident. He had a hard time for a number of weeks, but says he never felt better than now. At Cliftondale there are 300,000 carnation plants in the field, looking fine; houses are being rapidly emptied and replanting will commence right after July 4. A few benches of Laddie will be carried over as an experiment.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Seattle, Wash.—The Washelli Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000. The incorporators are W. H. Hawkins, William V. Viehmann and Jean J. Martial.

To Pacific coast readers will be interesting the leader article in this issue on "Sweet Pea Fields in California," by George J. Ball, and the paper, also on a forward page, of Lester L. Morse, delivered at the convention of the American Seed Trade Association, on "Growing Vegetable Seed in California."

STEIN BANQUETS SHRINERS.

Albert O. Stein has the reputation of doing what he undertakes well, and he certainly lived up to it when he entertained the Shriners visiting San Francisco from Honolulu and the Chanters of Al Malika Temple, Los Angeles. On the day of the first big parade Mr. Stein, himself a Noble of Islam Temple, San Francisco, kept open house from 9 a. m. until 10 p. m. The basement of the Stein building, 1150 Sutter street, had been transformed, with flags and flowers, into a gay banquet hall, where tables were arranged to seat 100 guests. The Honolulu delegation lunched there in true banquet style, with plenty of cocktails and wine to wash down the excellent repast. A piano and a platform enabled entertainers to carry out a clever program. Later the Aloha men were entertained by the Chanters from Los Angeles, who partook of a cold lunch with old-time trimmings. About 300 guests called during the day. When the Honolulu nobles sailed for their island home, Mr. Stein and members of his staff, with friends, were there to throw "lais" of flowers around their necks, in accordance with the Honolulu custom. "Let's go to Stein's basement" is still a popular slogan among the San Francisco florists.

In the illustration, Albert O. Stein is to be seen in a fez, standing at the end, on the left of the woman.

Other notes of the florists' entertainment of Shriners appear in the San Francisco letter, on a following page.

The Market.

Although there are frequent dull days, the market generally is much more lively than it was a week ago and, while some stock is still sold at bargain prices to clear, there is a decidedly firmer tendency. Roses are not as good as they were, but sell fairly well. The avalanch of gladioli continues to flow and is likely to do so for some time to come. Good stock cleans up well at medium to low prices. A good supply of dahlias, both pompons and the large-flowering varieties, are in and the flowers sell well. Small flowers are not so good, although the double godetias are fine for hot weather. Gypsophila paniculata and the smaller summer-flowering statice are in and meet with a good demand, owing to their long-lasting qualities. Carnations are poor and in many cases not fit to ship over any distance.

Various Notes.

A visit to the range of Walter Armacost & Co. found everything, as usual, in the finest trim and there is little use in again describing the fine stock here. One or two things stand out vividly, though. There is a fine collection of seedling hybrid orchids, which will be increasingly interesting as time goes on. A lovely type of Brassocat-tleya Veitchii (Brassavola Digbyana x Cattleya Mossiae) is in bloom. This was the original cross raised many years ago, the forerunner of all the Digbyana crosses, and those at the Armacost range are a fine color, with extra well developed lip. Another interesting point was a small batch of Russell roses, budded on American Beauty. These were planted in a bed of Russell, all the plants of which are doing well, but the contrast between these and the budded plants is striking, the plants being double the size and bearing wonderful young shoots. As Mr. Armacost remarked, it is too soon to form any conclusions as to what this will lead to, but the difference is so striking and decided that one may be pardoned for expecting big things from this union of forces. The cyclamen houses, too, with their 100,000 occupants, are remarkable. It may be noted in passing, though, that all the roses now are planted in units of not less than one house; that is, one structure, 36x300 feet, so that each of the plants in each house can be treated exactly as its peculiarities suggest or require.

O. M. Morris, senior partner of Morris & Snow Seed Co., and Mrs. Morris left last week for a vacation trip to the Mammoth district.

Albert B. Morris, now manager of the Estern Rose Co., Alhambra, Cal., has an excellent stand of roses and, with the careful cultivation and attention these plants are getting, they will be in fine shape for early shipment this fall. In all there are about 400,000 plants and already large orders have been booked. The location where they are grown is open and wind-swept, tending to vigorous and well consolidated growth and a fine root system.

S. Lundy, of the Bolt-Lundy Flower Shop, Denver, Colo., was a visitor last week, having come down from San Francisco, where he attended the Shiner convention.

H. N. Gage has the lumber on the ground for his new greenhouses, and construction will begin at once. It is reported that oil is to be drilled for close to his Downey place. With oil wells following him from Signal Hill to Montebello and now to Downey, H. N. Gage will soon be an oil magnate. He and Mrs. Gage are starting soon on a northern trip in their new Buick, proposing to go as far as Vancouver, B. C.

Ed. Reynolds, retail manager for George J. Hall & Co., returned from his northern trip. He said that he found it exceedingly hot in Bakersfield, Fresno and other cities in the valley, but had a pleasant visit with Jack D'Ortignac in Fresno, where he has a successful retail store.

W. Wolters and his sister left last week for an extended trip, which will take them north to British Columbia, where they will sail for China and Japan.

S. Murata & Co. report shipping business for June as good.

Y. Oike, head shipper for S. Murata & Co., and the two brothers Miyamayi, Albert O. Stein Banqueting Honolulu and Los Angeles Shriners.

Are You Helping Somebody Up The Stairs?

Some years ago a baby boy had infantile paralysis. It left him with one side almost paralyzed and he always dragged one foot. When he was five or six years old he heard his older brothers talking. They said that he would never be able to go to school and that as long as he lived they would always have to support him. He determined that he would go to school; that he would support himself, and that he would amount to something in spite of a lame leg.

The next day he started to school. He got there all right, but someone had to help him up the stairs. When he went to high school there were two flights of stairs to climb. He graduated with honors, but was never able to climb those stairs by himself. Someone always had to help him. He is now a leading citizen and Mayor of the town in which he lives. His brothers don't support him. He supports his mother and helps to support them besides, but he says that he never could have done any of these things if somebody hadn't helped him up the stairs.

I guess all of us in the Florists' business are the same way. From the very beginning somebody was always helping us up the stairs. We learned very few of the things that have made us successful all by ourselves. That little trick in mossing a design, a new way to make a shower bouquet or a funeral bunch, a more efficient method of potting plants or killing bugs. These and a thousand other things somebody else helped us to. I wish that I could thank the Swede that first showed me how to climb up on a glass roof to put in a broken pane. The only way that we can pay our debts to the dead is by service to the living.

We ought to have no secrets in our profession. We ought to help not only those who can help us in return, but the man or woman who is just starting into business. They need advice and help and encouragement. We often have unfair competitors that sympathy and understanding would make into enthusiastic co-workers.

Let's make our Conventions helpful this year. Let's arrange for more teaching and training among our own employees. Let's tell how we grew those extra fine roses or cyclamens. Open up to our neighbors about our cost and collection systems. Let's help somebody up the stairs.

That's what we're going to do at—of Montebello, left for Japan last week, all of them intending to remain away for a considerable length of time.

P. Huss is still seen occasionally around the store of the E. C. Amling Co., but is busy a good deal of the time with construction work outside.

The Superior Dahlia Gardens are in with a nice lot of pompons in their usual first-rate style. The later plants of the show coleus and other types look fine and are just coming into bloom.

Roy Venner, formerly well known in this city and now with the City Flower Shop, at Bakersfield, was here last week making up some funeral work that was ordered for a Los Angeles funeral. Some extra fine pieces were made and the work was carried out at the store of George J. Hall & Co., under Mr. Venner's direction.

At a meeting of the American Florists' Exchange, June 20, Walter Armacost was chosen president and Fred Howard W. Rapp, A. L. Morris, Frank Lichtenberg and A. F. Borden directors of the flower show board, which will function from now on and hold the show this fall. Roy F. Wilcox, J. Burns, H. W. Kruckeberg, H. R. Richards, O. W. Howard, C. Gutting, T. H. Wright, S. Purdie and others were also present and pledged themselves to help with the work.

J. Roller, proprietor of the Athletic Club Florist, has been a heavy buyer on the market and reports extra good business.

Roy F. Wilcox left here last week for a trip to Council Bluffs and other eastern points. He will also take in the convention at Kansas City in August. Walter Armacost has also announced his intention of going to Kansas City this year. He will also go to Dallas, Texas, to attend the Texas State Florists' convention to be held in that city

The Market.

The market last week was flooded with stock and, business being somewhat quiet, much of the surplus was sold for exceptionally low prices by peddlers. Carnations and roses were so plentiful that they were a drug on the market. Gladioli were much in evidence and there was any amount of such flowers as Canterbury bells, snapdragons, sweet peas, marigolds, candytuft, mignonette, gillyflowers, gypsophila, delphiniums and strawflowers. Lilies of the valley, gardenias and orchids were cut in quantities sufficient to take care

CINERARIAS, H. & S. PRIZE MIXED

The Finest Strain in America

Sow them now for midwinter and early spring blooming. Seed saved from an unrivaled collection of pot-grown plants, remarkable for their compact habit, enormous size of blooms and splendid range of colors.

We have spent years of patient labor in bringing this strain to its present state of perfection. Flowers 4 to 4½ inches in diameter are common and in some of our latest types, petals are ¾ inch across.

Colors include all shades from the purest white to darkest crimson, with all intermediate shades of blue, lavender, pink, purple, scarlet and gorgeous giant-flowered bi-colored varieties. Seed carefully hand picked, strong in germinating qualities, the very best you can buy.....

Aquilegia Long-Spurred Hybrids

We offer for immediate sowing new crop seeds of our magnificent strain of these popular Perennials. Blossoms of immense size, very long-spurred, ideal for spring basket work or as cut flowers.

H. & S. Prize Blue Shades—Contains a splendid range of colors in all shades of blue. Per trade packet, $1.00.

H. & S. Prize Pink Shades—A superb selection in all shades of pink from softest apple blossom to deep rose. Nothing finer grown. Trade packet, $1.00.

H. & S. Prize Mixed—Includes a grand selection of all colors mixed. Per trade packet, $1.00.

Celosias

H. & S. Prize Mixed Plumed Celosias. Here is something to grow for your pot plant trade or for store work; seed sown now will give you magnificent specimens for Thanksgiving day trade and later.

A strain of exceptional merit, compact in type, plumes of immense size, beautifully feathered, with a range of colors from pure golden yellow to deepest vermilion.

Plumes on well grown plants up to eight and ten inches in diameter. If you are looking for something novel, something which sells on sight, buy a packet and finish the plants in 6-inch or 8-inch pots. They are worth while. Per trade packet, $1.00.

Calendula Orange King

For a Fall catch crop, make a sowing of our superb strain of this well known Calendula. It is something different. Blossoms of giant size, perfectly formed, absolutely double, color rich dark orange. No better strain procurable. It is worth while. Per trade packet, $1.00.

HOWARD & SMITH

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

away again that Noble Pelicano attached him to the staff of Pelicano, Rossi & Co. James Keegan, of the staff of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is visiting florists as far south as San Diego on his annual vacation.

Report of Albert O. Stein's banquet of visiting Shriners appeared, with illustration, on a preceding page.

Robert Armiston, of Santa Barbara, was one of the visiting Nobles during Shrine week. Other visitors included Noble Smith, of Modesto, and Noble Keller, of St. Paul, Minn.

It seems that an oasis in the window had more than a merely decorative meaning during Shrine week. "Our oasis brought us many callers," said F. C. Jaeger. During Shrine week F. C. Jaeger & Son had some of the important table decorations for banquets.

The Suzanne Floral Co. had a decoration consisting of a number of hotel tables for the Shriners. This firm has some good advance orders for the opening of the Casino theater, by Oliver Morosco. Business for this firm has been helped by placing heavy vases on the sidewalk. These are too heavy to be moved by practical jokers.

The Conservatory had Shrine decorations at the Fairmont hotel that kept the store busy. Recently they have had a good many funerals.

Mr. and Mrs. Darbee, after visiting Texas, are preparing to sail from New York for Europe. General and Mrs. Gooch, of Darbee's, will get no regular vacation this year. They are now preparing for the aster season.

Podesta & Baldocchi say that business is excellent with them. They have just added two new White delivery vans to their fleet and have put their drivers in livery. They were busy with bon voyage baskets and flowers for Shriners sailing on the Alexander and other ships for Honolulu.

Joseph Bianchini, formerly manager for Joseph's, and well known in the florists' trade, is now in Florence, Italy, on a tour of Europe with his wife. Clarence J. McLaughlin, of Joseph's, is spending his vacation at Fairfax, where he has a cottage. Miss Howard, who was ill while here, writes to her former associates on Joseph's staff that she has recovered her health in Milwaukee.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is devoting much attention to bringing forward several houses of roses, while many of the rose growers are giving the plants their annual vacation.

"The market is entirely shot to pieces," said J. A. Axell. A large new stock of Mas-Art baskets now ornament Mr. Axel's shelves. They have just come in and will not remain in stock long, for these baskets are in great demand among the florists. Visiting Shriners who called on Mr. Axell were: Samuel Lundy, of the Boldt-Lundy Co., Denver, Colo.; Arthur Schwerin, of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. George Olsen, of Spokane, Wash.

Enomoto & Co. are receiving many advance orders for freesia bulbs. This is largely due to a two weeks' visit to Los Angeles by T. Honda, of Enomoto & Co. He contracted for shipments of considerable size.

I. Inoue, manager of the United Flower & Supply Co., has sailed for Japan by the latest Maru liner to leave port. He expects to return in the early fall to take part in the chrysanthemum season. This firm is showing a fine winspicuous corners of the windows. Baskets of early outdoor flowers hold the prominent places, with potted begonias, both flowering and foliage, interspersed. With two weeks of sunshine the market will be flooded with late spring stock. Garden roses are showing sparingly and reports from the field are that everything in flower vegetation is looking better than usual, but later in flowering. Some kind of pest has appeared in this vicinity this season which bites a hole the size of a pea in the foliage. All kinds of foliage are attacked—trees, shrubs and even dagger ferns. The damage is done at night, and no trace of the pest can be seen during the day. The camping season is on here, as the tent caterpillar has appeared in dangerous numbers.

As Peter Benthien was coming to town with a load of flowers and plants for delivery, a motorcycle, with side car attached, passed him, going in the same direction. In the side car Mr. Benthien noticed several familiar-looking potted plants and, either from habit or curiosity, he took the license number. On arriving in town his suspicions were verified, as several of his orders close to the rear end of the truck were short a plant or two. He sent the motorcyclists a bill for them. The police advised him to give the person a chance to settle the claim before urging the matter further.

despite the fact that there have been large numbers of tourists in the city. This condition is laid to the activity of various civic and fraternal organizations in seeing that all incoming tourists are greeted at the stations and hotels with flowers coming from home gardens.

There has been a fair run of general decorations, although none of the wedding work this season has reached the magnitude of that which helped the trade so much last year. There have been more small social functions to report lately.

There are no notable additions to the list of stock, while all the old offerings are plentiful. Roses are coming along faster than ever and are of fine quality, with improvement noted on carnations and columbines. The peonies coming to hand are such as to attract active comment from out-of-town visitors for their quality.

Various Notes.

Lambert Pederson is planting two houses in mums in preparation for the fall trade. All indications point to a good summer business.

Felix Rosaia handled the decorations for several social functions last week, using summer flowers and greens principally.

Among the local florists who made the trip to Portland for the tri-city bowling match and rose tournament were William Desmond, Samuel Dunlap, B. E. Hammond, A. B. Matthiesen, Carl Melby and James Wylie.

Probably no single grower is offering a larger variety of flowers on the market at the present time than Thomas Wylie, and some of the more uncommon varieties from his fields are attracting trade attention.

The fine quality of flowers shown in the windows of the Hollywood Gardens attracted general attention from the large number of visitors who passed through Seattle on their way to and from the Shrine conclave in San Francisco. Wedding decorations, both for the home and church, have been showing some increase.

Rena E. Wilber, a local rose fancier, has introduced a new rose, known as Radium, this being a cross of two pink varieties to give a large bloom of old rose shade. It promises to be a good garden variety.

The Orpheum Floral Co. secured a large number of orders for the graduation exercises of the downtown city hospitals.

The City Flower Shop notes that the presence of two women on the city council makes an apparent difference in the orders coming from the City-County building.

The Seattle Rose Society will hold its ninth annual show in the State Museum building on the university campus, increase of planting on the former, and is the result of the fine demand developed for last year's production. Half an acre has been planted to gypsophila.

Kennedy's Home of Flowers has enjoyed an increased run of funeral work of late. This shop has been showing some exceptionally fine white peonies.

The Art Floral Co. notes a decline in business on cut flowers since the fine growing weather has set in, but the call for bedding stock and other items continues good.

Irving Harris, of the Bon Marche Flower Shop, advises that local gardeners are still interested in seeds, particularly of the more hardy varieties.

robust habit. A. italica Opal, with pale blue flowers, is also a most beautiful sort. The anchusas can be relied upon to keep in flower a large part of the summer.

Gypsophilas.

The sprays of the well known "baby's breath," Gypsophila elegans, are light and airy and of great value in bouquet and design work. There is a double form, which is best propagated by division of the roots or by cutting the roots in pieces and starting them in sand under glass in the same way as Anemone japonica. Seed of the double form is sometimes advertised and a small proportion will come true. Occasional doubles may also be expected from sowings of the single form. The double variety has a much whiter appearance than the single and is preferred in the wholesale flower markets.

It is well to plant gypsophilas, especially the double ones, on land with a gentle slope. Some growers lost a number of their plants last winter on level ground. Thorough drainage being given, severe cold will not harm them. A sowing of G. paniculata can be made advantageously now. The dwarf creeping form, G. repens, is a splendid subject for the edge of walks. It is earlier than G. paniculata and has larger, pearl-white flowers.

Hollyhocks.

No hardy garden is complete without hollyhocks and they are the most stately and impressive plants we have at this season, not excepting the delphiniums. Sow the seeds now and you will have strong plants for flowering next summer. Too often growers put off sowing them until pansies and forget-me-nots are started. That is too late a date to secure vigorous plants. While usually treated as biennials, clumps of hollyhocks will persist for several years and, as they seed freely, little plants will be found springing up in all directions. Some growers prefer doubles, others singles. The latter are to me far the more beautiful. The Allegheny strain is good, while Chater's doubles are hard to beat. For the rust on hollyhocks, spraying with Bordeaux mixture should be started Mastodon Adonis. Light blue, baby blue and lavender shades. Our most popular blue.

STEELE'S PANSY GARDENS, PORTLAND, OREGON

as soon as frost has left the ground and continued until the flower spikes are well advanced. In some seasons this disease will not show again, while in others it may be quite prevalent. Climatic conditions have much to do with its spread, although seed saved from affected plants probably perpetuate it.

Oenotheras.

The Oenotheras are handsome, hardy plants of easy culture and their flowering season is prolonged. All are easily produced from seed and succeed especially well in a light soil. O. Youngii carries light yellow, large, handsome flowers nearly all summer. O. fruticosa major is a lower-habited and stocky variety, with showy, golden-yellow flowers. Lamarckiana has big flowers, three or four inches across, and grows a yard or more in height. Missouriensis is of a prostrate habit and also carries large golden flowers. In clumps, masses or rows, the erect-growing Oenotheras are effective.

Polemoniums.

The polemonium, better known by the common name of Jacob's ladder, is a neat and attractive hardy border plant. The foliage is finely cut and the flowers are either blue or pure white. The plants grow freely from seed and make large clumps in a year. They attain a height of two and one-half to three feet and are of erect habit. P. Richardsonii has sky-blue flowers and P. caeruleum album is pure white. The flowering season is usually in June, but spikes are also produced later in the season.

Hardy Poppies.

The oriental poppies make a most gorgeous show early in the season in the hardy garden. In addition to the ordinary brilliant orange-scarlet flowers with black spots, there are a number of other attractive colors, such as Papaver Parkmanii, dark scarlet; Mrs. Perry, salmon rose; Goliath, fiery rose, and others of varying shades, from crimson or blood-red to pink and white. Ordinarily a packet of mixed seed suffices for the small grower, but if a variety of colors is specially desired, it is well to buy a small packet of several named sorts.

The Iceland poppies, Papaver nudicaule, make beautiful border plants and are splendid in the rock garden. They are also fine for cutting and last better in water than the well known and popular annual Shirley poppies. There are some lovely colors, including orange scarlet, pure white and golden yellow. Once established in well drained ground, the Iceland poppies will perpetuate themselves abundantly from seeds. If sown in early spring, many will bloom the same year. Of dwarfier and more compact habit than P. nudicaule is P. alpinum, the Alpine poppy. This succeeds well in a rockery. The plants produce pink, in addition to yellow, red and white flowers, and attain a height of only eight or nine inches. All of the poppies can be grown abundantly and quickly from seeds.

Coreopsis.

There is no more beautiful golden-yellow perennial flowering at this season than Coreopsis grandiflora. While always classed as a hardy perennial, it is in reality a biennial and is best treated in the same way as Canterbury bells and foxgloves. It is splendid for cutting and blooms over a long season, if time can be given to cut away the seed pods, which are produced in profusion. Some people have trouble in wintering this plant, but, given good drainage and only a light winter covering, there is no trouble in wintering it. Seedlings will appear in profusion around the old plants and will grow in a gravel road if left alone. C. grandiflora has larger and better formed flowers than C. lanceolata. A graceful and strictly perennial coreopsis is C. verticillata, with pretty, finely divided foliage and small bright golden flowers, produced in profusion. This variety attains a height of eighteen to twenty inches, while grandiflora reaches double that height. C. verticillata is better propagated by root division in the fall or early spring.

FLOWERS TO MAKE FRIENDS.

The Floral Shop, of Bisbee, Ariz., is a consistent advertiser and keeps the public reminded that it can be said with flowers by regular advertisements in the local paper. For all special occasions special advertisements appear. But this company believes that flowers and plants are grown for more than just special occasions. This firm believes that flowers can make friends for its clientele and retain them. This belief is reflected in the following unusual advertisement, which has a pull for men, women and children:

To have friends, be one. Your true sentiment towards them is best expressed when you "Say It with Flowers." The Floral Shop, 74 Main street, phone 731, is always at your service with cut flowers for all occasions.

Beautiful baskets, ferns, palms, flowering plants; also goldfish, singing canary birds and their supplies for sale.

Flowers delivered anywhere in the United States by wire.

The above is just one of the many advertisements that are building business for the Floral Shop.

STARR'S NEW STORE.

Stepping along in the march of progress, Starr the Florist, of Wilson, N. C., has moved into a new and bigger store. The new place of business, shown in an illustration on this page, is situated in a recently constructed 3-story building at 305 Nash street. The store is well equipped. There are a McCray display case, show case, counter and desk, all finished in white enamel. The large refrigerator is cooled by a refrigerating system, which keeps in fine condition the large stock of plants and cut flowers, most of which comes from the company's own range on Maplewood avenue.

COMMEMORATING DEAD HEROES.

"Push the day, devise new ways to use flowers on this day, and you will be doing the nation a service, by keeping the memory of the fallen heroes fresh in the minds of the people," said an article by Tate in the Memorial day number of The Review. The Lincoln Floral Co., of Lincoln, Kan., reports the origin in that little western town of two beautiful customs to keep the memory of the fallen heroes fresh in the minds of the people. One of these customs has been in use for a number of years and originated in the mind of Ida Kilmer, of the W. R. C. Its purpose is to commemorate the dead sailors and it is held on the bridge which spans the Saline river. A 6-foot boat outlined with white lilies is completely covered with alternating rows of the rich red of the General Jacqueminot roses and the white of Mme. Soupert. Silk flags float from both the stem and stern of the brave little craft, which is borne to the water's edge by four Boy Scouts, accompanied by a guard of honor of sailors in uniform. The firing squad of uniformed sailors and the guard of sailors and marines, together with the bugler, all stand at attention during the ritual services of the W. R. C. As the commander of the G. A. R. casts the wreath of roses upon the breast of the waters in memory of all the sailor dead who sleep beneath the waves, the Boy Scouts set adrift the beautiful little boat, and as it floats down the stream, a salute is fired across its bow. As the little craft passes under the bridge, it is showered with thousands of blooms by the throng of people on the bridge.

The second custom was designed especially to keep the memory of the city's fallen heroes fresh in the mind of the people. This custom had its origin in the mind of Miss Clarissa Greene, of the W. R. C., and was held in connection with the regular Memorial services on the Sunday preceding the holiday. A box filled with damp moss and covered with a mesh screen, painted green, was placed before the entrance to the church before the services began. The names of the dead soldiers were read by a member of the congregation and, as each name was called off, a white cape jasmine was placed on the box. When the eighty-seven names were read, the eighty-seven blooms placed completely covered the 2-foot frame. The poem, "The Little Green Tents," was read, and while this was in progress, the figures, "87," were outlined in American Beauty roses on the cover of the box. The plan next year is to include in the list all of the 200 or 300 men who are buried in the county. The figures had been previously marked for the placing of the American Beauty roses and the richness of their color blended beautifully with the white cape jasmines.

BUSINESS MUST BE GOOD.

Business must be good in Boston, for the Boston Post, June 18, printed the portrait of a girl, surrounded by boxes and baskets from florists, as the "Radcliffe College senior who was showered with so many flowers on class day that she did not know what to do with them."

The story which accompanied the illustration was as follows:

Radcliffe's 125 seniors are attempting to solve the problem of disposing of the flower gifts they are receiving this week as graduation tokens from their friends and admirers.

Boxes, baskets of flowers and potted plants have been constantly arriving at the college buildings and dormitories for the fair seniors ever since Friday, and in such abundance that the girls were obliged to enlist the services of the entire freshman class to aid them in caring for the nosegays. It is said that never before has any senior class at Radcliffe been so deluged with floral offerings.

All the girls who can drive an auto are busily engaged in rushing the flowers to the neighboring hospitals. One weary little freshman estimated that she had carried some 500 boxes of flowers yesterday to the waiting automobiles and "yet they come," she sighed. The old standbys, sweet peas, orchids and roses, seem to predominate, according to Miss Ruth Huntley of the senior class, who was one of the many seniors to find herself in a quandary over the wealth of flowers received.

FLOWER SHOW AT RALEIGH, N. C.

Florists of the state of North Carolina have arranged to use space in Floral hall, Raleigh, N. C., and in the borders and beds outside this building for a flower show during state fair week in October. The florists were invited by the fair officials to consider making a flower show an annual feature of the state fair, not only by displaying cut flowers and potted plants in a space set apart for them in one of the buildings, but also by planting flowering bulbs and shrubs in borders and beds on the fair grounds. This plan is in line with the efforts of Mrs. Vanderbilt and her helpers to make the fair grounds a place of beauty during fair week, when North Carolinians will have the opportunity of seeing an exhibit of the floral magnificence of the state.

At a meeting recently held of members of the association, attended by G. J. Starr, of Starr the Florist, Wilson; Otto Busseck, of Middlemont Gardens, Asheville; C. N. Hibbard, of the Durham Floral Co., Durham; A. J. Sykes, of the Van Lindley Co., Greensboro; and J. E. Wholey, of the J. J. Fallon Co., Raleigh. Arrangements were made to use space in the octagonal part of Floral hall. There will be eight booths in the hall and the center of the space will be used. In one of the booths the florists will have a demonstration of the work of the F. T. D. A telegraph instrument will probably be installed, and there will be a representative of the

PRESCRIPTION
DEPT.

We Don't Prescribe But Here's A Prescription

Just the other night six florists were sitting around a dinner table here in little old New York, when the talk turned to the prompt filling of F. T. D. orders. It seems several of them had kicks because their telegraph orders had evidently been side-tracked. One of them talked pretty plain to the offender. He said, "Tom, you remind me of an old colored woman in our town who one day brought one of her youngsters with her to help tote home our wash.

"I asked her what his name was."

"His'n name?" says she, "why, his'n name do be Purscription. I calls him dat because it takes him so long to get filled."

The next day I called the boys together and told them about Mandy.

Not that we haven't always given F. T. D. orders a preference in promptness, but that I wanted to make sure that there would be no backsliding.

Which fact may or may not interest you.

association on hand to explain the workings of the system.

Since the first meeting practically all the other members of the association have agreed to come into the plans for the flower show. Committees have been appointed to work out the details and to follow up the preliminary plans for this part of the fair. In order to complete final arrangements for this display, another meeting of the association will be held in Raleigh during July. This is the regular annual meeting of the Florists' Association, which was originally scheduled for another place in the state. But it has been decided to change the meeting place to Raleigh, in order that all the florists may have the opportunity of helping in this work.

used in the borders and beds near the entrance, outside Floral hall, have already been shipped here and are being planted. Other shipments will be made sometime soon. The florists plan to have these beds bloom or mature just at fair time.

This is the first time that an effort has been made to interest the florists in this work on an elaborate scale, and it is expected that the flower show and the display of growing plants and flowers at fair time will be one of the most interesting of the many new features of the fair this year.

ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

This section was visited by frequent and heavy rains last week, followed by hot weather. Garden truck lawns and all plant life are growing fast. Newly seeded lawns and landscape work set out this spring are doing well. Flowers have moved fairly well. Peonies of the finest quality have been obtainable this year in large quantities. Business as a whole has been good. Indications now are for good crops on the farms, which will mean better business in the towns and cities.

Growers Exhibit Peonies.

The largest and best peony and garden flower show in the history of the State Horticultural Society was held in the Pence automobile show rooms, at Minneapolis, June 13 and 14. Over 1,300 vases were used to stage the exhibit, and it was visited by a steady stream of flower enthusiasts from Tuesday noon until 9 p. m., Wednesday, when the flowers were gathered up and sent to the local hospitals.

The principal commercial exhibitors were D. W. C. Ruff, Bald Eagle; A. J. Wilkus, St. Paul; Franklin Nurseries, Minneapolis; John S. Crooks, St. Paul; A. Nordlander, Minneapolis. Mr. Ruff, Mr. Nordlander and Mr. Crooks did not enter into competition, though all had fine displays.

Franklin Nurseries won first place for the best exhibit of named varieties and Riverview Gardens took second. Riverview Gardens won first on ten named varieties. H. F. Baker won a first on his collections of shrubs and perennials.

A creditable showing of roses and perennials was made by amateurs. A M. Brand, J. E. Stryker, Charles Nordine and D. W. C. Ruff judged the peonies, while Clarence Corey, C. A. Mathes and Miss Mary McNabb judged the amateur flowers.

Various Notes.

Max Kaiser has taken his family to their summer home in the northern part of the state.

The general flower show committee had a meeting at the rose garden Thursday evening, June 15, and started work in earnest on the fall show. The publicity committee had a meeting Tuesday, June 13, to plan the publicity work of the show.

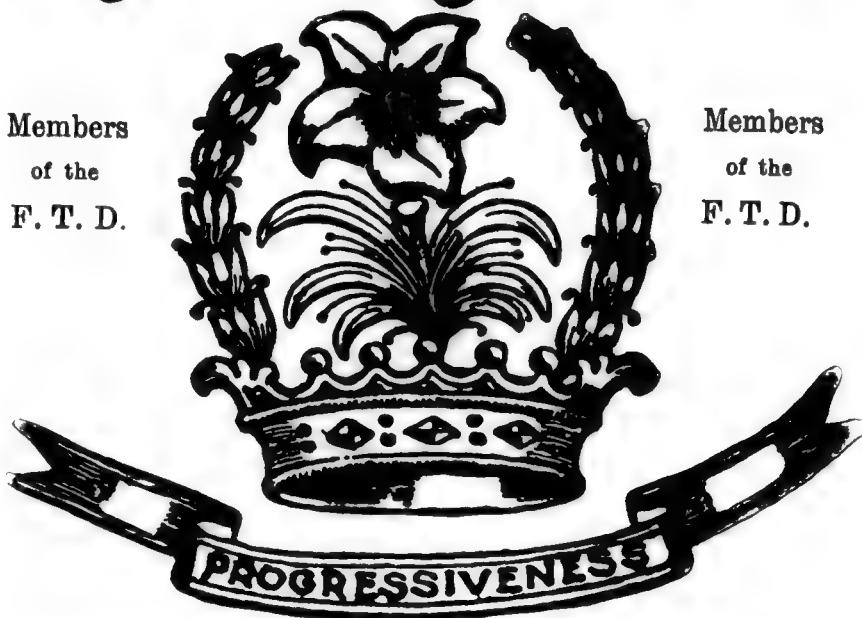

Plans are being laid for the annual picnic of the florists in July.

The Minneapolis park board had a fine showing of peonies this year. Roses

The Market.

For the week ending June 24 there was an excellent demand in the local wholesale market, with little stock of fine quality from which to select. There was plenty of stock, but the hot weather and the continued dry spell caused the poor quality of the stock that came from local growers.

Last week was a busy one with the retailers; there have been many late weddings and school closings, and much funeral work. Little is expected from now on, since the social season has closed.

There are many roses, but extra long fancies are few, among the latter being Premier, Columbia, Russell, Ophelia and Butterfly. White Killarney sold well all last week. Milady was exceedingly poor in quality.

Most of the carnations received came in a sleepy condition, wholly unfit for shipping. Eucharist varieties alone held up under the weather conditions.

Gladioli from outdoors are becoming plentiful; many have badly burned tops. There was a glut of Shasta daisies of excellent quality last week. Valley is good and sells well. Orchids are scarce in this market. Sweet peas show plainly the effects of the hot weather. A large daily supply of field daisies, George Kuehner, manager for Henry Berning, recently purchased a Studebaker pleasure car. While on his way to the baseball game June 18, Mr. Kuehner got into a big smash-up near his home. The car was rendered useless for the time being; Mr. Berning went to the game in a street car.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Steele, of Steele's Pansy Gardens, Portland, Ore., spent a few days here last week on their way home from an eastern trip. They made a number of visits while here.

Taking advantage of the first half of June 17, most of the employees of the various wholesale houses made up parties for a fishing trip, and motored to St. Charles, Mo., for a visit to Edwin Denker's farm. The party was in charge of Harry Schlechter and Hugo Werner.

William C. Smith, for the last fourteen years treasurer of the St. Louis Florists' Club, will entertain the officers of the club for the monthly conference July 6. At this gathering the officers will arrange a program for the St. Charles meeting of the club, July 6.

Vincent J. Gorly, head of Grimm & Gorley, says that the firm's recent advertising campaign proved highly satisfactory. The results of the company's daily specials were beyond expectations.

Frank Windler, of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., reports that the concern is now handling the St. Louis consignments of Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill.

The Acme Floral Shop, in the Arcade building, is undergoing many needed improvements, including a new coat of white gloss paint throughout. After these improvements are made Mrs. E. Turk, manager, will take a few weeks' vacation trip.

The annual spraying campaign by the city forester is now in full progress; many of the fine trees in the west end and south end are infested with caterpillars and gypsy moths.

The following florists celebrated their fourth wedding anniversaries this month: Charles Steidle, June 14; Herman Knoll, June 19, and Henry Duernberg, June 27. The happy couples are enjoying the best of health.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., started June 19 in his new pleasure car for an eastern trip. His first prolonged stop will be New York; he will also visit Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore. The trip, he says, will consume about three weeks.

Edward Eisner, with Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, spent a few days here last week, renewing old acquaintances. As Mr. Eisner is a good golfer, he visited the links of the Kirkwood Golf Club, in company with Frank Gorly, W. A. Rowe and A. W. Gumz, also good golfers.

exhausted. The quality of the stock was fine while it lasted and found ready buyers. Carnations are small and unsatisfactory. Sweet peas are only fair. Feverfew, cornflowers and pink rambler roses are of great assistance in basket work at the present time. The retail stores were busy last week with commencements, weddings and funeral work. From now on the stores can only expect rush days or rush hours, for the steady, everyday business is a thing of the past. R. W. J.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Stock has become scarce in this market and good roses are almost unheard-of. American Beauties are off entirely, so far as the local stock is concerned, and, in general, it is said by the wholesalers that Beauties are hard to get on order. The retailers are paying 6 cents each for short-stemmed roses at this time. The best grades bring up to $25 and $30 per hundred and at times they are eagerly sought. Mock is the prime favorite among the locally grown roses and it is good. Columbia, Russell, Premier and Butterfly also sell when offered.

Easter lilies are scarce and the price has jumped up to $20 per hundred. The large crops are over for the season. It was only a short time ago that the wholesalers were complaining that there was a glut of lilies and the price dropped to $8 per hundred, with few takers. This situation has changed and, if it grows more acute, there is the possibility that some of the orders placed with the local wholesalers will have to go unfilled.

Gladioli are coming into the market in fair quantities and the prices range from $8 to $12 per hundred. America is the favorite at the present time. The brighter colors, although moving fairly well, are not in quite so good demand as the lighter pink shades. Quantities of outdoor flowers, such as Shasta daisies, larkspur and delphinium, are in fair demand, due to the shortage of other flowers. Hydrangeas are also being used in large baskets and decorations and are quoted at $4 to $6 per hundred. Lily of the valley is plentiful, the price ranging from $4 to $8 per hundred.

Carnations, for this season of the year, are considered to be of good quality and are bringing $3 and $4 per hundred. This is a little higher than they were last week and is brought about by the shortage in stock generally. Orchids are more plentiful than they have been for some time and can be had in quantities at as low as $50 per hundred. In small quantities the better grades are selling at $1 and $1.25 each. There is a considerable demand for gypsophila, which is being used in various classes of work.

FLORIST APPRECIATES FINE.

It certainly is a truism that there are still a great many people who believe in turning the other cheek after receiving a blow. As evidence of this fact we find Edward Tatro, of Salina, Kan., living up to the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," after the judge had fined him $15 and costs for speeding. Mr. Tatro received a summons to appear in court to answer the charge of speeding and was duly fined in accordance with the law. After paying his fine he left for his home, only to return to the court room a few moments later with a large bouquet of flowers, which he presented to the judge. It is not known whether Mr. Tatro considered himself lucky at getting off with a $15 fine, or whether he was trying to soften the heart of the judge for the next violation.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

Business has been brisk here for the last two weeks, owing to commencements and numerous weddings, which have called for a good many flowers. All stock is plentiful, but not so good in quality, due to the extreme heat of the last two weeks. Weddings have created a demand for white roses, which are scarce and small at this time. The hardy stock is arriving in large quantities and is selling well, especially the delphiniums.

Fort Wayne was visited by a severe hail storm Friday afternoon, June 16, following an extremely hot spell. It seemed to be the worst in the southeast section of the city. Hailstones over an inch in diameter fell thick and fast. Knecht & Freese lost about 200 feet of glass, and Lanternier Florist lost over 500 feet of glass. The other growers were more fortunate. Those in the northern and western parts of the city did not even see a hailstone.

Knecht & Freese have a large number of weddings booked for the coming week. They report their spring trade as being good.

Lanternier Florist is still busy with

PROVIDENCE ROSE SHOW.

The dates for this interesting and popular early summer show of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society were advanced one week, on account of the forward season, and it was held at the Narragansett hotel June 16 and 17. While the weather somewhat unfavorably affected the size of the exhibition, the large ball room was comfortably filled with exhibits, and the general public came in large numbers to see them.

The display from Roger Williams park, Providence, filled a table the length of the hall. About 100 varieties of roses were included, in addition to a display of hardy herbaceous perennials. Especially fine among the roses were Indiana, Betty, Radiance, Red Radiance, Willowmere. Mrs. John Laing, Frau Karl Druschki, Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Richmond, J. B. Clarke, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Ulrich Brunner and George Arends.

William Gray, superintendent for Princess Christopher of Greece, brought a splendid lot of hybrid teas; especially fine were his vases of Mme. Caroline Testout, Rhea Reid, Alexander Hill Gray, Los Angeles, Duchess of Wellington, Pharisae, Lady Ashtown and Rose Marie. Mr. Gray also had a magnificent lot of sweet peas, which were the star feature of the show; the stems were long and averaged four flowers each. The following were noteworthy: Tangerine, Hawlmark Pink, Hawlmark Lavender, Hawlmark Maroon, Royal Scot, Mrs. Tom Jones, Caress, Cherub, Charity, Mrs. Arnold Hitchcock, Giant White, Floradale Purple, Constance Hinton and Bridesmaid; the last named is an exceptionally beautiful soft pink variety which should prove popular commercially.

John Marshall, of the Fruit Hill Greenhouses, made a great display of Lilium regale, a variety of which he grows over 5,000 under glass. To keep his flowers back for the show Mr. Marshall cut them in bud and laid them on a cellar floor for a week. Twenty-four hours in water plumped them right up, and flowers popped open in abundance for the exhibition.

The Colonial Flower Shoppe took first for the best mantel decoration, using Lilium regale and delphiniums with ferns. They showed a second mantel of ferns only and also had baskets of pansies and other flowers. For a bride's shower bouquet they secured first with a charming arrangement of Cattleya gigas and lilies of the valley.

Fred S. Peck, of Barrington, for whom John S. Doig is gardener, was a large and successful exhibitor. He secured first for a circular group of foliage and flowering plants, for a group of orchids in which Cattleya gigas and Harrisonia were conspicuous, a group of standard fuchsias well flowered, a collection of herbaceous perennials and a centerpiece of strawberries.

The E. J. Lownes estate, at Narragansett Pier, of which James DeNall is gardener, had fine Black Hamburg grapes.

From Pawtucket came an interesting exhibit of single and double dahlias. The plants from which these were cut had stood outdoors for ten years and flowers were always freely produced as early as June.

There was good competition in the amateur rose classes, some excellent flowers being staged.

W. N. Craig, Brookline, acted as judge. W. N. C.

WORCESTER, MASS.

June, the month of roses, has asserted itself in many ways. Weddings are numerous and, consequently, there is a brisk demand for flowers, with a scarcity of these in many varieties. Peonies have become somewhat rare. One reason for the dearth of these flowers is that we have received the heaviest rainfall that we have had in thirty-seven years. Since May 1 of this year we have had twelve inches of rainfall, and the end of it is nowhere in sight. During the four days from June 18 to 22, four inches of water fell, according to the records of the Worcester water department. The lowlands are more or less under water, and both horticulturists and agriculturists stand to suffer a severe loss.

Rose bugs, cutworms and garden pests in general have been playing havoc with vegetation.

Funeral work has been up to the average, and graduation exercises will bring out a big demand for flowers. E. A.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Last week an exceptional change took place in the market, especially among the wholesalers. The cooler weather had a tendency to increase the demand. Each day found the wholesalers practically cleaned up. Some of the florists have had several large weddings and funerals. The supply of roses, however, has been sufficient to meet the demand and these have been of good quality. Red roses, however, are limited, while the demand far exceeds the supply. Yellow, white and pink roses have also been in demand, but the supply has been adequate to take care of the demand. Carnations have also been moving out fairly well, the quality being fairly good, considering the time of the year. Gladioli are constantly in demand. The supply just about takes care of the demand. The quality has been exceptionally fine and gladioli have been moved out at a fair price. Plenty of Easter lilies have been in the market; in fact, more than the demand. However, quantities of lilies are being moved. Plenty of garden flowers, such as sweet william, foxtglove, coreopsis, blue lace flowers and Rambler sprays, are in the market daily and move out fairly well. The supply of lily of the valley was limited and at times there was not sufficient to go around. String smilax is also much in demand and, while the supply is limited, the wholesalers endeavor to take care of all their customers by dividing up this stock.

The Market.

The cut flower business has been holding up well and the June brides have become more numerous as the month has advanced. Funeral work has been a little slack, but it has picked up considerably in the last few days. Gladioli are beginning to come in and are plentiful now. Roses are getting short and carnations small, but garden flowers in profusion make up for all this.

Various Notes.

the Deshler hotel and are going to open a high-class store in the lobby of the hotel. Fancy vases, bowls and other gifts, together with a complete line of cut flowers, will be handled here. The

NEWARK, N. J.

As is usual when the midsummer vacation months arrive, business is beginning to grow slack. There is still some wedding work and funeral work, but the transient trade is dull and graduation business has passed for the season.

The 1922 Newark directory, just off the press, lists fifty-eight florists in its business section. Three nurserymen, six seedsmen and two manufacturers of artificial flowers are recorded.

doors, and also indoors when evaporating with steam pipes is out of order. In California this is applied with a hand machine carried on the back of a Japanese wearing a gas mask and also with a power-driven machine loaded on a truck, as shown in the illustration on this page. When used on large acreages, this application is a costly item for the grower, but there is no alternative. An unusually warm spell of weather sometimes makes it impossible to save the crop; the chances then depend on how closely the aphids has been kept down. Because of this factor, the crop prospects can never be forecasted with any degree of certainty until it is ready to harvest.

The Lompoc valley is about fifteen miles long and six or eight miles wide; it is swept by the salt air of the Pacific and withal a highly favored location for the production of sweet pea seed, for which, indeed, over 1,000 acres of the valuable "glass house" crops, as they call them, are controlled by Americans and probably always will be. Even with the smaller crops, there is not the keenness displayed that there might be. During my visit there, the demand was oversupplied a dozen times on sweet peas, all put up in great, clumsy bunches of 400 to 500 flowers each, and of antiquated varieties; even quantities of grandifloras were noted. Fifty cents per bunch was asked for these, but I am inclined to believe that if the grower figured his average per hundred on these flowers, as we do, he would have to make extensive use of the decimal system in his calculations.

It is nearly 500 miles from San Francisco to Los Angeles and the intervening towns are unimportant from the standpoint of one interested in our industry. While Los Angeles is a real live city and there are modern ranges of glass there, notably the Armacost range at Sawtelle and Amling's at Santa Ana, there does not appear to be the same life there that was noted in San Francisco. Practically everything but roses is more cheaply produced. Nevertheless, the wealth of the city creates a market for all the good greenhouse stock produced.

Both these coast cities carry on an extensive shipping business in flowers as far east as Salt Lake City, even shipping sweet peas to this point during the winter months. These winter peas are cheaply produced under cloth-covered frames; in fact, the climate is such that all classes of stock can be more cheaply produced. This, coupled with the fact that outdoor flowers generally are more plentiful, will always tend to restrict the cut flower business, as we know it in the east, in these coast cities.

Typifies Western Spirit.

roses, the firm of Howard & Smith looms large out there and far beyond their immediate territory. Besides the well appointed retail store in Los Angeles, the nurseries at Montebello are of particular interest. Here are seen strains of delphiniums, pansies and cinerarias that show careful breeding. Here is also a strain of callas in a wide range of colors that, to the writer, breaks the old adage to the effect that there is nothing new under the sun. For many kinds of cut flower work these should be valuable. I regret that time did not permit me to visit the vast rose fields for which this firm is famous, but I saw enough to learn that Fred Howard is the dominating figure in all this work. He typifies the broad, hospitable western spirit of this great state, that we might call the last of the best.

WHITE BUD ON MUMS.

My potted mums are badly affected with what I am told is known as "white bud" and the plants do not seem to grow at all. The root system of the plants is poor, while the foliage, especially the buds, is a light yellow color. Florence Pullman and Golden Glow show the effects of this disease more than any of the other varieties. Can you suggest a remedy?

G. L. V.—Fla.

I am not acquainted with the disease you speak of as "white bud." As a matter of fact, however, mums should not be throwing buds at this time of the year, if properly handled. The light

SALT SPRAY FOR RED SPIDER.

Will you please give me some advice about a salt sprayer for red spider? Will the salt kill foliage? My carnations this season have not done me much good, and my smilax at the end of the carnation bed was ruined. Now the red spider has spread to my snapdragons. I have used water at all times from a hose, at city pressure. The house is of wood-frame construction, low and, of course, warmer than the new ones. I have been afraid to use the salt sprayer until I heard definitely about the possibility of injuring the plants.
N. McD.—Kan.

Spraying with salt is a method of controlling red spider generally used by carnation growers. The carnation seems to like the salt and an occasional spraying benefits rather than harms, even if no red spider is present. A salt sprayer designed by a carnation grower for greenhouse use is manufactured by the John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.

Regarding his use of such a sprayer, a well known carnation grower has written as follows: "Instead of using the ordinary barrel salt, as we did formerly, we use rock salt. We find that if we fill the magazine with as large pieces as possible, the water in passing through will take up just enough of the salt to be effective. If the salt is broken into small bits, the dissolution will be more rapid, which is not desirable. We do not wash off the salt with clear water, but prefer to let it remain on the plants, as it is not harmful to them in the least. We spray with this salt solution once each week throughout the season and find it quite beneficial in preventing spider. To get rid of a bad attack, one should spray at least twice weekly for a time."

GREEN FLY ON CUCUMBERS.

Will you advise me if there is any way of combating green fly on cucumbers in the field? G. G.—Neb.

It is necessary to go over the plants and turn the shoots upside down, as the aphid gets on the lower side of the leaves. Unless this is done you cannot fight the pest effectively. Then go over the crop with a sprayer. One loaded on a wagon and having one line of hose, with one man leading the horse and pumping and another walking behind and spraying with a Vermorel or some other fine nozzle, would soon cover a large stretch of cucumbers. As the aphid is killed by contact, poisons like arsenate of lead and Paris green are valueless. A nicotine extract like Black Leaf 40, one part to 600 of water, to which is added a little soap to make it more adhesive, will prove the most effective. Other nicotine extracts, like Nico-fume, are also excellent. One good spraying should all but clean out the aphid, but rather than lose the plants, repeat the operation a few days later.

Another remedy I am trying this season is fine tobacco dust from a dust sprayer. Even with this I find it is better to roll the vines over in order to get at the pests effectually. I think we are nearing an era when dust spraying will replace liquid spraying outside to combat both destructive insects and fungoid diseases. The present season has proved that the ease of operation, compared with liquid sprays, and its equal effectiveness for fruit trees, roses and some shade trees, as well as potatoes and other vegetables, makes dust spraying a money-saver. FALL GREENHOUSE CROP.

I expect to have my new house, 35x150 feet, ready for planting on or before September 1. What could I grow at a profit between that date and November 15? I expect to start cucumbers about November 15. Someone suggested that I plant gladioli. Do you favor this suggestion? How many bulbs would I need and what would be the best varieties to grow? The house will have five benches, each five feet wide. F. V.—Ore.

I should not recommend gladioli for planting as late as September 1. You could, of course, purchase bulbs which had been carried over in cold storage, but September is a late date to start these. Furthermore, a large proportion would not have flowered November 15, and even those which would flower would not give you spikes like those grown outdoors. Furthermore, after the early part of October purchasers fight more or less shy of gladioli, as they have been in season so long, preferring chrysanthemums, carnations, roses and sweet peas.

There is not time to start and flower sweet peas or any other flowering plant I know of. If, however, you have a good market for vegetables, why not plant the house to lettuce? You could easily get this crop matured and cleared before time to plant cucumbers, November 15. For head lettuce, I should suggest May King or French Unrivalled; for leaf lettuce, Grand Rapids Forcing or Curled Simpson.

New Bethlehem, Pa.—J. L. Bowman recently purchased a greenhouse and will enter the trade in the near future.

Red Lodge, Mont.—Mrs. I. N. Dilley, of 3417 West Wellesley avenue, has disposed of the greenhouses here and will move to Spokane, Wash., where she will reëngage in the trade.

Warrensburg, N. Y.—Sheridan E. Prosser disposed of his greenhouse interests on Horicon avenue recently to Frank Wetmore Smith, of Saranac Lake, and George S. Street, of Bolton Landing. The new owners have already taken possession of the property and will conduct the business under the name of Street & Smith. Mr. Street, who has for several years been foreman for Dr. Becker, at the Marie Antoinette Manor, on the Bolton road, will be the active manager.

"Album of Designs"

EDITION

With this Album the Florist can show his customers, in handsomely printed pictures, how the completed design will look. It makes it easier to close a sale and leads to bigger and better orders.

No other book for Florists ever has enjoyed so large a sale or been so universally used as The Review's "Album of Designs." Six editions have been sold. A seventh and revised edition now has been printed. 96 pages, over 200 designs and decorations.

Single Copies, postpaid $ 1.25
Per dozen, postpaid 12.00

Why show your trade an old, soiled Album when you can get a fresh, clean new one, postpaid, for only $1.25?

Good Advice

Ship your flowers to us and you will never be disappointed with your returns.

We keep in close touch with the best buyers and are in a position to dispose of the better grades at top-notch prices.

You can depend on getting your returns promptly, too, when we handle your shipments.

Special opportunity for a couple of good Rose Growers who are looking for best returns. Our present demand is greater than our supply.

NEWS OF THE SEED TRADE

THE wife of H. B. Pantler, president of the St. Louis Seed Co., passed away at Waterloo, Ill., June 24. Her demise is noted on the obituary page of this issue.

THE paper of Lester L. Morse, on "Growing Vegetable Seed in California," one of the most instructive of those presented at the convention of the American Seed Trade Association last week, appears on a forward page of this issue.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by Mills the Florist, Inc., Jacksonville, Fla., of the opening of a seed department in conjunction with the firm's flower business. This new department will be opened about September 1. Charles W. Zaun will be in charge.

PLANS are under way for the opening of a seed and flower store at Columbus, O., next door to the store of the Wilson Seed & Floral Co. Mr. Stephan, formerly with the Livingston Seed Co. and more recently with the Wilson Seed & Floral Co., left the latter's employ last week to undertake the new enterprise.

ADVICES from Holland indicate a good crop of hyacinth bulbs, with the exception of those places that suffered from frost, although the hot weather had some adverse effect. The heat damaged early tulips, especially the double, Couronne d'Or, but a fairly good crop is expected. Darwin tulips are expected to be in better shape.

ONE of the purchasers of the milk goats brought from California by Charles H. Stevens and auctioned off at his Lake Geneva home June 24, was J. C. Vaughan. So valuable was these goats' milk for feeding babies that Mr. Stevens, after experimenting, purchased the herd for resale to Chicago millionaires.

A STRIP of land with an 88 foot frontage on Main street and a depth of 300 feet, formerly owned by the Fredonia Preserving Co., Fredonia, N. Y., was recently purchased by the Fredonia Seed Co., and the latter firm plans to erect a modern building upon this site to take care of its rapidly expanding business. The officers of this firm are: President and general manager, George Ostrander; vice-president, Frank Schifferli; secretary and treasurer, H. F. Lupean.

PRICES ON PAPER WHITES.

The cable this week has brought the new season's prices on Paper Whites. Previous communications had indicated that the figures would be high, but few, if any, of the dealers here were prepared for the announcement that 350 francs per case must be paid for the thirteen-centimeter size. This is an almost uniform quotation, prices named by several exporters varying not more than 5 francs. Furthermore, the money must be laid down at Ollioules before any bulbs will be shipped.

The crop has been lifted and, for the most part, has passed from the growers into the hands of the dealers. The first shipment will come forward, for those whose confirmations are sent promptly, on the boat sailing from Marseilles about July 12. It appears that the crop has turned out at not more than half last year's outturn, which, it will be remembered, was itself the smallest crop in many years. Last year the American dealers paid around 135 francs, as against 350 francs this year. For Soleil d'Or the price is 1,000 francs. High as these prices are, the Frenchmen claim they are not making so much money as would have been the case with an average crop and normal prices.

Based on the Ollioules price, the American jobbers' price can not well be less than about $42 per case of 1,250 bulbs. This price probably will not deter the man who uses five or ten cases for forcing for his own retail trade, but it surely will discourage the large foreers who consign to wholesale cut flower commission markets. They will not care to risk too large an investment.

There will be practically no large bulbs; instead of thirteen, fourteen and fifteen-centimeter sizes, which were standard a few years ago, there will be eleven, twelve and thirteen-centimeter sizes. Many Americans heretofore have acted under the belief that bulbs under thirteen centimeters are unsafe, but the French assert the smaller size will flower, the smaller size this year being due to dry weather.

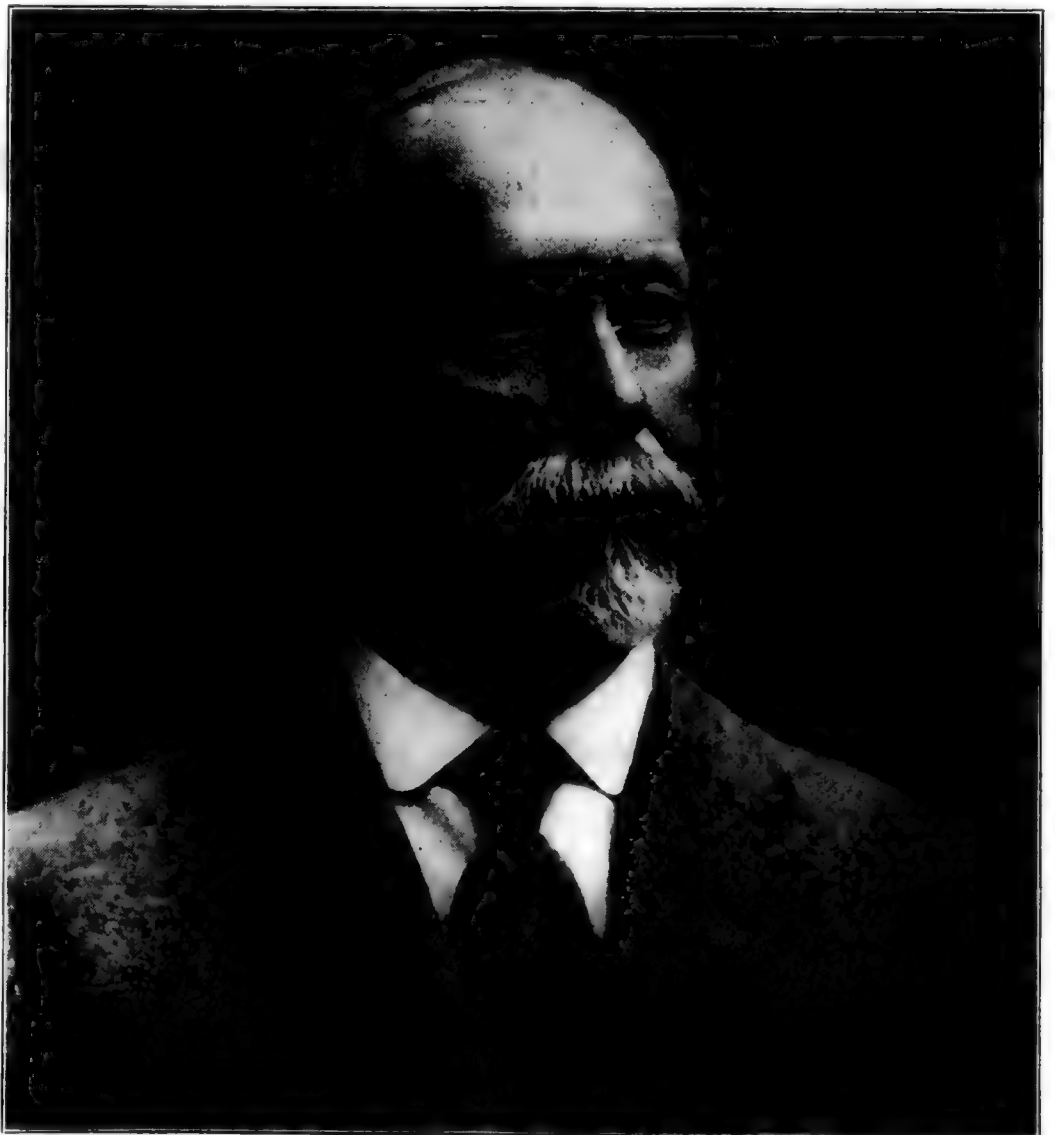

Incidentally, a franc cost, June 27, about 8.52 cents. Many importers bought at least a part of their requirements of francs some little time ago, while the market was higher, and have a loss there.

SEEDSMEN ENJOY CHICAGO.

Wind Up Convention.

Approximately 200 seedsmen, analysts and those representing trades allied, coming from many states in the Union, Canada and even South America and New Zealand, were assembled in Chicago last week for the fortieth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association. Friday, June 23, just before the final meeting closed, the following officers were elected unanimously: President, Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J.; first vice-president, S. F. Leonard, Chicago; second vice-president, L. B. Reuter, New Orleans, La., reelected; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., reelected; assistant secretary, Clifford Corneli, St. Louis, Mo., reelected.

For the coming year the executive committee is to be composed of the following: L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis.; Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; C. C.

Alexander Forbes.

The membership committee for the coming year will be as follows: H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga.; E. F. Mangelsdorf, Birmingham, Ala.; G. S. Green, Chicago; Burnett Landreth, Bristol, Pa., and R. W. Palmer, St. Louis.

In the wind-up of the convention the association elected S. F. Willard, of Wethersfield, Conn., to honorary membership and a telegram informing him of this honor was at once sent.

Directly after the newly elected president had taken the chair, Watson F. Woodruff, of Orange, Conn., on behalf of the society, presented the retiring president with a watch, accompanying the presentation with some clever remarks, in which he stated that some "had come to Chicago for a good time, while still others brought their wives."

Wednesday Meeting.

But much had happened in the days just preceding this final session. Account of the opening session, June 21, and the garden bureau reports were contained in last week's issue of The Review. Illustrating the reports on the bureau's work, a 12-minute motion picture was shown illustrating the educational advantages of the cinema; although the subject of the picture shown was "dairy farming," still it was at once apparent that gardening could be just as readily taught the public.

Francis C. Stokes thanked all those firms that had contributed to the Russian relief seed donation and promised his aid in case any firm should desire to contribute more seeds.

J. H. Burdett, director of the national garden bureau, read a letter from R. E. Patterson, of Des Moines, Ia., which showed how the seedsmen of that city had profited by coöperatively advertising to sell the garden idea, primarily. At a cost to each firm of $59.65, the letter stated, every individual firm conceded that it had profited as much as if it had advertised individually at $496. The firms of Des Moines will continue this advertising in 1923.

Edgar C. Brown, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., pointed out that the department was studying the importation of seeds from all angles, including all the proposed methods of marking. After much deliberation, the Department of Agriculture has decided that the best policy is to keep on working from all sides until some wise, progressive action can be taken.

Wednesday evening, June 21, as guests of the Chicago seedsmen, a whole boatload of the visitors assembled at the Clark street pier, embarked on the Columbia and sailed north along the lake shore in a circular course to the municipal pier, where a landing was made for dancing. In spite of the chill Lake Michigan breezes, all concurred in voting this a delightful evening.

Thursday's Sessions.

Thursday morning, June 22, the members of the seedsmen's association assembled in executive session, a closed meeting, and stayed so convened until about 1 p. m., which allowed just time enough to get a bite to eat and a hurried return to the Thursday afternoon session, at 2 p. m.

This session, designated on the program as a joint meeting with the Association of Official Seed Analysts, was "coöperative" in spirit, attendance and in oratorical expression. In honor of the occasion, President Olds surrendered his chair to Dean T. W. Taylor, of the New Hampshire Agricultural College. The dean is president of the Association of Official Seed Analysts. It was notable that at some place in every talk or paper there was a hope expressed that better team work between the different branches of the trade might be accomplished.

Seed Growers

The first speaker introduced, Dr. C. R. Orton, professor of plant pathology at Pennsylvania State College, discussed "Seed-Borne Diseases." Dr. Orton showed, mostly by example, what has been accomplished in various states, especially Pennsylvania, in combating diseases emanating in the seed. He pointed out how more could be done if there was a better organization between the trade and the laboratories. Photographs were passed about showing how winter blight affects tomatoes.

Tips from the Analysts.

E. H. Toole, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., aimed to prove in his lecture, on "Research and Seed Testing," just how important it is to keep trueness to type paramount. He showed the many angles that an analyst must work from, explained the difficulties presented in a study of dormancy and described methods of seed treatment. Vegetable seeds and flower seeds, he explained, require varied attention. He proved to satisfaction how important it is for seedsmen to present their problems to the analyst, so that a spirit of mutual helpfulness may develop between those who are commercially engaged and those who work in theory only.

Appropriately following Mr. Toole, W. C. Pfaender, commercial seed analyst of the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, arose to deliver a paper on the "Problems of a Commercial Seed Analyst." The actual testing of seed, Mr. Pfaender said, was not the greatest trouble of a commercial analyst. Tagging stock for the different states presents the chief problem. There are thirty-eight states with seed laws and they are practically all different, he explained. Some require one method of description, some another, and when the same stock is sent to different states with different laws the analyst must be perpetually watchful to see that no laws are broken. And mistakes are bound to occur. These difficulties, it would seem, are all pointing to uniformity in seed laws. "We don't ask for the abolishment of seed laws," said Mr. Pfaender; "what we want is uniformity."

Next appeared Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, with his paper, "Safeguards in the Seed Business." This paper will appear in this department next week.

The Seedsman's Side.

George S. Green, of the Illinois Seed Co., Chicago, in his paper on "Some of the Difficulties Field Seedsmen Encounter in Securing Clean Seed," stated that methods and practices of recleaners of seeds had improved under a more general demand for better seeds. "The most difficult problem in the application of seed analysis to the practical work of the seedsman," said Mr. Green, "is the measure of exactness and purity which is possible, considering the careless or even slovenly habits of Mother Nature in putting weeds where they are not wanted." Mr. Green pointed out that the seed laws were still too lax. He listed six difficulties encountered by the recleaners of seeds. "The efforts for direct marketing and the elimination of middlemen will result in a net loss to agriculture, if they do not recognize the place and service of the recleaner of seeds who knows his business and who is willing to conduct it along proper lines," said Mr. Green.

Following Mr. Green's talk, W. L. Oswald spoke on "Coöperation."

As Banqueters.

Taking leave of business Thursday evening, June 22, the seedsmen and the analysts, the latter as guests, came together at the Sherman for a rousing banquet. There was singing; there was speaking; there was laughter; there was joy. Clifford Corneli was toastmaster. He was introduced by President Olds. "Reparations and the Allied Debts" was presented by Prof. G. H. Moulton, of the University of Chicago. A. E. Brunner, president of the Liquid Carbonic Co., Chicago, discussed present-day conditions and put a punch in his talk with many humorous sidelights. He predicted better business conditions in the immediate future.

Friday Morning.

At the Friday morning and final session, H. H. Miller, of Bloomington, Ill., chairman of the committee on experiment stations, reported results obtained state by state, showing how, slowly but surely, each locality was being planted to the most suitable crops. C. C. Massie, of Minneapolis, chairman of the committee on seed-testing apparatus and publicity, reported.

At this point an interesting feature, not scheduled, took place. J. E. Huber, of an experiment station in the Argentine, South America, was introduced. He told of the big demand for American produce in the foreign countries and of the opportunities in South America for young seedsmen. He predicted that American corn could take the German market entirely. He advised American seedsmen and growers to build humus; specialize on power gardens and not depend on hand power, and to watch irrigation. "There is plenty of land worth millions in the south," he stated, "which could be developed into wonderful places—natural hothouses—but which are being sold cheaply for other purposes."

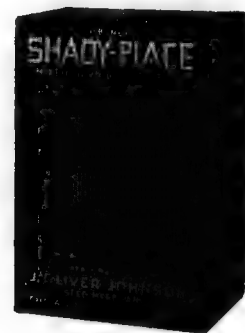

James R. Howard, president of the American Farm Federation, discussing "The Farmer and the Seedsman," said the farmers' bureau was, first, educational; second, social; and, third, economic. He explained that the farmer does not care for a great variety of seed nor for many-paged catalogues, but that the farmer does want to know what he is getting—reliable seed standardized and honestly merchandised.

H. G. Hastings brought before the meeting the discussion of bulletins issued in certain states, at the state's expense, which are practically nothing but classified advertisements which can be used by anyone, tradesman or not, to advertise stock—at state expense. These bulletins have the second-class mailing rights and do not pay, as do other publications. Since they were

- No. 28. GIANT MASTERPIECE. A remarkable type, the curled wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance; large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; ¾ oz., $3.80; 1 oz., $7.50; 4 oz., $27.00.
30. GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES. A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich, velvety colors; reds are particularly conspicuous, the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large, dark blotches. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00; 4 oz., $21.50.
32. GIANT PARISIAN. The flowers are of enormous size and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground; an unusually showy mixture. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00; 4 oz., $21.50.
34. GIANT BRONZE. A fine mixture of all shades of velvety brown bronze, Havana brown, mahogany and copper shades. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00; 4 oz., $21.50.
36. TRIUMPH OF GIANT. Remarkably beautiful. The imposing five-spotted flowers on long, vigorous stalks surmount the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size, perfectly round and of unusual substance. The individual petals are very broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double, the border of every petal being conspicuously curled. The plants are of a robust growth and form compact bushes of a round shape. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00; 4 oz., $21.50.
40. GIANT BATH'S EMPRESS. The finest of fancy English Pansies. Flowers are very large, mostly frilled and blotched and of great substance and the colors are brilliant and varied. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; ¾ oz., $3.80; 1 oz., $7.50.
70. ORCHID-FLOWERED, Mixed. A dwarf, free bloomer, with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other Pansies; a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, bluish mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamols. Trade pkt., 35c; ¼ oz., 75c; ½ oz., $1.35; ¾ oz., $2.60; 1 oz., $5.00; 4 oz., $18.00.

No. 12. KENILWORTH GIANT PRIZE. I have improved this strain by selecting and saving seed from the best shaped flowers of the most gorgeous color for many years. It is of the blocked Masterpiece type. The plants distinguish themselves by their robust growth and healthy-looking foliage; they are deep rooted and stand the hot, dry weather better than most other varieties. The large flowers on long, thick stems are carried well above the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size and of good substance. The petals are exceedingly broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double. The border of each petal being conspicuously undulated and curled, the gorgeous and varied colored blossoms of velvety texture, perfect form and giant size, frequently measuring 3½ inches in diameter; the ground color such as yellow, white, deep orange, mahogany brown, bronze blue, and endless variations. Most petals are beautifully marked with a large blotch, a few are self-colored. They are especially fine for planting under glass or outside for cut flowers at all seasons. Trade pkt., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.35; ½ oz., $2.60; ¾ oz., $5.00; 1 oz., $10.00; 4 oz., $35.00.

10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of the best varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivaled mixture. Trade pkt., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.35; ½ oz., $2.60; ¾ oz., $5.00; 1 oz., $10.00; 4 oz., $35.00.

19. TRIMARDEAU GIANT PANSY, improved; it is far superior to the ordinary run of Trimardeau that is sold. It is a very showy class of vigorous, compact growth. Flowers of enormous size in all the self colors, blocked, striped, margined, etc. It is very doubtful if any other pansy will give as good satisfaction as the improved Trimardeau for all general purposes. Trade pkt., 35c; ¼ oz., 75c; ½ oz., $1.35; ¾ oz., $2.60; 1 oz., $5.00; 4 oz., $18.00.

20. PRINCESS, the New Upright Pansy. This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems, carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00.

22. GIANT KENILWORTH STRAIN. The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are 3-inch. It is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, medium or dark mixtures. Trade pkt., 40c; ¼ oz., 90c; ½ oz., $1.65; ¾ oz., $3.10; 1 oz., $6.00; 4 oz., $21.50.

24. GIANT KENILWORTH SHOW is undoubtedly the largest flowered Pansy in the world; the immense flowers are of circular form. A beautiful collection of colors and markings. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; ¾ oz., $3.80; 1 oz., $7.50; 4 oz., $27.00.

26. GIANT KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 6 or 7 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well. Trade pkt., 45c; ¼ oz., $1.10; ½ oz., $2.00; ¾ oz., $3.80; 1 oz., $7.50; 4 oz., $27.00.

New Early Flowering Giant Pansies

They are three to four weeks earlier than other Pansies, in coldframes or field; they have four or five large blossoms, when other Pansies planted at the same time are only showing bud. The richly colored, large, well formed flowers, on long, stiff stems, are very fragrant.

thought a menace to the trade, after some discussion it was resolved to instruct the counsel to take up the matter with the Agricultural Press Association, in an effort to squelch these papers. These bulletins, it developed, are most prevalent in the south.

In the absence of the chairman, Lester L. Morse, of San Francisco, reported for the committee on the president's address; all the recommendations made by the president in his address—these were mentioned in last week's report—were sanctioned; it was suggested that a committee be appointed to confer with the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association to take up the matter of united field seed advertising.

The code of ethics agreed to is as follows:

OUR PURPOSE.

To improve and perfect a standard of business integrity, which shall include purity of stocks, honesty of representation, carefulness of obligations and promptness in execution.

At this point the newly elected president took the chair, and the secretary was ordered to read some telegrams. A cablegram from Holland stated that there was a drought there, and besought the seedsmen to send a rain-maker. A telegram from Knoxville asked for the next annual convention to come south to Knoxville. John R. Condon, of Condon Bros., Rockford, suggested that the next convention assemble at Rockford. But President-elect Alexander Forbes said the executive committee would take up the matter, remembering the suggestions made.

The Visitors.

SEED ANALYSTS CONVENE.Jointly with Seedsmen.

Contemporaneous with the convening of the American Seed Trade Association, June 21 to 23, the Association of Official Seed Analysts of North America held its fifteenth annual meeting. Thursday, June 22, the association assisted in a joint meeting with the seedsmen. The account of this joint meeting appears on another page of this issue. Headquarters for the convention was at the Sherman hotel, where the seedsmen met.

At 10 a. m., Wednesday, June 21, a business session was held, at which a roll call by states was taken. The report of the secretary-treasurer was heard, and the committees on legislation, co-operation, extension and publicity were heard. New committees were appointed and a number of important announcements were made. Then Dean F. W. Taylor, of the New Hampshire Agricultural College, made his address.

Hear Educational Papers.

Wednesday afternoon, at 2 p. m., an open session was held at which a number of interesting papers were read. Probably the most interesting of these from a seedsman's standpoint was that by F. H. Hillman, Washington, D. C., on "Testing Bent Grass Seeds for Purity."

Another open session for round-table conferences took place Thursday, June 22, at 9 a. m. At this time W. L. Goss, of Washington, D. C., discussed "Testing for Germination"; A. H. Larson, of Minnesota, talked on "Purity Analyses"; Henry Lunz, of Wisconsin, discussed "Seed Law Enforcement," and M. T. Munn, of New York, talked on "Extension and Publicity Plans."

Friday, June 25, at 9 a. m., Edgar Brown, Washington, D. C., spoke on "The Training of a Seed Analyst"; M. T. Munn, New York, delivered a talk on "Testing Lawn Grass Seed Mixture," and A. A. Hansen, of Indiana, discussed "Extension Work in Seed Testing."

At this meeting the reports of committees were heard and other necessary business was taken care of.

The officers who served during the last year were reelected: President, F. W. Taylor; secretary, A. L. Stone.

SNAPDRAGON

Snapdragons have moved into first place with all wide-awake florists and are earning growers more money than any flower in cultivation. This is especially true among growers with a retail outlet. Splendid blooms may be had any month in the year, with a bumper crop over the three great flower days, Easter, Mothers' Day, and Memorial, extending throughout June graduations.

Snapdragons are easy to grow and good seed may be had at such small cost that there is no excuse for having inferior stock. Producing snapdragon seed is our one business and the ever increasing orders show how well we attend to it. Years of experience and our reputation are back of every packet of seed. See complete list below. First comes

A NEW ONE:—We are happy to announce a new addition to our snapdragon family and introduce "HELEN," a gorgeous, delicate salmon, named for a daughter who graciously assisted in bringing

our business through the critical world war period. Helen is a stately variety, medium tall, early and very prolific. We have never had so many pleasing comments by visitors and many advance orders have been placed. This variety will please the most exacting and should be in every collection. Note low price.

Helen —Exquisite delicate salmon, a winner.....	$1.00 per pkt. 3 for $2.50 7 for 5.00
Silver Pink —Soft silvery pink, marvelous producer.....
Golden Pink Queen —(1920) Immensely popular, very free

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

ABOUT twenty-five standard varieties of peonies were shown in the office of Swain Nelson & Sons Co., in the Marquette building, Chicago, the latter half of last week. Advertisements in the daily papers and invitations sent out to the firm's customers brought large attendance to admire the blooms. They were taken from the plants at the firm's nurseries at Glenview, with an idea to show what might be expected from roots purchased from this firm, rather than to display exhibition specimens.

THE master list of peonies and iris issued by the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, is quite well known to growers of these flowers. This year the list has been embodied in a handsome booklet in colors, which should make it even more interesting to the eye of the amateur. In order to prepare a piece of sales literature which should be in accord with the outstanding position of his firm, William A. Peterson engaged Frank B. White, of Chicago, whose Agricultural Advertisers' Service is known to many in the trade. The magazine advertising of the Peterson Nursery will be handled by Mr. White also.

NURSEYMEN IN CONVENTION.

A. A. N. at Detroit.

Changing from the eastern shore of Lake Michigan to that of Lake Erie, the American Association of Nurserymen this week assembles in Detroit instead of Chicago, as in the last few years. The change in location, however, brought no diminution in size or spirit of the annual gathering of the nursery trade. The Hotel Wolverine, official headquarters of the association, was crowded.

Unfortunately, the hotel was not the meeting place or the banquet place. The sessions are held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, near the hotel, and the banquet was held at the Detroit Athletic Club.

The change in the association's course at Chicago last year and the activity under the new regime made the meeting one of particular interest. What the year's experiments produced is best indicated by the various reports presented.

To these reports the first day, June 28, was largely devoted. After the invocation had been delivered by W. H. Wyman, of North Abington, Mass., the mayor of Detroit, James Couzens, gave the address of welcome, to which Ex-president J. Edward Moon eloquently responded. Then President Cashman delivered his official address.

President's Address.

In his address as president, M. R. Cashman said:

"When we met at Chicago a year ago, we united on a policy that had for its first precept the holding together of the organization. This policy was in keeping with the times, and we started in to economize by discontinuing the executive secretary's office in New Jersey and saddling much of the work formerly taken care of by that office upon the various membership committees, supported by our efficient secretary, Mr. Sizemore. The wisdom of this move can best be judged by the final action of this convention assembled at Detroit, but if my observations are correct, I venture the statement that there are few dissatisfied members and that our new policy will receive the endorsement of a large majority of the attending nurserymen.

"Our association is in a remarkably flourishing condition, both as to funds and membership. We have taken care of the year's business, paid all of our bills, and find our treasury between $5,000 and $6,000 richer than it was a year ago. We have a surplus of over $21,000, against $16,000 July 1 one year ago. We have a small increase in membership, with the prospect of a considerable increase during the coming year. We have a most efficient collection bureau and railroad claim office, built up under the supervision of Secretary Sizemore, at Louisiana, Mo. His report will show a heavy increase in claims and collections placed with him during the year just past. There is every prospect of a big increase in this department during the coming year. Prospects are indeed most encouraging and our surplus funds will enable the incoming executive board to place at the disposal of the market development committee a materially increased appropriation for next year's work.

Appointment of Committees

"Under our present arrangement, the new president each year must build up an entire new organization; he has the task confronting him immediately after his election of appointing committees to handle the various phases of the association's work. By the time the new administration has perfected its organization, two or three months have elapsed. It requires time for a new committee to familiarize itself with the work that it is expected to do, and by the time the committee is in a position to render valuable services, the year has ended. I believe some plan should be inaugurated to continue throughout a term of years the chairmen of important committees who have proved their ability and willingness to serve the association. I also believe that the chairman of each committee should have the selection of those who are to work with him on the committee.

"We have ample funds in our treasury with which to pay the traveling expenses of committeemen serving us at conferences or other gatherings where our interests are at stake, and it should be urged that we take advantage of being represented by prominent nurserymen whenever occasion arises. During the past year, special representatives and committeemen from this association have been present at various conferences, horticultural meetings and other gatherings where matters pertaining to our business were under discussion. We have secured most satisfactory results.

"The work of the executive committee the past year has not been arduous, for the reason that every member promptly took care of all business arising in his district. In the case of the two Washington conferences that interested the attention of the nurserymen throughout the country, the executive board found ready and willing support from every nurseryman called upon to help present our case. Not only this, but our representatives have made a favorable impression in Washington and we are now in the happy position of supporting our government officials in their commendable efforts to protect American agricultural and horticultural interests. There has never been a time in the history of American horticulture when we nurserymen could so truthfully say that the United States Department of Agriculture is fostering and protecting our industry, and there has never been a time when the nurserymen have had so many warm friends as they have today in the Department of Agriculture.

"The executive board has held four meetings during the past year; the first at Chicago a year ago, immediately following the convention; the second at Kansas City in midwinter, during the meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen; the third in Washington, D. C., preceding the conference on quarantine 37, and the fourth here at Detroit, preceding the convention. All matters have been disposed of.

Market Development.

"The work of our market development committee, under the leadership of F. F. Rockwell, has resulted in demonstrating the wonderful results that can be obtained from a small sum of money wisely expended. Few of us have forgotten the great benefits derived through the dissemination of reading articles on fruit and ornamental growing by F. F. Rockwell during the first year of our market development work. This last year your executive committee appropriated a sum not to exceed $5,000 to be expended under the direction of a market development committee consisting of F. F. Rockwell, E. E. May and Albert F. Meehan. Mr. Rockwell agreed to take charge of the work and give it a portion of his time. I believe he has handled market development in a most proficient and productive manner.

The Booster.

"A little experiment was suggested by Mr. Rockwell during the early part of the year, which later materialized into a little pamphlet mailed out to the members under the name of 'The Booster.' We have not had facilities to make this little periodical a regular affair as yet, but we offer the suggestion that it is well worth its cost if made a monthly or bimonthly issue. It could be the official medium for friendly discussion between members and through it announcements could be made on all matters considered confidential and pertaining to association business only. I bespeak for the Booster the serious consideration of the incoming executive board.

"In this connection, I wish to state that your president has avoided public utterances through the trade papers to a marked degree during the past year, and I take this occasion to say to the editors of our estimable trade journals that my failure to take advantage of the kind offer of the columns of their papers was due not to the fact that I had nothing to say, nor to a personal desire to keep out of print, but, remembering the discussions that appeared in the trade journals in 1920-21 and the comment and criticisms emanating from these discussions, I felt that the public expression of views on association matters could not be conducive at this time to the best interests of this organization.

Vigilance Work.

"Under the aggressive direction of the chairman of the vigilance committee, vigilance work has developed to a degree that makes it indispensable to the A. A. N. The present practice of scrutinizing and investigating every application for membership in this organization makes it practically impossible for any nursery firm or person to gain membership unless his methods and business ethics have been up to standard. Thus the executive board takes care of all new members joining the association, while the vigilance committee looks after those that are already members of the association. Our vigilance committee has not confined itself to investigating complaints made against members of the A. A. N.; in fact, so far as I know, there has been little complaint along that line, but other people have been addressed by Paul Lindley and his assistants. His report on these matters will no doubt be illuminating. It is evident that the nurseryman who does not practice his business according to our standard of ethics does not apply for membership in this organization, and while it is perhaps outside of our jurisdiction to look after him, I am pleased to state that the vigilance committee has been most active in giving many of these fellows their most careful attention. Complaints to the vigilance committee are just a little interesting from a nurseryman's viewpoint because so many of them arise from victims being caught by misleading advertisements appearing in various papers and periodicals. Would it be out of place to suggest that vigilance work be directed just a little to those papers and periodicals whose columns are apparently open to questionable advertising?

State and Sectional Associations.

"The past year has seen the organization of several new sectional associations, and it is noticeable that every state and sectional association has been particularly active throughout the past winter. These activities, to my mind, augur great benefits to the nursery industry and are also powerful contributing agencies to the strengthening of the national organization. The sectional associations, embracing, as they do, many firms outside of the national body, quickly manifest the need for coöperation and team work among nurserymen if they can hope to successfully combat abuses in the trade or defeat vicious legislation. of a state or sectional nursery association who would lose his membership for many times its cost. These men readily recognize the need of a national body, and it is only a question of time until their application is sent in.

"I am firmly of the opinion that the future of the A. A. N. will be greatly influenced by the activities of local and sectional bodies, and the stronger the local association becomes, so will the national body. At the present time, there is not the proper relationship existing between the national association and sectional associations, and I suggest that a plan be worked out whereby every sectional association in the United States will take out an auxiliary membership in this organization, and that a board of secretaries embracing the secretaries of every sectional association be formed and recognized as a unit of this national body. The chairman of the board of secretaries could be appointed by the president of the national association, and I believe some effective work for the betterment of the industry could be brought about.

ing the past year in our attempt to bring about a reduction in freight rates on nursery products. We have succeeded in securing a ten per cent general reduction in freight rates, effective July 1, but this is not sufficient, for we are still overburdened with an excessive freight rate, which is, of course, reflected in the price we are obliged to charge for our products. Express rates are even more burdensome than freight rates, and instead of the service improving as the rates increase, we find in our section of the country the opposite to be the general rule. Freight deliveries during the past year have been more prompt and expeditious than for many years prior, but I am sorry I can not say the same of express deliveries. The question of lower express rates and lower freight rates should demand the attention of this convention and a concerted effort should be made to secure a more acceptable classification for fruit and ornamental tree shipments.

the Illinois Nurserymen's Association has created. What could be more appropriate or impressive than these words, 'Plant Another Tree'? Every man who owns a square rod of land should plant another tree. The expression is a beautiful one and carries with it a vision of nature's greatest possibilities. Here is a trademark and slogan that every nurseryman can profitably adopt. The three words are a whole lecture in themselves and indeed are most eloquent. I should like much to see a member of the Illinois Nurserymen's Association propose the adoption of this slogan and trademark for the American Association of Nurserymen.

Why Not Arbor Week?

"Practically every state, through its governor, sets aside a day called Arbor day and on this day public planting of trees takes place. It seems hardly sufficient that only one day be set aside for public tree planting. The nurserymen should agitate an Arbor week instead of an Arbor day. The florists put across Mothers' day. Why can not the nurserymen put across Buddies' Memorial Tree day, a day which every good American citizen will celebrate by planting somewhere a memorial tree to the memory of a world war veteran? I suggest that this be considered by our publicity, or market development committee.

nursery centers this spring indicates an almost complete clean-up of all surplus fruit trees and ornamentals. The usual surplus has been greatly reduced, and if reports are correct, the old hoodoo brush-pile has been conspicuous by its absence this past spring. Many lines of stock were extremely scarce, and on these prices were abnormally high; nevertheless, the demand seemed to increase as prices advanced. All of this indicates a promising market for the coming year and should afford no small degree of encouragement to the American grower. Conditions now prevailing Experimental Work at Bell.

"I wish to call your attention to the important work that is now being carried on at the governmental station at Bell under the direction of Professor Scott. A number of nurserymen, including myself, recently had the opportunity of visiting the station, and Professor Scott showed us what he was doing.

"I was particularly struck with his success with apple seedlings grown from root cuttings, also varieties of apples grown from root cuttings. Professor Scott will make a report on his work for the past year, and I am sure you will all be glad to hear it.

"The work at Bell is significant of the possibilities of further experimental work under governmental supervision. The appropriation at the present time does not permit of an extensive plan of experimental work, but it seems to me that the nurserymen should interest themselves in securing for this work larger appropriation. There is just $20,000 at the disposal of Professor Scott for his experimental work; he has made that go a long way. I believe if he had $10,000 or $20,000 more, he could make a most satisfactory showing. I recommend that the nurserymen undertake to

Charles Sizemore presented his reports as secretary and traffic manager. He said:

"In December and February we appeared before the interstate commerce commission, which was at that time conducting a general hearing regarding reductions in rates, and made a plea that if any reduction was granted, the nurserymen be included. We gave it as the opinion of the nurserymen that a percentage scale of reduction should be granted in the same manner that rates had been raised, instead of reducing certain commodities. The National Industrial Traffic League and just a few others took the same stand, and no doubt all of you saw the decision in the daily papers rendered by the commission in May, whereby a general reduction of ten per cent all over the country was ordered to be effective July 1.

"Since the above decision was rendered several hundred million dollars' cut in railroad labor has been ordered, and if this goes into effect, we feel confident that freight rates will come down again in the near future.

"For some time we have had the matter of second-class nursery stock up with the express company by correspondence and personally called on them in New York in February and discussed this question fully, but so far have not been able to get any encouragement that the old rating would be restored. The express officials advised us that railroad companies at the present time were only receiving about thirty-one per cent of express revenue for their service and that if the express company lowered or wanted to lower any rates the carriers had to be consulted or made vigorous protest against it. Inquiry among railroad traffic officials confirmed the above statement, but they frankly state that the kind of contract between the carriers and express company should not enter into the argument or protest between a shipper and the express company in any manner whatever.

"We are now preparing papers and compiling data on this question, and we expect to file a formal protest with the interstate commerce commission and see if this old rating cannot be restored. The present express classification provides second-class rating on many commodities that have as high or higher value than nursery stock and are more perishable, and we expect to bring this out at the hearing.

"In discussing this with one or two Prepayment of Freight.

"Some of the members in Iowa, Massachusetts, Missouri, Alabama and other states had the usual trouble this spring of having their shipments refused by the carriers unless all freight charges were prepaid, and when the matter was called to our attention we immediately took it up with interested carriers and had the trouble adjusted. Along this line we would like to call the members' attention to Consolidated Freight Classification No. 2, page 5, rule 9, section 2, which reads as follows:

Freight on which prepayment is required may, on approval of the general freight department of the carrier with which the freight originated, be forwarded on a guarantee of the shipper that all charges will be paid at destination.

"When handling nursery stock shipments few of the agents remember the above rule. Therefore, in future, if any of you should have this trouble, simply call the agent's attention to it and you should not have any further trouble, but if you do, write or wire us and we will take it up promptly. We have called attention to this matter in our Outside Tag.

"American Railway Express Co. general circular 4-B, section 1, states that all packages or boxes of nursery stock must show an outside tag giving a list of the contents of each package. This spring some of our members had their shipments temporarily refused or delayed by the express agent's demanding that they comply with the above ruling.

When the matter was called to our attention, we telephoned and wrote the headquarters of the express company at St. Louis and on a personal visit the next day discussed the above ruling thoroughly. We convinced them that the rule would work a severe hardship upon the nurserymen and be almost impossible to comply with. We further suggested to them that as only three states required that an outside tag should show the contents of the package, the general rule referred to should be amended to read something like the following:

Where certain states require that the package should bear an outside tag showing the nature of contents and quantity, such outside tag for nursery stock going into such states should show the contents and quantity.

"Under date of May 2 the general traffic manager of the American Railway Express Co., New York, wrote us in regard to this as follows:

Reply to your letter of April 10 has been delayed until I can make a little investigation of the subject matter.

Our sole purpose in requiring in our general circular 4-B that the nature of contents and quantity of nursery stock should be shown on the outside tag was to insure compliance with the various state laws which require that this be done, and we thought it would be simpler to make that a requirement as to all shipments rather than confine it to the states which specifically direct that it be done.

In view of what you say as to the annoyance and difficulty which it will make for the nurserymen, I am quite agreeable to amending it as suggested by you; that is, make the requirement only as to shipments destined to states which specifically require it.

It may be some time before we can get a supplement to these instructions in the hands of our agents, and meanwhile you are at liberty to make use of the information in this letter in any way that you see fit.

"This correction, or amendment, no doubt, will be taken care of in the next supplement to general circular or long before the next nursery season commences.

"During the year a few changes were made in the freight classification, which were in the nature of reductions on nursery stock shipments. One of these was in not dormant shrubs in crates, also in boxes or barrels less than carloads, for which up to this time no rating had been provided.

WM. P. YEAGLE, BRISTOL, PA.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

DISCARD HOT WATER HEATER.

The dimensions of my two greenhouses are 14x112 feet and 16x112 feet. There are twenty-four inches of glass in the south wall. The north wall is boarded up. The boiler room is at the west end of the houses and their east ends are glazed. The temperature desired is 45 to 50 degrees. How many 2-inch lines will be required to heat this house? I have a Furman water boiler, but think it is too small for the purpose. It has a fire box 12x30 inches, and there are eight sections. Lettuce will be grown and hard coal will be burned as fuel.

J. J. L.—Ind.

To heat a house 14x112 feet to 50 degrees in zero weather, it would be advisable to use two 2½-inch flow pipes on the side wall plates, connected at the farther end of the house with four 2-inch returns in two coils located either on the side walls or under the side benches. For the house 16x112 feet use an additional return.

From the description given it is impossible to determine whether each house is built by itself, or if they are constructed side by side with one wall in common. However, a 2-inch return should be added where there are two feet of glass in the side wall of the house.

A hot water boiler of the stated size would not be large enough for even one of the houses. For the two houses use a boiler about 24x30 inches, for hard coal, or 30x30 inches for soft coal, for the greatest economy of labor and fuel.

REARRANGING SYSTEM.

I have mailed you a sketch of a greenhouse, 35x120 feet, and eighteen feet to the ridge. There are four feet of glass in the south wall and five feet in the north wall, built upon two feet of concrete. Kindly note the proposed change, as indicated on the plan, and give us your opinion of the arrangement as it stands.

F. G. P.—Wash.

The plan referred to above appears to be of a house 35x120 feet, with the ridge eighteen feet in height. There are four feet of glass in the south wall and five in the north, built upon two feet of concrete. There are four lines of 1-inch pipe on the purlins, of which the two outer lines are supported by 1-inch pipe posts and the others by pipe trusses. The principal changes advised would be, so far as the construction of the house is concerned, to substitute 1½-inch purlin posts for the 1-inch posts indicated in the sketch. The present heating is done by means of four coils of 2-inch pipes and four 2-inch returns under the flow pipes in the coils. Each of the four coils consists of three returns, except the one on the exposed wall, which has four pipes. As we understand it, the changes proposed will consist of arranging the coils horizontally (all of the pipes side by side at the same level) instead of in vertical coils, as at present. There is little to be gained by this change and, in fact, vertical coils for the side walls would be preferable, these being less in the way.

Another change is in taking out the four 2-inch returns and substituting one main 4-inch flow overhead in the middle of the house, with 3-inch pipes to connect it with the coils at the farther end of the house. This will change the four coils from flows to returns and, unless they now run uphill from the boiler, it will be necessary to change the grade so that as returns they will run downhill.

Especially if the boiler pit is only one foot below the floor of the greenhouse, we think it advisable to elevate the pipes, and particularly the flows, as much as possible. To heat the house described to 50 degrees in zero weather will require over 1,500 square feet of radiation and this is rather more than can be handled to advantage by a 4-inch main. We should prefer to use five 2½-inch flow pipes and connect the flows at the farther end of the house with five coils, each containing five 2-inch pipes.

It is noted that the owner of the house lives in San Francisco. If the house is located near that city, there would be no necessity for planning radiation for zero weather, as is stated on the sketch, and in that case it is probable that four 2½-inch flow pipes, connected with four coils, each containing three 2-inch returns, would be ample. The flows as well as the returns should run downhill. One reason for using the five 2½-inch instead of one 4-inch pipe for the flows is that the water in small pipes will cool faster than in a large one and this will tend to improve the circulation. In case the flow pipes run uphill, large pipes will be better than small ones.

RAIN WHEN YOU WANT IT

Not only more blooms, but better.

Not only better blooms, but a longer blooming period.

Two Weeks Can Ruin Them Here's a Life Saver

You walk among your asters, glads, or dahlias, one week, and they are doing just fine. You figure they can't help but give you oodles of the finest of bloom. Then something happens.

The sun starts getting up a blazing yellow and going down a fiery red. He fairly pelts things with his hotness.

A withering south wind starts blowing. Your plants put up a plucky fight.

Then one night you wake up and hear rain patters on the roof. The smell of it comes into your room. You are happy and relieved. You turn over and sleep like a child.

Then for days you watch your plants, but find they don't quite come back. Finally you know they never will.

The mischief was done before the rain came.

Seems strange, doesn't it, that you would let dollars slip away from you like that when for so little as $79.75 you could have had one of our 200-foot Portable Sectional watering lines that would have given them a drink before it was needed instead of afterwards? Four moves of that line would have watered a whole acre.

Two men can move the whole thing and set it up and working in 20 minutes.

Exhibits.

Probably there has never been a convention of this association with more exhibitors in attendance. And there were plenty of visitors and others to look at these exhibits at all times. These were arranged in orderly fashion in the rooms opposite the Crystal room, where all the meetings were held. A few were on the next floor above.

The X. L. Mfg. Co., Chicago, occupied a corner with an assortment of its sprayers and plenty of literature describing them.

W. C. Heller & Co., Montpelier, O., showed a set of their mouse-proof seed cabinets.

The Pulverized Manure Co., Chicago, exhibited bottles and boxes containing its lines of fertilizer, including pulverized sheep manure, cattle manure, etc.

T. Sakata & Co., of Japan, with branches in the United States, had an assortment of photographs showing stock produced by them.

The O. & W. Thum Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., showed jars of the firm's Tree Tanglefoot and handed out neat pamphlets describing the method of applying it.

The W. G. Garrabrant Co., of Kansas City, Mo., displayed many specimens of the company's work in printing catalogues.

The Automatic Trap Co., Chicago, had on exhibition one mouse trap, with two good men to show its advantages.

The Gypsum Industries Association, Chicago, distributed pamphlets on "The How and Why of Agricultural Gypsum."

The Nitragin Co., Milwaukee, showed specimen containers of its soil-inoculator, and distributed literature about it.

R. C. McGill & Co., San Francisco, showed specimens of particular lines of onion seeds and sheep manure.

The Multitool Sales Co., Lansing, Mich., showed garden implements.

The Savo Mfg. Co., Chicago, had on display various models of the firm's subirrigating box.

AJAX BLACK GLAZING CEMENT

A PRACTICAL glazing material made for application in a practical manner. No clumsy, slow-working tools necessary—simply a putty bulber or two and a filling gun to load them—furnished free to users.

Ajax Black Glazing Cement has been used throughout the country for several years with excellent results.

CONTAINS NO COAL TAR

Our product is a cement-like composition of Asbestos Fibres and heavy, semi-drying hydro-carbon oils. Its exceptionally long life is due to the fact that it never thoroughly hardens like old-fashioned white putty. The outside surface (which is exposed to the oxygen of the air) forms a resilient, tough skin, below which the material remains soft and plastic. Because of this we guarantee that the coldest weather will not cause it to become brittle or pull away. On the other hand our product is warranted not to sag or run in extremely hot weather, due to its being interlaced with the Asbestos Fibres.

As Ajax Black Glazing Cement never thoroughly hardens, glass glazed with it can be shifted when desired without the loss of breakage that so often results when hard-drying white putties are used.

LOW COST

Compared with the old-fashioned White Lead putties, Ajax Black Glazing Cement not only lasts years longer, but is a great deal lower in initial cost. One gallon is sufficient to glaze 500 lineal feet of sash.

1 Gun for filling bulber

While primarily made to stop water leaks, so thoroughly does Ajax Black Glazing Cement hermetically seal up the sash, that it will soon pay for itself in the saving of heat that is otherwise lost through air voids. This fact has been demonstrated time and again, and we can prove it.

Easily applied with a bulber. No clumsy tools necessary.

hibited its disinfectant, which comes in cube form.

The Gilson Mfg. Co., Port Washington, Wis., had a power tractor on exhibition and much descriptive matter to show the implement's advantages.

Side Lights.

T. Sakata & Co. were on hand with neat cigarette cases for those fortunate enough to get there before the supply gave out. Robert C. Stubbins was in charge.

Henry Field, Shenandoah, Ia., well known grower of Hubam clover, stated that Iowa crops are in fine condition. This year, he said, he has 120 acres in old crop of the clover and twenty acres newly planted.

Harold King, of H. C. King & Sons, Battle Creek, Mich., reported that the Rosen rye crop at the firm's place was about the same as that of last year. Mr. King's father and brother were also in attendance.

Frederick T. Herbst, of Herbst Bros., New York city, stated that both he and his brother are now members of that firm.

Some came in motor. For instance, William Kuecker and his wife, of Fari-bault, Minn.

Lester L. Morse, of San Francisco, brought his son, Charles P. Morse, with him.

At the Thursday afternoon session the Benton Review Shop, Fowler, Ind., distributed neat 8-inch paper rulers.

Thursday afternoon a luncheon for the ladies was held at the Drake hotel. Taxis called at the Sherman hotel at noon and transported the guests to the Drake. In the afternoon a movie matinee was attended at the Chicago theater.

Some of the members took part in a golf game Tuesday afternoon, among them Clifford Corneli, St. Louis; Curtis Nye Smith, Boston; William G. Scarlett, New York; Robert Nicholson, Dallas, Tex., and C. D. Boyles, Chicago.

Several firms applied for membership in the association this year. These included the American Seed & Seed Tape Co., Madison, N. J.; J. Bolgiano Seed Co., Baltimore, Md.; Southern California Seed Co., Los Angeles; Ward Seed Co., Sacramento, Cal.; Wetsel Seed Co., Harrisonburg, Va.; Wedge Seeds, Albert Lea, Minn., and Tobin Seed Co., Kansas City, Mo.

The Albert Dickinson Co. was well represented at the convention. Nineteen of the staff came to attend the meetings of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association, and almost all of these stayed to attend the seedsmen's meetings. They were as follows: C. D. Boyles, George Hutchinson, C. Frank Wood, G. M. Davis, A. C. Hanson, H. J. Rankin, E. T. Bennett, Thomas Hunter and C. D. Potter, Chicago; E. F. Squires, Arthur Hageman, R. C. Chaapel and W. P. Smith, Buffalo, N. Y.; M. H. Duryea, New York, N. Y.; Harry Perkins, Baltimore; Carl Ranney, George Egginton and A. J. Zahorek, Minneapolis. W. P. Pfaender, the firm's commercial seed analyst, delivered an interesting paper at the Thursday afternoon session.

Canadian officials, from the department of agriculture of the Dominion of Canada, occupied a room on the mezzanine floor of the Sherman hotel and were "at home" to those seedsmen wishing a conference regarding the Dominion's seed laws.

THORO-MIX

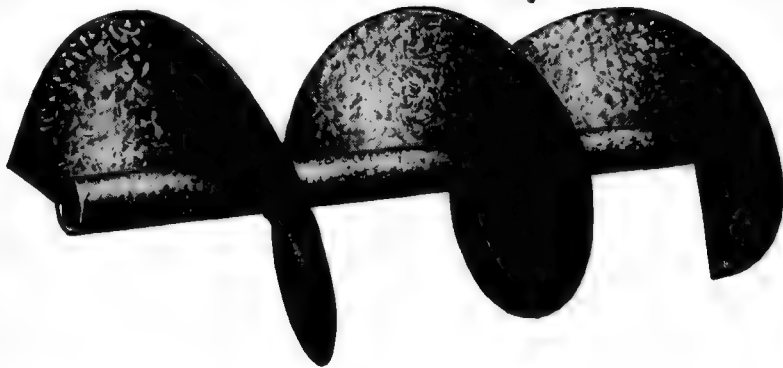

SOIL SHREDDER

Not in one locality on a particular kind of soil and under favorable conditions, but all over the United States and Canada under all sorts of conditions, Thoro-Mix is working for and pleasing all of these countries' leading florists, both large and small. Can you, Mr. Grower, in the face of these facts, delay longer the investigation of this machine? "Say it with Flowers"—but say it with better flowers—you can if you will put the THORO-MIX to work for you.

The Mixer and Conveyor

This large 16-inch spiral runs in a galvanized trough; performs the triple duty of pulverizing, mixing and conveying soil and manure to the beater at the rear of the machine. Does not this principle appeal to you as a practical one?

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The annual commencement exercises, with the attendant social functions and a number of weddings, made last week a busy one. The work was well divided, so that everyone had a good share. Funeral work, while slow, was up to the average for this season. As to the market, there can hardly be said to be any market, although prices are normal and there is a generally good clean-up each day.

Various Notes.

Ed. Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., is spending all of his spare time in salt water fishing, his summer home at Cedar Tree Point, on Greenwich bay, being handy to the grounds. He is already beginning to tell some good stories.

Samuel Resnick, of W. A. Bowers & Co., was a visitor in Boston last week.

William A. Bowers and family were absent last week on an automobile trip into Connecticut.

Joseph Koppelman is making a thorough overhauling of his houses near Riverside. Several innovations will be introduced before fall.

The Colonial Flower Shoppe was kept busy last week on weddings and small social gatherings.

Carl Lange and Harry Randall, of Worcester, were members of the big clambake party that attended the outing of the Worcester Advertising Club at Rocky Point, June 24. They were designated as the official "Dispensers of Bachelor's Buttons" and saw that every member of the crowd wore a boutonniere.

William Doel, of Pascoag, was a business visitor in this city last week.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Canning have gone to their summer cottage at Highland Beach for the season.

Johnston Bros. were extremely busy last week in connection with commencement at Brown University. Considerable wedding work also added to their activities.

W. H. M.

Fargo, N. D.—It has been announced that the Smedley Floral Co. will be known in the future as the Fargo Floral Co. The president of this firm is E. F. Lueth and E. F. Gestie is the secretary and treasurer.

GARLANITE, the New Putty-Colored Glazing Compound, is the result of years of experience and untiring effort to produce a PERFECT Glazing Cement.

GARLANITE, made in putty consistency for bedding and semi-liquid consistency for bulbing over the top, assures you of the utmost in Glazing Service. The beautiful Putty color, its elasticity and the ease with which it can be applied or removed when necessary to replace broken glass makes GARLANITE the most desirable of all glazing materials for both new and old work.

PERMANITE, of course, still leads the field of black materials.

WIZARD WITH A KICK IN IT!!

TRADE BRAND MARK

Sheep Manure with a kick in it! That's WIZARD BRAND because Wizard Brand is best quality Feeding Station and Stock Yard Sheep Manure. Not leached out, air-dried western corral manure with 15% to 20% moisture.

Wizard Brand is new, fresh stock, dried and sterilized by high-temperature direct-heat process that always makes a bone-dry, uniformly pulverized product: weed seed, fungus and disease germs destroyed, highly concentrated, always safe and dependable. The highest standard of quality in Pulverized Sheep Manure. Unequaled under glass or in the field.

Insist on WIZARD BRAND through your supply house or write us direct.

THE PULVERIZED MANURE CO., 33 Union Stock Yards, CHICAGO

BOSTON NOTES.

will be visited. Mr. Thommen has long wanted to make a tour of Florida and to do so in summer. He can be depended upon to write entertainingly of his experiences.

With Patten & Co., Tewksbury, some benches of Laddie are being carried over. About all other carnations are now thrown out and benches or beds are refilled ready for planting. A considerable number of benches have already been planted from flats. Natalie and Thomas C. Joy will be heavily planted here.

There will be no flower shows at Horticultural hall this year in July. The gladiolus show comes August 12 and 13, with the New England Gladiolus Society holding its exhibition at the same time. The show of children's garden products will come on August 26 and 27. At the peony show June 17 and 18 there were over 4,000 visitors, in spite of unfavorable weather.

The windows in Galvin's Park street store look cool and inviting these warm days. A display of nymphaeas and other aquatic plants, pleasingly arranged, always impels passers-by to stop and admire.

Rambler roses are wonderfully fine in and around Boston this season. Silver Moon is magnificent; so are Dr. Van Fleet, American Pillar and Christine Wright, all introductions of Dr. Van Fleet. Each year new rose gardens are being planted and it is interesting to note that more hybrid perpetuals than hybrid teas are being planted. This is as it should be, as the former are far more hardy and reliable.

Mrs. W. W. Edgar and daughters, Emily and Catherine, sail this week for an extended tour of Great Britain and the European continent. They expect to be home in September.

The Hingham Horticultural Society held a successful flower show in Loring hall, June 23 and 24. Roses, Canterbury bells, sweet williams, larkspurs and other seasonable flowers were well shown; also fruits and vegetables. W. N. Craig acted as judge and lectured before a large audience on the opening day.

A meeting of the Boston branch of the National Association of Gardeners will be held at Horticultural hall Friday evening, June 30, to discuss plans for the coming convention and matters pertaining to the association.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held an early summer show of roses, sweet peas and other seasonable flowers, as well as plants, fruits and vegetables, in Horticultural hall, Manchester, June 27 and 28. W. N. C.
